GOVERNMENT WILL NOT ACT AGAINST SIT-DOWN STRIKES, ROBINSON SAYS

No Case for Federal Intervention Has Arisen So Far, He Declares After Conference With President Roosevelt.

GARNER 'DEAF, DUMB AND BLIND'

Congressional Leaders, Bankhead and Rayburn, and Secretary of Labor Perkins Also at White House Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, said after a conference with President Roosevelt tonight, that no condition "has so far arisen" which would warrant Federal intervention in sit-down strikes.

The only strike situations in which Federal action might be invoked, he said, were:

1. Where Federal laws are violated and where Federal property is interfered with.

2. Where State authorities, under the Federal law, ask for the services of Federal agencies to preserve law and order and to prevent violence.

"Situation Improving."

Robinson said that except in instances where one of these conditions exists the Federal Government could not act under the Constitution or under a decree of courts.

"It is felt," he said, "that the sit-down strike situation in a general sense is improving."

Robinson made the statement after he and Vice-President Garner had talked for more than two hours with Mr. Roosevelt.

Garner had nothing to say about the conference except that he was "deaf, dumb and blind."

Congressmen at White House.

Returning after a two-week vacation at Warm Springs, Ga., the President called several party leaders to the White House for conferences.

Before Robinson and Garner called, Speaker Bankhead and Representative Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, House majority leader, conferred with the President for an hour.

Bankhead said only that the general legislation situation was discussed. He declined to say whether the conversation touched on sit-down strikes.

Bankhead and Rayburn prefaced their talk with the President with a two-hour meeting with Edward F. McGrady, Assistant Secretary of Labor. McGrady has participated in attempts to adjust strikes in Detroit's automotive industry.

As Miss Perkins Sees It.

Before meeting the Congressmen, the President called in Secretary of Labor Perkins to obtain a first-hand report on the strike situation.

She told reporters she had expressed to the chief executive a hope the Chrysler strike in Detroit would be adjusted shortly, adding that with that settlement the sit-down epidemic "at least will be on the wane."

Miss Perkins linked a possibility of amending the Wagner Labor Relations Act with mention of the fact that there had been considerable informal discussion of giving the Federal Government authority to cope with sit-down strikes. She, too, said there appeared little that the Federal Government could accomplish now because courts had held sit-down strikers were violating the law of trespass, "which is very much within state regulation."

GERARD TO HEAD AMERICAN DELEGATION AT CORONATION

War-Time Ambassador to Germany, Gen. Pershing and Others to Go to London.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The State Department announced today that James W. Gerard, war-time Ambassador to Germany, would head a delegation representing the United States at the coronation of King George VI in London May 12. Gen. John J. Pershing and Admiral Hugh Rodman, retired, will be the other delegates.

Curtis Bok, of Philadelphia, has been designated secretary of the mission and Col. James L. Collins and Commander Frank E. Beatty will act as aids to Gen. Pershing and Admiral Rodman.

Jerusalem Processions March to Christ's Tomb

Lamps and Candles Lighted With "New Fire" From Stone and Steel in Old Church of Holy Sepulchre.

By the Associated Press.

JERUSALEM, March 27.—Colorful processions and singing of Easter hymns marked the Easter Sunday celebration today at the place held by millions to have been the actual scene of Christ's resurrection more than 19 centuries ago.

Wearing a red cassock and red biretta, the Latin patriarch arrived at the vast old church of the Holy Sepulchre just after sunrise.

Dark since Good Friday in sign of mourning, the glow of scores of lamps and candles lighted from "new fire" struck with stone and steel flooded the church.

Throngs of worshipers, men and women of nearly every race and many of them from distant lands, stood in reverent silence as the patriarch blessed the fire flickering over the charcoal in a brazen bowl. It signifies the light of Christ's message entering the world.

Procession to Tomb.

The patriarch then donned an ermine cloak with a train of red silk. To a Te Deum sung by brown-robed Franciscan friars and black-cassocked canons of the Holy Sepulchre, he led a solemn procession to the tomb reverenced as that in which the body of Christ was placed after the crucifixion on nearby Golgotha.

A deacon, wearing gorgeous cloth of gold, blessed the paschal candle while chanting in Latin "The angelic choirs of Heaven rejoice."

He halted abruptly in the chant and every lamp and candle in the church was lighted swiftly from the new fire as he cried: "The light of Christ."

The worshipers responded as each new light appeared: "Thanks be to God."

The 12 prophecies were read by the deacon. The patriarch blessed the baptismal font. A long litany of saints followed.

At the consecration of the mass all the bells of the church began to ring.

Half-Masted Flags Raised.

Flags which had been at half-mast over consulates and other buildings throughout the city as a symbol of mourning were raised to full mast.

During the afternoon the Latin patriarch returned to the sepulchre to lead a procession three times around the tomb while the marchers sang Easter hymns.

The pontifical mass at the tomb, before which a great silver altar was erected late today, will be repeated with the procession on Easter Sunday, climaxing a week of profound pageantry in commemoration of the death and resurrection of the Son of God.

The Anglican Bishop of Jerusalem conducted services at the British war cemetery for those who fell fighting the Turks in the World War.

MUTUAL CONSENT MADE BASIS FOR DIVORCE IN ARKANSAS

Legislature Broadens 90-Day Law to Permit Decrees Without Unpleasant Charges.

By the Associated Press.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., March 27.—Arkansas, which enacted a 90-day divorce law in 1931, has broadened the statute to permit severance of marital ties without unpleasant charges. Divorce by mutual consent, without bickering over faults on either side of the marriage contract, is possible under an amendment just put into effect by the Legislature.

The new law provides that if a husband and wife have been separated for three years, either may go into court and obtain a final decree. The ground is the ninth offered by the statute for divorce. Under it, a man and wife can agree to disagree, amicably, and if the disagreement-agreement lasts three years, the marriage can be discarded with a minimum of legal procedure.

With "amicable" litigants, and particularly with non-residents making their homes in Arkansas for three months to obtain divorce, the "indignities" clause has always been the most popular. The courts have construed this charge to mean "unmerited reproach, rudeness, studied neglect or open contempt."

Free State Seizes Easter Lilies.

CORK, Irish Free State, March 27.—Easter lilies, offered for sale by the outlawed Irish Republican army, were seized today by police. Authorities had refused to issue permits for lily sales.

AMERICANS JAILED ON WAY TO SPAIN

13 Detained for Questioning With 5 Canadians Protest They Are Tourists.

By the Associated Press.

PERPIGNAN, France, March 27.—Asserting they were going to Spain as tourists, 13 Americans and five Canadians were jailed tonight for further questioning by French authorities as suspected volunteers to the Spanish Government army.

Accompanied by three Hungarians, two Irishmen and two Roumanians, members of the party asserted they arrived in France aboard the Queen Mary and Ile de France.

Later, they said, they went to Narbonne, were received by a Spanish anti-Fascist oficial, and departed on a small fishing boat for Spain. The French coast guard halted the boat.

Officials said the Americans had passports stamped "not valid for travel in Spain." They were led by an American who said he was Joe Ballet, 30 years old, of Cleveland, O. He protested the members of the party were going to Spain as tourists and not to fight.

The names of the others detained, their ages ranging from 20 to 34, as given by the authorities are:

Gene Kosesak, of Lorain, O.; Harold Blaksley, Toledo, O.; Vachel Blair, Cleveland, O.; Bela Wimmer, Welch; Joseph Fleischreger, Philadelphia; Lawrence Morton Frigman, New York City; Gaylord Carnel, New Brighton; Rudolph Loch, Bartlesville; Louis Gnepp, Philadelphia; Seymour Herman, New York City; William Wayland Borer, Philadelphia; Joe Farkasovski Morved; William Gordon, Montreal; Sundsten Tauan, Toronto; John Dendy, Toronto; Alexander MacClare, Montreal, and Peter Ambrosiak, Montreal.

Ballet, who wore a leather uniform, acted as spokesman, and told the rest of the men in the party not to talk.

FIRST NON-STOP FLIGHT MADE BETWEEN LIMA-BUENOS AIRES

Peruvian Army Officer Crosses Andes in 2000-Mile Trip Taking 13 Hours.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, March 27.—Peru's crack airman, Armando Revoredo, arrived here today, completing the first non-stop 2000-mile solo flight between Lima and Buenos Aires.

Revoredo, an aviation commander, landed his yellow monoplane at El Palomar Airport today, just 13 hours and 51 minutes after he left the Peruvian capital.

Revoredo, stepped from his plane showing little sign of fatigue after the hazardous flight, part of it over the Andes, to receive the congratulations of high Argentine army officers, and the Peruvian ambassador, Felipe Barreda Laos.

Revoredo made a non-stop flight in 1935 from Lima to Bogota, Colombia.

FIRE TRUCK HITS AUTO, BOY KILLED AND SIX INJURED

Three Firemen Thrown Off Machine After Collision at Intersection, Bystander Is Hurt.

9-YEAR-OLD VICTIM IN BROTHER'S CAR

Drivers So Dazed They Cannot Remember What Happened in Crash at Shenandoah and Nebraska

A 9-year-old boy was killed and six persons were injured when the truck of Hook and Ladder Co. No. 1 crashed into the side of an automobile at Nebraska and Shenandoah avenue at 2:30 p. m. yesterday. The boy, Anthony Hornacek, a pupil at the Immaculate Conception School, was in the car, which was driven by his brother, August Hornacek Jr., with whom he lived at 2751A Allen avenue. He died at City Hospital at 7:15 o'clock last night.

The truck was speeding west on Shenandoah from its engine house at 2413 McNair avenue, to a fire at 3015 Shenandoah avenue, when the Hornacek automobile crossed Nebraska in front of it. The truck demolished the car, then ran up on the northwest corner, striking a telephone pole and throwing off three firemen.

Those hurt and their injuries were: Paul Martin, 3005A Osage street, driver of the truck, wrenched spine and cuts; James Heidenry, 70-year-old acting captain of the fire company, 3523 Itaska street, cuts and bruises; Fireman Joseph Nuelle, 6216 Odell street, leg injuries, cuts and sprained right wrist; August Hornacek Jr., cuts and bruises; another brother, Joseph, 19, who also was riding with August, fractured right leg, cuts and bruises; Warren Stewart, 2229 Oregon avenue, a bystander, cut by flying glass. Martin and Nuelle were taken to Lutheran Hospital, the others to City Hospital.

The drivers, dazed, said they could not remember what had happened. Alex Wolff, 4041 Castleman avenue, told police he was driving west on Shenandoah when he heard the truck's siren behind him. He stopped his car, ran into the middle of Nebraska avenue, and motioned to Hornacek to stop, but Hornacek drove on by him, he said.

The fire in a rooming house, was extinguished after doing $300 damage.

FUR-LINED EASTER PARADE FOR MOST OF THE COUNTRY

Generally Fair but Cold Prediction for Large Part of United States, Even in South.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Weather men warned the public tonight that fur-lined finery would be in order for most of the country's Easter parades. Cold and generally fair weather was the prediction for a large part. Here and there forecasters predicted occasional snow.

In sections of the mid and far West freezing weather showed signs of abating slightly by Easter morning. Snow flurries threatened in Eastern mountain sections.

The Georgia forecaster could promise nothing better than 34 to 42 degrees for his State. In Arkansas and Northern Alabama there was a snowfall yesterday.

In New York City the outlook is for clear skies, but a temperature close to the freezing point. In the Pacific Northwest, the forecast was for normal temperatures, and for California mostly fair. In Chicago and vicinity the outlook was for abnormally cold weather. In Kansas City and Midwest states, the prediction was, cloudy but not quite so cold.

THREE PERSONS IN GOOD FRIDAY PROCESSION KILLED BY SHELL

Gibraltar Hears Warship Shelled Malaga as People Were on Way to Service.

By the Associated Press.

GIBRALTAR, March 27. — Foreigners who returned here tonight from Malaga, Spain, reported at least three persons were killed and many wounded when an unidentified warship shelled the insurgent-held seaport from the sea during a religious procession last night.

The ship, which they said was believed to be the Spanish Government battleship Jaime I, fired on the city as a procession was moving toward the Cathedral for a Good Friday night service.

The foreigners, visiting the southern Spanish seaport, promptly left the city for Gibraltar.

ASHURST BARS COMPROMISE ON COURT SCHEME

That Road Closed, Senate Committee Leader Says —Wants 'Clean Victory or Clean Defeat.'

END OF HEARINGS SEEN IN TWO WEEKS

Thinks Issue Will Be 'Fully Ripe' for Vote in Midsummer — 'Fruit Is Slightly Green Now.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Senator Ashurst (Dem.), Arizona, leader of the fight for the Roosevelt court remaking scheme, said tonight the road to compromise was closed.

With several opponents of the bill advancing compromise suggestions, generally in the form of constitutional amendments, Ashurt declared that none would be accepted.

Earlier in the day opponents discussed a suggestion that they go to the White House in a body to see if the President cannot be persuaded to accept one of the proposals.

But, said Ashurst, "the President should not and will not make any changes in his own plans." For himself, he added:

"Never shall it be said that I slipped through the meshes of a compromise. I am against compromise. I want a clean victory or a clean defeat."

Substitution "Impossible."

Ashurst, celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of his entrance to the Senate, sat at his desk today and with gestures and metaphors answered questions about the status and prospects for the bill.

It will be impossible, first of all, he said, for the opposition to propose in committee that a constitutional amendment be substituted for the President's bill. The rules of parliamentary procedure forbid, he added.

"The bill must first be voted up or down," he added, "then they are at liberty to bring up any constitutional amendment they desire. But there must first be hearings on them.

"Along toward Saturday, April 10, two weeks hence," he said, "I think the hearings will close. Of course with the understanding that if a Senator wants a citizen to be heard, that citizen will be heard. But I think two more weeks will wind them up."

"More Votes in July."

Although barring compromises, he disclaimed any intention of "ramming anything down anybody's throat. Ample time for thorough consideration will be given," he said.

"I court delay," he added. "Time is my invincible ally. There will be more votes for the bill in May than in April, more in June than in May and more in July than in June. I am not afraid to have the searchlights played upon it for weeks.

"A man with time as his ally, would have a leaky brain pan to hurry along a matter in which time is fighting for him all the time."

Here he dipped into his storehouse of metaphor.

"Why pick a fruit that is now slightly green, when in mid-summer it will be fully ripe," he said. "When the vote is finally taken, it will be as though we are on a ship sailing majestically into port. So why should we jump overboard and try to swim ashore now."

How the opposition would react to an effort to close the hearings two weeks hence, remained to be seen. All its leaders would say tonight was that they had many witnesses yet to be presented. It would take a month at least, they thought.

Social Security Ruling Urged.

The administration filed a brief in the Supreme Court today asking for a speedy ruling on constitutionality of the Federal Social Security Act. Solicitor-General Stanley Reed requested a review of a case filed by the Charles C. Steward Co. of Alabama in an effort to recover $46 paid as unemployment insurance taxes.

This increased the probability that a final decision on two administration laws will be forthcoming before the Justices adjourn for the summer early in June.

The administration's radio campaign for the bill was aided by the Governors of four Southern States. Leche of Louisiana, Graves of Alabama, Rivers of Georgia and Johnston of South Carolina, urged enactment of the bill as the simplest and best method of resolving the conflict between court decisions and administration desires.

GRAND JURY CALLS NEW PROSECUTOR INTO VICE INQUIRY

Asks Attorney-General to Act in San Francisco, After District Attorney Tells of Debt.

HIS NOTE FOR $1100 HELD BY BAIL BROKER

Latter's Concern Called 'Fountain-Head of Corruption' in Report on Police Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27. — The County grand jury today heard District Attorney Matthew A. Brady's explanation of an asserted "obligation" to a central figure in the San Francisco vice investigation and then asked State Attorney-General U. S. Webb to take over the whole inquiry. Grand Jury Foreman James J. Gartland issued a statement, saying the request for action by Webb was "pursuant to the request" of Brady.

The statement asked Webb to take charge, "with the assistance" of Brady, and said the Prosecutor had offered to help the Attorney-General "in any way possible."

Brady, until now ex-officio head of the investigation, told reporters he informed the grand jury he had executed a "note or contract," 23 years ago, for $1170, to purchase an automobile, but never paid money to or received money from Peter J. McDonough.

McDonough is head of a bail bond firm which Brady's undercover investigator, Edwin N. Atherton, termed "a fountainhead of corruption" in an asserted $1,000,000 a year graft "take" from prostitution and gambling.

Denies Any Obligation.

Brady made public a letter to Webb denying any obligation to McDonough and asking the Attorney-General to give him "assistance" in the inquiry. Webb said it was his offhand opinion that the grand jury action did not "suggest the disqualification of Brady." He added that it would take some time for his office to step into the role of graft investigation leader, but he did not indicate whether he would take over the job.

Judge George J. Steiger, who ordered that the Atherton report be made public, also asked Webb to take over prosecution of the graft investigation.

Judge Steiger had directed Brady to appear before the grand jury after he questioned the Prosecutor about charges made by Eddy Martin, automobile salesman. Martin said Brady gave his note for $1170 in 1914 to McDonough to obtain funds for a new car. Brady, Prosecutor here for 20 years, angrily denying the accusation, declared he gave the note to Martin and that Martin assigned it to McDonough.

Admission to Judge.

To Judge Steiger, Brady admitted existence of such a note on which he said he had been unable to make payments but denied "any obligation, moral or legal to McDonough."

"I told Brady that, although the note may be legally outlawed, a moral obligation may remain," Judge Steiger said. "I believe I am doing the fair thing by calling the grand jury and directing Brady to tell his story under oath. I will also give the jury both sides of the question by putting Martin on the stand."

The Judge said yesterday he questioned Brady's fitness to conduct the inquiry and told him "this is a serious business and that he had better think it over and return to see me before the grand jury meets."

"Let Brady and Martin fight it out," was McDonough's reply to questioners. Under California law a promissory note becomes uncollectible four years after falling due, if no payments are made.

Denial By Mayor's Aid.

Maurice Rapheld, secretary to Mayor Angelo J. Rossi, today denied published reports indicating he had been under financial obligation to McDonough. In a public statement, Rapheld said he and McDonough met socially until about 15 years ago and that, in the course of their friendship, he might have accepted a small "overnight loan," but that any obligation thus contracted was discharged long ago.

The grand jury also heard Martin, the automobile salesman, but he declined to disclose what he had told the grand jury.

Atherton's report, which resulted in the dismissal or resignation of several police officers, recently led to the disclosure that McDonough held a $20,000 obligation of Police Commissioner Thomas E. Shumate. Shumate resigned. In a recent speech, Atherton predicted his re-

NEW YORK HERALD TRIBUNE BARRED INDEFINITELY IN ITALY

Order Says Recent Articles on Spanish and Balkan Situations Were False.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 27. — The New York Herald Tribune was barred from Italy today for an indefinite period. The order said recent articles from the newspaper's Rome correspondent were "false and stupid."

The Ministry of Propaganda asserted recent dispatches from the paper's Rome correspondent were inaccurate. It added, however, that no action was contemplated against the correspondent, John T. Whitaker.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27. — The following statement was issued today by Grafton Wilcox, managing editor of the New York Herald Tribune, in connection with a Rome dispatch that the newspaper had been barred from Italy for an indefinite period:

"The New York Herald Tribune has faith in the integrity and ability of its Rome correspondent, Mr. John T. Whitaker, whose recent dispatches have attracted attention because of their frank presentation of developments relating to the Spanish and Balkan situations.

"Mr. Whitaker has long been known to the Italian Foreign Office. He was the first American newspaper correspondent admitted to Eritrea at the outset of the Italo-Ethiopian war and recently accompanied Premier Mussolini on his trip to Libya."

CONGRESSMAN FOCHT DIES SUDDENLY IN WASHINGTON

Pennsylvanian Taken Ill After Dining; Had Suffered From Heart Disease.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Representative Benjamin F. Focht, of Lewisburg, Pa., died here tonight. Attendants said Focht was taken to the Emergency Hospital in a taxicab and was dead upon arrival. His secretary, Miss Lottie Stetler, with whom he had been dining at a hotel, took him to the hospital.

Dr. George W. Calver said Focht had been suffering from heart disease.

Focht, a Republican from the Eighteenth Pennsylvania District, began his service in 1907 as a member of the Sixtieth Congress. The present was his tenth term but he had not served consecutively. He was 74 years old. His widow, a son and a daughter survive.

Actor Confesses Robbing Her When Her Guest and Pawning Loot for $350.

PALM SPRINGS, Cal., March 27. —Alexander Howard Cross Cann, 36 years old, motion picture character actor, was arrested here today on a charge of stealing $6000 in jewelry from Mrs. Alma Walker Hearst, divorced wife of William Randolph Hearst Jr.

Deputy Sheriff Charles F. Morrison said Cann admitted he took the jewelry when a house guest of Mrs. Hearst March 19 and pawned it in Hollywood for $350. Morrison quoted him as saying he had lost on horse races.

LOYALISTS BATTLING REBELS AT TWO POINTS

Hold Ground in Severe Fighting to Retain Mercury Mines in Pozoblanco Sector; Insurgents Report Taking Watershed.

NEW MIAJA OFFENSIVE BEGUN IN AVILA AREA

Easter Gaiety in Madrid, Despite Air Attack; Bombs Dropped on Many Towns; Government Flyers Retaliate.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, March 27. — Government troops and Insurgents are fighting desperately over the rich mercury mines of Almaden, in the Pozoblanco sector, the Government to retain possession of them and the Insurgents to take them. The product of the mercury mines is used in making shells. The Pozoblanco sector is about 150 miles south of Madrid.

Gen. Jose Miaja, the Government commander, who has sent his men in hard attacks at the enemy since he took complete charge in Central Spain recently, also had a new column moving westward today toward Airis, which is some 50 miles west of Madrid. That force reached a point near Navalperal de Pinares, 15 miles east of Avila, and shelled the town throughout the morning.

Conflicting Reports.

Conflicting reports were made from the Pozoblanco sector tonight. Government troops clung to positions on that front, their commanders said, after they had withstood an Insurgent charge in which hundreds of the attackers were killed. Dispatches to Madrid related that Government militiamen held the ground they had gained in the last two days' offensive, in the face of a severe onslaught by Insurgent tanks and airplanes, and that the battle raged for hours before the Insurgent fighters, reinforced by soldiers from Seville, finally fell back to former positions.

On the other hand, correspondents with the Insurgent Army said the Insurgents, driving across the western part of the Sierra Morenas, smashed successfully against Government lines and won control of the mountain watershed. The Insurgents are reported by Government sources to include 10,000 Italians.

Fighting in Pozoblanco.

The mercury mines in the past have sent exports throughout the world and produced a rich annual income. In percentage of mercury they are the world's richest, for years before the civil war, they were operated in conjunction with an Italian mining trust. The present Spanish Government now sells the mines' output on its own account, principally to France and England. The income has been approximately 50,000,000 pesetas a year. (The nominal value of the peseta is 5.89 cents.)

Ciudad Real province also contains Spain's second richest coal field, producing nearly 1,000,000 tons a year.

For months General Franco's troops have menaced the Pozoblanco front. Six weeks ago he began a new offensive, which carried his line almost to Pozoblanco itself. There the fighting settled down to trench and hill warfare. It became so bitter that no truce could be arranged to collect the dead. "No man's land," in some places only 600 feet wide, became littered with bodies.

While withstanding repeated insurgent assaults, Government officers quietly added reinforcements to their ranks for a counter-offensive. Thursday at dawn they went over the top. One strong body advanced against the Insurgents from Pozoblanco, pushing them back eight miles toward Alcaracejos on the road leading west. The other force advanced on Hinojosa del Duque, moving five miles eastward, in an attempt to catch the Insurgents in a vise. Two other columns have attempted to squeeze off the Insurgents and force them to withdraw southward toward Espiel. The Insurgents replied with today's attack toward Pozoblanco.

Think Tide Is Turning.

Miaja's offensive warfare has given Madrid's soldiers and populace confidence that the tide of war is turning. For months the Insurgents have lain at the very gates of Madrid without taking the

GREEN OPENS DOOR TO C I O UNIONS IF MAJORITY RULES

A. F. L. President Declares That His Organization Will Never Accept Autocratic Control.

ADDRESSES IRON WORKERS HERE

Declares Issue Between Bodies Is Democratic Procedure or Minority Control.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in an address here yesterday afternoon, held the door of the parent organization, open to the unions affiliated with the rival organization, the Committee for Industrial Organization, on condition that the majority opinion shall rule.

Green, speaking at Hotel Jefferson at a meeting of organizers and officers of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron workers, who are beginning a campaign to extend their organization among employes of the structural steel fabrication plants, asserted the position of the American Federation with reference to the C I O unions was: "Here is the house of labor. The door is open. It is a united family. You can come in and live with us and settle our problems within the family by a majority vote, but never under any consideration can you force this family to accept an autocratic control."

The president of the A. F. L. who emphasized his points by thumping his fist on the table at which he stood, repeated that the issue between the C I O and the parent organization was whether minority control or democratic procedure should prevail.

"Can he who loses in a fair fight go out and set up an organization to force us to accept its decision?" Green asked. Answering his own question, he declared that the American Federation of Labor would never allow "any man to set himself up as a king in the labor world." At no time in his speech did Green mention the name of John L. Lewis, leader of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Calls CIO Disruptive.

Swinging into a denunciation of the C I O leaders, Green told the iron workers that "labor united is a power, a power in proportion to its unity," and added in a shout, "then what must be the relationship of these men to the labor movement when they deliberately launch a movement to separate us into factions?"

"Can those men be regarded as real friends of labor?" the speaker asked. "The employers who would destroy have said 'you divide and we will conquer.' Can we believe that a man, or men, who would tear labor asunder are friends? No man can deceive me. Those who are trying to tear labor asunder will some day have to answer to the members of labor."

The American Federation of Labor, Green declared, stands for the principles of democratic control and does not advocate "strange economic philosophies or establish common accord with Communists."

"There is not one Communist on our payroll," he declared, "and there never will be. We are fighting for more than the preservation of an economic philosophy, we are fighting for the preservation of the guarantees of the Constitution of the United States, freedom of the press, freedom of speech and freedom of religious observance. The American Federation of Labor is fighting for the preservation of a rule by the majority and is a barrier to dictatorship and autocratic control."

"Base Ingratitude."

The C I O union group are "the creatures of the American Federation of Labor," Green asserted. They were chartered by the Federation, which, Green said, spent $200,000 to organize the United Automobile Workers. Green charged the automobile workers with "base ingratitude" but added that he could only believe that "men with a consuming ambition" prevailed on them to leave.

When the Federation went into the automobile industry it found that certain craft unions existed but that the great mass of assembly line workers were non-union. "And the man who is now president of the automobile workers' union (Homer Martin) was one of these latter," Green added.

Industrial unionism is not new to the American Federation of Labor, the leader of the parent organization declared. Green, a former mine worker, said the Federation had granted the United Mine Workers an industrial union charter 25 years ago.

"We didn't get that from the C I O," he shouted.

The Federation granted the automobile workers an industrial union charter, "and they have no other charter today," he added. The printing trades tried industrial unionism, about 20 years ago, he said, "but it didn't work."

"The highly skilled photo-engravers were neglected in the fixing of wage scales," the speaker explained.

Laying It on the C I O

WILLIAM GREEN

"Would you steel workers want a street sweeper to fix your wage scale?"

To Issue Statement.

Green promised to issue a statement in the near future "which will make plain the attitude of the American Federation of Labor on the question of certain new experiments such as we saw in the automobile strikes." He later told reporters he was referring to the sit-down strike tactic, but he declined to discuss sit-down strikes while here.

Green likened the C I O movement to "the Debs movement, which challenged the railroad brotherhoods, the Industrial Workers of the World, who swept across the country like a windstorm, and to the 'one big union' movement. All of this we remember only by name now. It seems that periodically we must go through these reforms in religion, politics and the labor movement."

The "poor old American Federation of Labor" is composed of 102 international unions, 800 city central bodies, 48 state federation of labor and many local unions not affiliated with any international, Green stated. "And some people are sorry for us," he exclaimed.

Green promised the iron worker organizers the assistance of a Federation organizers in their respective fields, "each a veteran of the wars, a general who has won his spurs in battle. No stone will be left unturned, we will carry the fight on until it is successful, go forth in the true spirit of organized labor," he told the organizers.

Iron Workers Close Meeting.

The two-day meeting of the iron workers closed last night. The union, which claims a membership of 25,000 structual and ornamental iron workers, is spending $500,000 and sending out 100 paid organizers to extend and defend its jurisdiction in the fabrication plants against encroachment by the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee of the C I O. P. J. Morrin, of St. Louis, international president of the iron workers, said he expected his organizers to enlist 100,000 steel plant workers.

Discussing his recent request that central labor bodies reaffirm allegiance to the Federation, Green said this did not necessarily mean the ouster of affiliated C I O unions, which are "tolerated" in Federation central bodies. Each instance would be dealt with locally, he stated. The Central Trades and Labor Union of St. Louis will receive the recommendation of its executive committee on the question today. There are four C I O unions in the Central Trades.

20 Policemen Now Out.

Atherton's report has led to the resignation or dismissal also of 20 policemen. The report said prostitution in San Francisco was widespread and that Mayor Rossi, Shumate and others tried to stop his inquiry.

Raids ordered several days ago by Mayor Rossi continued yesterday. Eleven men and 62 women were arrested in raids on handbooks.

FRENCH GENERAL DIES AT 98

Justin Tisseyre With Maximilian in Mexican Adventure.

PERPIGNAN, France, March 27. —Justin Tisseyre, 98-year-old dean of French army generals, died of pneumonia today at Sournia, a little French village near the Spanish border.

He took part in Emperor Maximilian's Mexican adventures, and campaigned in many far corners of the world. When he retired in 1913 he was commander of the Seventeenth Army Corps at Toulouse.

LOYALISTS BATTLING REBELS NEAR AVILA AND IN POZOBLANCO

city and, finally, Government troops have begun to win victories.

But while the Easter week-end became, partly as a result of these victories, one of near gaiety in Madrid, Insurgent bombers struck at various points throughout Spain. Madrid's populace was thrown into a momentary flurry at noon when a shell crashed into a building on the Gran Via, the principal thoroughfare. It sent debris into the street, but failed to cool the gaiety of the militiamen home from the front for Easter. Gen. Miaja took advantage of the comparative quiet in Madrid to go to the dentist.

Insurgents also loosed projectiles on Alcala de Henares, 20 miles east of Madrid, with apparently telling effects. Communications with Madrid were cut. Insurgent aircraft dropped a dozen bombs into the harbor of Musel, on the Bay of Biscay, attempting to wreck Government vessels blockaded there. Two ships were damaged and several dock workers were wounded.

Belated accounts from Alcazar de San Juan, southeast of Madrid, said 20 were killed and 50 injured in an Insurgent air attack Friday.

Government pilots retaliated in bombing the towns of Siguenza and Almadrones, northeast of Madrid; the city of Huesca, far to the northeast and Insurgent positions in several sectors.

Bombs Near American Hospital.

An American war hospital at Albacete barely escaped Insurgent bombs during an air raid Wednesday night, said reports reaching Madrid tonight.

Planes dropped 15 bombs in a field near the hospital, some falling within 300 yards of the building, in which Dr. Edward Barsky and a group of American surgeons and nurses were attending patients.

The hospital was not hit. There were no injuries, although some of the patients were shaken up.

WITH SPANISH INSURGENTS ON THE CORDOBA FRONT, March 27.—Cavalrymen and veteran infantrymen of the Insurgent southern army struck through mountain passes today at Government forces defending Cordoba province's valuable mercury mines and drove them back.

Pushing across the western edge of the Sierra Morenas, the Insurgents—units of Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano's army which captured coastal Malgada—attacked successfully around Pozoblanco. They seized the mountain watershed. (Government officers at Andujar, on the Cordoba front, said Insurgents, attempting to regain lost ground, were beaten back.)

Government officers, realizing the threat to their entire southern front and to the mercury mines, rushed troops to the Pozoblanco region. Gen. de Llano's officers declared several Government counter attacks had been repulsed. Insurgent bombers for weeks have been dropping explosives on Government supply trains, railroads and highways in the Pozoblanco region.

The Government attempted to use tanks in that sector, but found them ineffective on the rugged slopes of the Sierra Morenas, where bands of Insurgent cavalrymen, armed with hand grenades, captured several.

A month ago a tour of the region between Seville and Toledo disclosed practically no activity. Today the Pozoblanco region, roughly halfway between those two cities, is teeming with troops.

WORKERS MOVE AGAINST CHRYSLER UNDER LABOR ACT

U A W A Asks Court to Require Him to Recognize Union as Sole Bargaining Agency.

By the Associated Press.

LANSING, Mich., March 27.—The degree of recognition to be accorded the United Automobile Workers of America continues to be the obstacle in the way of an agreement between Walter P. Chrysler and John L. Lewis to return more than 80,000 workers of the Chrysler Corporation and related industries to work.

Chrysler and Lewis abandoned plans to leave Lansing over Sunday. A source close to the conference said this was considered to signify they had hopes of an early settlement. A report outside the conference room was that one proposal under consideration was for the Chrysler Corporation to recognize the United Automobile Workers of America as the collective bargaining agent for its own members and refrain from recognizing any other group, but this lacked any official confirmation.

Union Makes Court Move.

While the two were in conference here today, attorneys for the striking union asked Circuit Judge Allan Campbell at Detroit to issue a mandatory injunction requiring the Chrysler Corporation to recognize the union as sole bargaining agency in its automobile plants.

Filing a cross bill to the Chrysler petition on which Judge Campbell on March 15 enjoined sit-down strikers from occupying the corporation's factories, the union asked that Chrysler be restrained from violating the National Labor Relations Act, which provides that a majority membership in any plant entitles a union to exclusive bargaining representation. A Supreme Court ruling on the act's constitutionality is impending.

The cross bill was filed by Maurice Sugar, U A W A attorney, who argued unsuccessfully at the time the sit-down injunction was issued that the Chrysler Corporation, by violating the Wagner Act, had not come into the court with "clean hands."

Waiting on Conference.

Sugar said the counter-move would be held in abeyance pending the outcome of strike settlement conferences between Chrysler and Lewis. "If Chrysler does not agree to recognize the U A W A, we are prepared to call the cross bill up for court hearing," he said. "We think we are right and we believe we are entitled to the relief under the law."

The U A W A cross bill charges that the corporation spent $275,000 in four years for "labor spies;" that it fostered "company unions" in opposition to the U A W A; that it discharged thousands of employes for union activities, and that it has refused to comply with the National Labor Relations Act by recognizing the U A W A as sole bargaining agency although a majority of the employes are union members.

Among specific charges is an allegation that the Chrysler Corporation last fall "discharged 3000 members of the United Automobile Workers in direct violation of the seniority rules under which the corporation presumed to be acting."

What Motion Calls For.

The injunction requested would enjoin the Chrysler Corporation from violating terms of the Labor Act in relation to the U A W A membership; employing "any person, corporation, firm or agency . . . to spy upon any employes."

It would forbid interference with any employes in the exercise of their rights under the Labor Act, particularly the right to join the U A W A and engage in its activities, including collective bargaining.

It would enjoin interference with the formation or administration of the U A W A and forbid "dominating or contributing financial or other support to any labor organization" of the employes.

Also, it would enjoin discrimination against any employes "in order to encourage membership in any labor organization, or to discourage membership in the United Automobile Workers of America," and "refusing to bargain with the United Automobile Workers of America as the exclusive representative of all employes for the purpose of collective bargaining in respect to rates of pay, wages, hours of employment or other conditions of employment."

Paralleling the corporation's prayer for a levy of $10,000,000 against the "goods and chattels" of the strikers for violation of its injunction, today's cross bill says that the amount in controversy is "incapable of accurate measurement but is many millions of dollars." It asks for no monetary penalty.

Chrysler and Lewis in Two More Conferences.

Chrysler and Lewis met in two more conferences today in the office of Gov. Frank Murphy. The Governor reported them getting "closer together," and added that he was "sure an agreement will be signed." He would not indicate, however, just how soon an accord might be expected.

At the close of the first meeting today, Gov. Murphy said: "Progress is being made; everything is satisfactory."

The second conference late tonight adjourned until 1 p. m. tomorrow.

Gov. Murphy said that, because of a bituminous contract conference in NewYork, Lewis, also president of the United Mine Workers of America, would have to leave Lansing tomorrow night. In event the strike has not been settled by then, he said, the conference will be recessed until midweek, probably reconvening Wednesday. He said Chrysler also probably would leave the city during the recess.

BOSTON A. F. L. JOINS C I O IN ASSAILING DR. LOWELL

In Wires to Roosevelt, They Question His Good Faith in Demanding End of Strikes.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, March 27.—The Massachusetts Federation of Labor and the New England Committee for Industrial Organization tonight questioned the good faith of Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell and six other Bostonians who demanded the Government suppress sit-down strikes.

The A. F. L. and C I O bodies spoke in similar tones through telegrams to President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Vice-President John N. Garner, respectively.

Secretary Robert J. Watt signed the first, and Chairman Thomas F. Burns and Secretary Powers Hapgood the second.

Dr. Lowell, president emeritus of Harvard University, and the six others last night telegraphed to Garner and the United States Senate that the problem of sit-down strikes "is rapidly growing beyond control" and "armed insurrection—defiance of law, order and duly elected authority—is spreading like wildfire."

Both telegrams by the labor groups, punctuated with words like "financial bourbons" and "Brahmin mouthpiece," charged Dr. Lowell spoke of defiance of law and forgot, they said, that Harvard university for eight years defied the Massachusetts minimum wage law by paying its scrub women 35 cents an hour, or less than decreed by State law.

CLEVELAND, March 27.—A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, credited to an "anvil chorus" today the demand of Dr. A. Lawrence Lowell, Harvard president emeritus, and other prominent Bostonians for Federal action to halt sit-down strikes.

"We urge the Government to follow dictates of the people and not hearken to the babblings of the anvil chorus," Whitney said in a telegram to President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner.

ITALY SAID TO PROMISE TO KEEP OUT OF SPAIN

Assurance No More Volunteers Will Be Sent "Unless Other Nations Do So Again" Reported Given to Britain.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, March 27.—The Italian Government, disclaiming any intention of violating the non-intervention agreement, was declared by informed persons today to have assured Great Britain it will refrain from sending more volunteers to Spain.

This assurance, reported delivered by Count Dino Grandi, the Italian Ambassador, to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden in London, was qualified in Government circles to include the statement: "Unless other nations start to do so again."

"Divisions, like battleships, are always in readiness for any eventuality, but there is no intention of sending them to Spain," official spokesman said.

The Spanish Government at Valencia has charged that upward of 30,000 Italian troops are fighting in insurgent ranks. Italy has denied that any regular Italian troops are in Spain, saying that only volunteers are fighting for Franco.

Large numbers of Italians have been routed in recent engagements northeast of Madrid. In Italy, however, the average person believes everything is going well with the insurgents, the press presenting a rosy picture of their "victories."

The authoritative Giornale D'Italia, in a London dispatch concerning conversations between British diplomats and French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos on nonintervention in Spain, said:

"It seems Delbos took a heroic decision to brandish the sword after learning from London Tuesday that the British Government considered as very grave the situation created by Grandi's declaration that no Italian volunteers would leave Spain before the war ended.

"Had Delbos consulted the French Ambassador in London, he would have been informed that tranquilizing assurances had already been received from Rome."

The newspaper added that Delbos suggested to the German Ambassador in Paris that Reichsfuehrer Adolph Hitler uses his "moderating influence" with Premier Benito Mussolini, and that Hitler had responded with a proposal that Great Britain use "moderating influence" on France.

SURVEY ON MACHINE REPLACEMENT OF MEN

20 Pct. More Production Needed to Meet 1929 Employment, W P A Says.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—W P A research workers said today that so many labor-saving machines and methods have developed in the last eight years that business would have to boost its production 20 per cent above the 1929 volume to reduce unemployment to 1929 figures.

Corrington Gill, acting W P A administrator, said the report emphasized anew the necessity of keeping in touch with thechnological trends so that the Government may help workers "who find themselves without a source of income as a result of industrial, economic and social change." He suggested Government facilities for this purpose.

Such information, made available to labor, industry, the general public and governmental and private agencies, would suggest adaptations in hiring policies, dismissal wages, hours of work, retraining, employment office programs, unemployment insurance, relief and other forms of social security," he added.

The report was submitted to Gill by David Weintraub and Harold Posner after a research survey.

Gill viewed the present discussion of labor-saving devices as a continuation of the controversy that was started in England during the industrial revolution.

"Our economic system has not evinced an ability to make the necessary adjustments fast enough," he said. "It may, therefore, be expected that the dislocations caused by technological progress will continue to present serious problems of industrial, economic and social readjustment."

The report includes charts which showed that even during the relatively prosperous 1920s there was substantial unemployment.

"Unless production in all types of services increases considerably and keeps pace with technological change, we are faced with a permanent unemployment situation," Gill said.

SENATOR DAVIS SAYS PENSIONS FOR THE AGED ARE TOO LOW

Asserts Payments Should Begin Sooner, Thus Eliminating Reserve Problem.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 27.—Senator James J. Davis (Rep.), Pennsylvania, tonight advocated more generous payments to aged persons than are provided under the Social Security Act, and asserted his plan would eliminate the problem of a huge reserve.

He estimated a fund of 40 or 50 billion would be built up within the next 40 years under the present plan.

"I think the old age benefits . . . should average as high as $25 or $30 a month, even in the early years. In fact, I would like to see the payments more," he said in a radio speech.

"If we begin the payments a little sooner and make them adequate in the early years, then the problem of a huge reserve will not arise and we can distribute more to our present workers. . . . We don't want the people of the present day to carry the load for another generation. Experts say a reserve of between five and ten billions is sufficient."

LOST IN MEXICAN JUNGLE

By the Associated Press.

GILMAN, Ill., March 27.—Relatives have asked the United States Consular Service to direct search for Mr. and Mrs. Russell Stephenson, missing in Mexican jungle for more than six weeks.

The Stephansons were last heard from Feb. 13, when they chartered an airplane at Acapulco for a 400-mile flight into the jungle on a hunt for jaguars. Mrs. Stephenson's father is F. I. Mann of Gilman.

WHEELER FOR PEOPLE DECIDING COURT ISSUE

One of Three Horses In Government "Wants to Get In Driver's Seat."

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, March 27.—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Democrat of Montana, said today he was "in accord with President Roosevelt's efforts to secure economic freedom for the small wage earner, the small business man and the farmer," but termed the President's court scheme a "dangerous proposal."

The people "should have the final say" in any change made in the Supreme Court, Wheeler said in an address.

"I have not changed my views with reference to some of the decisions of the Supreme Court but I do not want the court to be changed by packing it," he asserted.

"A great deal his been said about the three horses of Government pull together, but the trouble is that one of them wants to get in the driver's seat."

Wheeler is advocating a constitutional amendment to give Congress power to over ride by a two-thirds vote any legislation of the prior Congress, not involving the bill of rights, that had been vetoed by the Supreme Court.

"There can be no more Democratic way than this," he said. "The people should have the final say.

"It is not a question of years. Under Article Five of the Constitution, Congress can call electoral conventions. It can set up either its own electoral machinery or use that of the individual states. The people can vote on the amendment and the whole thing can be accomplished in a matter of months."

SPANISH MINISTER ON U. S.

Says He Knows Sentiment Is in Favor of His Republic.

By the Associated Press.

VALENCIA, Spain, March 27.—Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo said today he knew that sentiment in the United States was overwhelmingly in favor of the Spanish republic.

He made the remarks in accepting a red flag presented by Sam Barton of New York in behalf of the Socialist party of America. The Foreign Minister cited President Roosevelt's address to the inter-American peace conference at Buenos Aires last December as evidence of American repugnance to Fascism.

THIRD FIRE IN SYNAGOGUE

Blaze in New York Building Causes $200,000 Damage.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Fire of undetermined origin, the third blaze in the same structure today, caused damage to the West End Synagogue estimated at $200,000. The altar was destroyed, with scrolls of the Torah valued at $50,000.

The first fires were discovered burning simultaneously early today by the caretaker, who told fire officials he believed they were of incendiary origin.

WAY OPEN TO TEST CONTINUANCE LAW IN KENNETT CASE

Defendant's Attorney Was in Legislature, but Judge J. V. Billings Ordered Trial to Proceed.

POINT FOR APPEAL TO SUPREME COURT

Lloyd Ervin Under Eight-Year Sentence for Killing Fred Fulkerson Near Coopertown.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KENNETT, Mo., March 27.—Employment of a lawyer-legislator as attorney for Lloyd Ervin of Bell City failed to delay his trial on a murder charge here this week when Circuit Judge J. V. Billings overruled his application for a continuance.

Ervin was found guilty of manslaughter in the killing last July of Fred Fulkerson near Coppertown. Punishment was fixed at eight years in prison.

Four days before the trial opened Monday Ervin employed State Senator J. C. McDowell of Charleston as his attorney, and, on the ground that McDowell was attending a session of the Legislature, asked for a continuance.

A State statute has been construed by the courts to make continuances mandatory when sought on that ground, but Judge Billings denied the continuance.

What the Judge Ruled.

"The Court ruled," he said later, discussing his decision, "that the purpose of the statute was to protect existing or pending business while legislators were away transacting their legislative duties, and not for the purpose of imposing upon the courts and the public intolerable applications to prevent the administration of justice.

"If it were construed to require a continuance under the circumstances existing in this case, it would be an unconstitutional, unwarranted and unauthorized encroachment on the inherent power of the judiciary existing in every court of record having general or criminal jurisdiction.

"In the event that the cause is appealed, this point will be squarely before the Supreme Court of Missouri for judicial determination."

Judge Billings' decision denying the continuance came, curiously, on the same day that Circuit Judge W. C. Hughes at Mexico, Mo., also departed from the precedent and refused a continuance in a contempt case which had been sought on the ground that Roy Hamlin, majority floor leader of the House of Representatives, was attorney for the defendants. The application of the defendants in that case for a writ of prohibition restraining Judge Hughes from further action is now before the Supreme Court.

No Supreme Court Ruling.

The statute concerned has never been construed by the Supreme Court, but a 1924 decision of the Springfield Court of Appeals has guided the Circuit Courts hitherto. The Springfield Appellate Court held the granting of continuances mandatory, although the law states that they shall be granted "if it shall appear to the Court" that the attendance of the lawyer-legislator is necessary to a fair and proper trial.

The device of employing a lawyer-legislator has been used repeatedly during sessions of the Legislature to delay trials when other means of postponement have been exhausted.

SHIPS RUSH TO HELP SINKING U.S. FREIGHTER

The Volunteer, 840 Miles Off Japan, Leaking and Helpless; 40 in Crew.

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, March 27. — Ships in a wide area of the northwestern Pacific turned today to the aid of the leaking and helpless American freighter, Volunteer, with a crew of about 40, which was losing a fight against the sea 840 miles off the coast of Japan.

A second distress call within four hours turned the big liner Empress of Canada off its course to go to the rescue. At the same time several Japanese freighters began a race to the Volunteer's side.

In the van of the rescue ships the British freighter Fresno City neared the scene in a 240-mile run it started when the Volunteer sent its first call for help at 12:30 a. m.

"Water Gaining Fast."

A second call for help at 4 a. m. to the Empress of Canada said:

"The Fresno City is coming to my assistance. Water is gaining fast. Request you come also."

The Empress of Canada was 635 miles from the Volunteer.

The various messages indicated the Volunteer's crew had been fighting trouble since being buffeted by a severe storm two days ago.

"We've shipped eight feet of water in our No. 1 hold and our pumps are unable to control it," said a roundabout message from the Volunteer shortly before noon. "We are proceeding at reduced speed at latitude 25:35 north, longitude 153:45 east."

Under command of Capt. W. W. Geldert of Algiers, La., the 7717-ton ship left New Orleans Feb. 7 for the Pacific Coast, and then headed for Kobe, Japan, via Honolulu with a cargo of cotton and merchandise. It is owned by the Lykes Brothers-Ripley Steamship Co.

Message Received at New Orleans Reports 12 Feet in Hold.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 27.—E. A. Jimison, marine department manager of the Lykes Brothers Ripley Steamship Co., Inc., here, received late today a relayed message from Capt. W. M. Geldert, master of the disabled freighter Volunteer, 840 miles southeast of Yokohama, Japan, which said in part: "Twelve feet of water in number one hold. Unable to control."

RETIRED JEWELER, 77, KILLS HIMSELF WITH A RIFLE

Body of Frederich Dienstbier Found by Son; He Had Been in Ill Heatih.

Frederick Dienstbier, 77-year-old retired jeweler, 3524 Halliday avenue, ended his life yesterday by shooting himself in the head with a rifle. Relatives said he had been despondent because of ill health.

A son, Robert, found the body on the bed in his father's room, with an old .22-caliber rifle beside it. Mr. Dienstbier operated a jewelry store at 320 North Sixth street for many years before his retirement in 1921.

JOHN TORREY MORSE, 97, DIES

Noted Biographer One of Harvard's Oldest Graduates.

NEEDHAM, Mass., March 27. — John Torrey Morse, 97 years old, of Boston and Needham, author and former practicing attorney, died today at his country estate here. He was one of the oldest graduates of Harvard University in the class of 1860.

He gave up his law practice in 1880 to write biographies of famous Americans. He served as a member of Harvard's board of overseers from 1879 to 1891 and for four years was co-editor with the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge Sr. of the International Review.

JURY-BRIBING CHARGE IN EMBEZZLEMENT TRIAL

Chicago Juror Says He Was Paid; Sheriff to Fire Three Bailiffs for Alleged Laxity.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27. — Sheriff John Toman ordered immediate discharge of three bailiffs today while authorities investigated a charge of jury tampering in the two embezzlement trials of Frank V. Zintak, ousted clerk of the Superior Court.

One of the discharged bailiffs, Daniel Miller, was accused, Toman said, of taking the second Zintak jury on a round of taverns. The other two, Harry Kirsch and Edward Cohen, also assigned to the second jury, were dismissed, the Sheriff said, for laxity on their jobs.

Criminal Court Judges Michael L. McKinley and Robert C. O'Connell heard testimony of Gustave Anderson, who said he was bribed to vote not guilty at Zintak's first trial.

Zintak, tried on a charge of embezzling $10,500 from office funds, was acquitted at his second trial after the first trial ended in a deadlock.

The criminal court hearing was held after Anderson, a juror, said he was paid $25 and promised a $7 a day job if he would vote not guilty at the first Zintak trial. He alleged he was "double-crossed" and did not receive the job.

FARLEY'S GREEN INK FADES

Signatures Disappear on Some Postmasters' Commissions.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, March 27.—Postal inspectors today examined the commissions of recently appointed postmasters in Massachusetts to determine how many had been signed by Postmaster-General James A. Farley in ink that disappeared.

Inspectors explained that through a defect in green ink used in signing some of the commissions, the inscriptions faded when exposed to light and left a blank, where the Postmaster - General's signature should appear. The commissions on which the signatures have disappeared will be returned to Washington for new signatures.

EDWARD IS MOVING TO AUSTRIAN TYROL

Duke of Windsor Drops Eleven Servants, Will Get Along With Six.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, March 27.—The Duke of Windsor, who is going to the Austrian Tyrol this week, will get along with only six servants at his new quarters at the Appesbach hotel at St. Wolfgang in the lake country of upper Austria. Three of them, including the chef and his favorite castle kitchen equipment, will be chosen from among the 17 who have served him at Enzesfeld.

It was reported at St. Wolfgang that a heavy snowfall in the Salzkammergut region, just south of St. Wolfgang, made it doubtful whether an automobile trip Monday would be advisable, but the Duke was ready to go. He gave up his downtown suite in the Bristol Hotel, and said goodby to Dr. Summer Moore, his London dentist who came here from England to treat his toothache.

He arranged tentatively to read part of the Easter service tomorrow in the Anglican Church at Vienna, where his participation in Christmas services caused some British criticism, but this criticism was believed to have moderated somewhat.

In the baggage Edward will take to his new quarters will be one bulky parcel, his mattress.

Close Friends of Duke of Windsor Join Mrs. Simpson at Monts.

MONTS, France, March 27.—Close friends of the Duke of Windsor tonight joined Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson and her hosts at the Chateau de Cande for a house party, but their identities and the number present were guarded closely.

Herman L. Rogers, Mrs. Simpson's spokesman, denied a report that Alfred Duff Cooper, British Undersecretary of State, and his wife were expected. Both of them, close friends of Windsor, were present at a royal dinner party in London May 27, 1936, when the former Baltimore woman's name was mentioned for the first time in a court circular.

Mrs. Simpson, accompanied only by her chauffeur, drove to the Chateau Chenonceau yesterday. Earlier in the week she visited the Chateau Azay Le Rideau of Louis XIV.

Mrs. Simpson has played golf once, but has walked over the course and expects to play over the week-end, Rogers said.

HELD AFTER NEGRO IS SHOT

Man Accused by Others in Rooming House.

Dolores Bickell, 45 years old, a Negro, was shot in the head last night in a rooming house which she conducts at 717 North Leonard avenue.

A white man, said by others in the house to have shot her following an argument, was arrested, but refused to make a statement to police. A revolver, which the man admitted was his, was found in an ashpit in the rear of the house.

JOSEPH BLOCK'S NEW TRIAL IS UP TO JUDGE JOYNT

Jurist to Pass on Own Decision Which Two Bar Committees Called "Grossly Inadequate."

Circuit Judge John W. Joynt will decide whether there shall be a new trial of Joseph Block, attorney, under motions filed by two bar disciplinary committees assailing his one-year suspension of the lawyer as "grossly inadequate." The motions for a new trial contended that under Judge Joynt's own findings the only proper decree was permanent disbarment.

Should Judge Joynt grant the new trial, it would be held before the Judge sitting in Equity Division No. 2 where Judge Joynt presided when the disbarment case was heard last November. If he should overrule the motion, the bar committees might appeal to a higher court. Now sitting in a criminal division, he did not decide the case until last Monday.

The motions, filed by the Missouri Supreme Court's St. Louis Bar Disciplinary Committee and the Grievance Committee of the St. Louis Bar Association, contended that Judge Joynt's judgment against Block, who was charged with misappropriating more than $1400 of clients' money, was not only insufficient but was against the weight of evidence.

The commitees said the judgment was grossly inadequate in view of the fact that Block was found guilty on all charges, which involved moral turpitude. At the trial, Block, who had practiced law for about 40 years, denied the charges, contending that the complaints took no account of credits due him or of settlements which he said he had made to the satisfaction of his clients.

Both committees had filed disbarment suits against Block, which were consolidated at the trials. The Grievance Committee filed its suit in 1935, charging in five counts that Block improperly withheld about $1400 due clients. In 1936 the Supreme Court's Bar Committee filed a petition alleging he misappropriated $91 due a client while he was under the other charges. Both suits sought his disbarment permanently.

Members of the Supreme Court's committee are Jesse McDonald, chairman; Grover C. Sibley, George M. Hagee and W. Blodgett Priest. The old Grievance Committee comprised Thomas F. McDonald, former president of the St. Louis Bar Association; Samuel H. Lieberman, now president of the association; Howard G. Cook, Wayne Ely and Hagee and Sibley.

ST. LOUISAN HURT IN AUTO COLLISION IN ILLINOIS, DIES

Clinton Dove Succumbs at White Hall; Driver of His Car in Jail.

Clinton Dove, 34 years old, 4361 Maryland avenue, died yesterday in a hospital at White Hall, Ill., of injuries suffered Friday when an automobile in which he was riding collided head-on with another car on Highway 67, three miles north of Carrollton.

Witnesses said the collision occurred when Dove's companion, Elmer Blakeley, 534 North Vandeventer avenue, swung the car out to pass a truck. Blakeley was held in jail at Carrollton, charged with driving when drunk. Physicians said he and Dove had been drinking.

Blakeley and the two occupants of the other machine, Fred Jacoby and W. L. Estabrook, both of Edwardsville, were only slightly hurt.

Dove, known to his friends as Harry, was an advertising salesman. The funeral will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at Arthur J. Donnelly's undertaking establishment, 3840 Lindell boulevard, with burial in Valhalla Cemetery.

Elected councilors were: Marjorie Harris of Lynchburg, Va., John P. Nafe of St. Louis, Mo., Aemily S. Dexter of Decatur, Ga., and Lanier.

AUDITOR TESTIFIES LONDES KEPT NO PAYROLL RECORDS

Tells Referee He Found No Data on Wages Prior to Aug. 19—No Details on Traveling Expenses.

Evidence to support the contention of Hans Wulff, trustee in bankruptcy of the Pearl Garment Co., that Louis and Morris Londe, the owners, manipulated the business in the two months before bankruptcy, so there remained but $18,575 in assets to pay creditors' claims totaling $125,723, was submitted yesterday at a hearing before Referee in Bankruptcy John A. Hope.

Referee Hope has ordered the brothers to show cause why they should not be compelled to return $85,942 they took from savings accounts and other resources shortly before the firm was placed in involuntary bankruptcy Aug. 21 last. The partners have admitted they drew, and that Louis gambled away, about $70,000, but contend that most of the money was from their own personal funds and that Louis is merely a debtor to the garment company for the balance.

In an effort to show the partners were in a conspiracy to defraud creditors, Robert Burnett, attorney for Trustee Wulff, called Russell Wycoff, who directed an audit of the books of the Pearl Garment Co., after bankruptcy. The company records showed that the firm owed $101,525 for merchandise purchased by the firm, $86,276 worth having been ordered and received in July and August, he testified. In May and June only $15,231 worth of stock was bought, he said.

The trustee has concluded that the heavy buying was done with an eye to quick disposal of the merchandise at reduced prices, even below cost, Burnett told Referee Hope. One garment, according to inventories submitted to prove the point, was sold at prices varying from $37.50 to $61.50 and another went to some customers at $16.50, to others at $32.50 and again to others at prices in between.

With the auditor's testimony as a medium and over the objections of Morris G. Levinson, attorney for the Londes, Burnett brought out that while the company's sales in the first six months of 1936 amounted to something more than $42,000, the amazing total for sales of merchandise in July and part of August was about $75,000.

The desire of the partners for "fresh" money, Burnett said, was disclosed again in the record of their transactions at the First National Bank, where they obtained $18,000 on notes in July and August and at bankruptcy had overdrawn the firm's checking account $70.

Trustee Wulff has alleged the firm's payroll was padded for the benefit of the partners and that excessive amounts were drawn for personal and traveling expenses and for salaries. The auditor told Referee Hope that he found no payroll records kept prior to Aug. 19; no detailed accounts of traveling expenses as charged on the books, and no records as to salaries of the partners or their capital accounts with the firm.

Handwriting experts have testified that the writing of Louis Londe is identical with that of "Max Katz," who indorsed $15,380 in checks he received from the Pearl Garment Co. Wulff charged that "Katz" and the "Max Katz Fur Co. of Chicago" were imaginary figures established to create another channel through which money could flow from the firm's till to the partners' pockets.

The brothers are charged in Federal warrants with concealment of $60,000 in assets of the garment company. If the Court finds that they withheld any part of the assets, he will issue an order for them to make return and punish them for contempt of court if they fail to comply. Each brother has said he is now virtually penniless and would be unable to raise the money if so ordered.

STUDENTS LIVE ON MILK AND FRUIT IN EXPERIMENT

One Goes Four Months Without Other Food; Three Finish in Good Health.

By the Associated Press.

MADISON, Wis., March 27. — Three University of Wisconsin students, human guinea pigs in a scientific experiment, ate "solid" food today after weeks of nothing but raw milk and fruit.

One lived four months on three and one-half quarts of milk, two apples and two oranges a day. The others stayed on a liquid diet seven weeks. All said they finished in perfect health.

The experiment was conducted by Prof. E. G. Hastings, of the Department of Bacteriology, and Sigrud Funder, 23-year-old Norwegian scientist here on a fellowship from the University of Oslo.

Hastings said the test was "to find whether the diet would change the flow of the intestinal tract. It was a preliminary survey to see if further experiments would be worthwhile on the relation of micro-organisms growing in the intestinal tract to the well being of the individual."

"The milk had copper, magnesium and iron added—milk itself wouldn't be sufficient because it is deficient in those foods," he said.

CHILD BRIDE FLEES FROM HER HUSBAND

Florida Girl, 12, Seeks Annulment, Saying Parents Forced Her to Wed.

By the Associated Press.

BRADENTON, Fla., March 27. — Twelve-year-old Martha Nell Revell today fled the home of her parents and sought annulment of her marriage a week ago today to Chandler L. Revell, 57. The child bride went to Jacksonville, Fla., with her eldest sister, Mrs. G. R. Hendrick, to live at the latter's home while Attorney Dewey A. Dye prepared annulment proceedings for presentation to the court here next week.

County Judge Sam J. Murphy said Martha Nell Revell told him her parents and Revell forced her into the marriage against her will.

Judge Murphy said she told him she was warned that her father would lose his job at a crate mill unless she married Revell, who was foreman at the factory. Revell was discharged by the crate company yesterday.

The girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel E. North, witnessed the wedding ceremony here last Saturday. Their approval was necessary to make the marriage legal in Florida. Mrs. North later said she thought Revell would make a good husband despite the 45 years difference in their ages and the fact he was a grandfather who had been married "two or three times before." The father lated said he was ready to sign annulment papers.

Mrs. Hendrick and five other brothers and sisters told Dye yesterday they wanted to have the marriage annulled. They also saw Judge Murphy.

The Judge said he told them they could not be prosecuted if the child voluntarily left her home, where she and her husband lived with her parents, and accompanied Mrs. Hendrick. He added the girl cried out she would not remain with her husband and her parents "even if I have to run away."

LUTHER E. RESINGER, 73, TO MARRY WOMAN, 39

St. Louis Plastering Contractor Gets License to Wed Mrs. Clarinda Schlie in Chicago.

Luther E. Resinger, 73-year-old plastering contractor, 3902 Kennerly avenue, and Mrs. Clarinda Schlie, 34 years his junior, also of St. Louis, obtained a marriage license yesterday in Chicago.

His first wife died about a year ago and he had been acquainted with Mrs. Schlie since that time, a relative told a Post-Dispatch reporter. She had been married before and was divorced. She has a son and a daughter.

Resinger, a short, slender man with a white mustache, is a familiar figure in the neighborhood of Vandeventer and Kennerly avenues, usually seen wearing cement-stained clothing. Mrs. Schlie, a tall woman, considerably larger than Resinger, was formerly a seamstress and operated a hemstitching shop in the neighborhood.

They will make their home at the Kennerly avenue address, a small, brick residence. Relatives said they had received no word yet but understood the marriage was to take place immediately after the license was issued. The pair will remain in Chicago for a brief honeymoon.

REMMERS DENIES SAFETY CLAIMS MADE BY MAYOR

His Figures Show Cut Cited by Dickmann in One Year Is Overbalanced by Rise in Rest of Term.

CHARGES FIXING OF AUTO CASES

Suggests Executive Quit Having His Official Car Driven in Streets at 50 Miles an Hour.

Mayor Dickmann's claim that his administration had brought about safer traffic conditions in St. Louis was disputed last night by Oliver T. Remmers, his Republican opponent for the mayoralty, who declared, in a radio speech, that there had been no reduction in traffic fatalities during the Dickmann administration.

"The present Mayor, in his puffed-up announcements and speeches, hypocritically talks of safety and claims credit for the reduction in motor vehicle deaths upon our streets," said Remmers. "But let us look at the present Mayor's safety record with facts and figures taken from the published records of the St. Louis Safety Council. We find there has been no reduction.

"In 1933, the first year of the present political regime, there were 145 deaths on our streets from motor vehicle accidents. In the second year of the present administration, with political fixing in our city courts in full swing under the Mayor's very nose, the number of deaths increased to 160, or 15 more than in the previous year. In the third year of his administration, the number of traffic fatalities increased to 164.

"The present Mayor claims credit for a reduction of deaths in 1936. But the death rate of 147 last year is two more than in 1933, the year he took office. It is certainly a peculiar way of figuring a reduction."

Driving 50 Miles an Hour.

Remmers recalled that he had given much time to safety work, as president of the Safety Council several years ago, and as a present member of the board of governors of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

"I helped to organize the Missouri Safety Mobilization, a statewide movement," he said. "To me, safety work on the streets, and in the schools, the homes and factories, is a devoted service to humanity. I think I can speak of safety with some authority.

"The present Mayor, by his very conduct, is not a true safety advocate. He cannot be unless he first absorbs safety in his own heart. He cannot mix politics with safety. He cannot be a true safety man until he quits having his official car driven through the streets at 50 miles an hour, imperiling the lives of our citizens. He cannot be a true safety man, and at the same time disregard the ordinance limiting speed to 30 miles an hour. In true safety, you practice what you preach."

Blames City Administration for Election Frauds.

Responsibility for the registration frauds of last year was placed on the city administration by Miss Emma J. Bobb, former Republican chairman of the Election Board, in a radio talk last night. Miss Bobb recently served as adviser to the Election Board headed by Charles P. Williams, appointed by Gov. Park last September, after the board headed by James A. Waechter had been dismissed "for the betterment of the public service" following exposure of the frauds.

"You will recall the registration of unknown voters so fittingly described by the press as 'ghost voters'," said Miss Bobb. "The pressure became so great that to satiate the public mind a special canvass was made with the astounding result that 46,000 names were found registered who could not be found by canvassers. Those names were not removed from the books.

"I have tried to understand how so many judges and clerks could be of one mind and perform so uniform a task. I have but one solution—they were acting under orders. Who gave the orders? Who is the head of the Democratic party in St. Louis? Can the present Mayor say he knew nothing of those orders when there were so many city employes serving as judges and clerks, in violation of the election laws, as exposed by the press?

"Does the present Mayor claim ignorance of the activities of his henchmen, or must we infer he was so ineffective a titular head of his party that he did not enjoy the confidence of the political bosses as to know what they were doing?"

NOMINEES OF ALL BUT ONE PARTY BARRED FOR TWO JOBS

Candidates on Two Tickets for Mayor and Police Judge of Venice Excluded.

Candidates for mayor and police magistrate of two of the three parties in Brooklyn, Negro community north of East St. Louis, were barred from the printed ballot on technical grounds yesterday, leaving the ballot to the candidates of the third party.

An electoral board in Belleville, headed by County Judge Joseph E. Fleming, ruled that the nominating petitions for Mayor Edward M. Green, candidate for re-election, and Fred Bailey, candidate for police magistrate, on the Citizens' Party ticket, were not properly notarized, and the petitions of Henry Defell and Henry J. Baker, candidates for the same offices on the People's Party ticket, were defective in that they were not in book form as required.

The names of the candidates of the two parties may be written in on the ballot, however. The election will be held April 20.

MAYOR TELLS NEGROES HOW HE HELPED THEM

Says His Administration Provided Community Centers and Completed Hospital.

Mayor Bernard F. Dickmann, in a campaign speech last night to a Negro audience at Wheatley Y. W. C. A., Garrison and Lucas avenues, listed undertakings of the city government for Negroes, for which his administration claims credit.

"Did the Republican party provide anything for the Negro people to enable them to enjoy life, to relax or to improve themselves?" the Mayor asked. "They did not," he continued, "with the possible exception of Adams Bath House, Jefferson avenue and Adams street. There they put up a combined bathhouse and swimming pool, and when we found that the structure, although comparatively new, had cracked through the middle and was in danger of collapsing, we had to suspend operations at this building until necessary repairs had been made.

"They gave you a swimming pool in that building, and let it go at that; during the winter months, that pool remained almost empty, while the attendants amused themselves as best they could with no service to the general public.

"It remained for your administration to convert this building during the winter months into a Community Center, the first city-controlled Negro recreation center St. Louis has had. Attendance at this community center has reached approximately 200 daily; dancing classes are in progress; the boys in the Golden Gloves Boxing tournament brought glory on themselves; the arts and crafts are being taught, and many other activities to engage and improve the boys and girls."

The Mayor spoke next of Vashon community center to cost $187,000 and Compton avenue, recently completed at a cost of $135,000, containing a gymnasium 98x48 feet, and capable of holding 1000 persons. In the basement are showerbaths for men and women, room for games such as table tennis, and quarters for industrial and handicraft classes for boys and girls. Outside is a field which will be converted into a summer playground.

He told of Tandy Park, Goode and Kennerly avenues, where a Community Center to cost $187,000 is planned, with bath-house facilities and locker-rooms, swimming pool and gymnasium.

He spoke of plans for another community center on the site of the Gamble Playground, on Gamble street just off Easton avenue.

Mayor Dickmann told, as in previous speeches, of taking steps at the beginning of his administration to relieve overcrowding of the inadequate City Hospital No. 2, by sending some of the patients to private hospitals; and of completing the new Negro Hospital, with which, he said, the Republican administration had been "dallying."

He said he pushed the new hospital to completion as early as consistent with proper construction. It was dedicated last month by Secretary of the Interior Ickes. He spoke also of the new Bliss Psychopathic Hospital, near City Hospital, which is to have a floor for Negroes, and which will replace the City Hospital observation ward, the latter being described by the Mayor as a "torture chamber" for both white and Negro patients.

Mayor's Campaign Managers Reply to Remmers on Hospital Site.

Mayor Dickmann's campaign managers replied yesterday to a statement made by Oliver T. Remmers, candidate for Mayor, in a recent speech, attempting to connect the Mayor, through his family real estate firm, with the selection of a site outside the city for the new United States Marine Hospital.

A copy of a letter written by Mayor Dickmann to Congressman John J. Cochran, Feb. 26, 1936, was produced to show the Mayor's attitude in this matter. He wrote to Cochran: "I cannot understand why they want to build this hospital on any other than the site they now own." He pointed out advantages of the city site, and the possibility of a river-front highway to connect it with the proposed downtown Jefferson Memorial, and said the only apparent disadvantage, that from smoke, would probably be remedied in the course of time. A copy of the same letter was sent to President Thomas N. Dysart of the Chamber of Commerce.

Dickmann headquarters also gave out a copy of a letter written by Robert M. Boyles, consulting engineer, to Remmers, about the candidate's statement that the recently enacted smoke ordinance was a "fraud" and a "rank deception." Remmers, in this connection, mentioned natural gas as a solution of the smoke problem.

"It is obvious," Boyles wrote, "that you have been supplied with poor and unreliable information. It is unfortunate that the public discussion of a matter of such great importance to the community should be on such a basis.

"This entire subject is very complex in its technical and economic phases and requires the best efforts of every one working wholeheartedly together. To make a political issue of technical subjects, such as smoke abatement and natural gas, cannot lead to a permanent and satisfactory solution."

Socialist-Labor Campaign Talk.

W. W. Cox, Socialist-Labor party candidate for Mayor, will speak on "The Socialist-Labor Party and Municipal Government" at Sokol Hall, 1439 Chouteau avenue, at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Budget Director Supports Nolte; Declares Expenses Have Been Cut Because City Had Less to Spend

Assails Dickmann Claim of $8,967,000 Saving, Pointing Out That Fund Available Dropped $11,000,000.

The reason there was a material reduction in municipal expenditures during the last four years, under Mayor Dickmann (Democrat), compared with the preceding four years, under Mayor Miller (Republican), was that the city had much less income to spend, Budget Director Arthur C. Meyers declared in a radio address Friday night.

Meyers, who also is First Assistant Comptroller, spoke for the re-election of Comptroller Louis Nolte (Republican) and referred to the campaign claim of Mayor Dickmann for credit for a saving of $8,967,276 in 1933-37, compared with expenditures of 1929-33.

"The available fund for expenditures dropped over $11,000,000 in 1933-37, as compared with 1929-33," said Meyers. "That simply meant the city had less to spend and the comptroller saw to it that the requests for appropriations were reduced as the income declined."

Cut in Realty Assessment.

Quoting minutes of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, Meyers showed that the assessment of real estate for 1933 was reduced 20 per cent, compared with the valuation of 1932, by an order of the board Jan. 5, 1933. This was more than three months before the Dickmann Democratic administration began, and the board then consisted of Mayor Miller, Comptroller Nolte and Aldermanic President Walter J. G. Neun, all Republicans.

"In addition," Meyers continued, "the budget bill for 1933-34, recommending the drastic reduction of $1,245,690 under the previous year, was prepared under the direction of Nolte and recommended by him for adoption by the Board of Estimate.

"With the reduced income, due to reduction in assessed valuations, higher tax delinquencies and reduced revenue from all other sources, the Board of Estimate was compelled to make a budget to fit the reduced city income. It never occurred to any one at that time to put out propaganda that the city was saving $1,245,000. The money simply was not there to spend.

"This process of trimming city expenditures is not a saving, as it is simply bringing expenditures within income and this, by the way, is one of the duties of the Board of Estimate. You can't save money that you don't have to spend. If you don't have it and you want your budget to balance, you don't spend it."

Meyers recalled that Neun remained a member of the Board of Estimate for the first two years of Dickmann's administration, giving the board a Republican majority for that time.

Nolte's Recommendation.

When the budget for the fiscal year 1936-37, now ending, was presented to the Board of Estimate a year ago, Nolte recommended reduction of requests by more than $3,000,000, and as requests for the approaching year 1937-38 were much higher than possible revenue, reductions of almost the same amount must be made again, Meyers said.

In the election of April 6 one of the voters' problems will be the selection, he said, of a Comptroller who will render the best service to the whole people in managing fiscal affairs. He continued:

"A Comptroller who is honest and economical and conducts the city's affairs upon sound business principles is a good Comptroller for the whole people, regardless of his political affiliation. The real question before the voters is whether Comptroller Nolte, who has handled the city's financial affairs honestly and efficiently for 20 years, has protected the public interest, or whether the interest of the public will be best served by placing the handling and management of the city's funds into new and untried hands.

"Mr. Nolte is making his record the basis of his appeal to the voters. How some individual or group of individuals handle affairs of the national government or how some local official is performing is no guarantee to the people that someone else with the same party label will make a good Comptroller.

Question of Party Labels.

"My reason for making this statement is that the people are being told that the party label of Mr. Nolte's distinguished opponent is a guarantee that he will make a good Comptroller. The statement is also made by the Democratic candidate that the Democratic party will conduct the office of Comptroller. Just what does that mean? Mr. Nolte ahs never made the national party label he happens to have the basis of his appeal for election to the office of Comptroller, nor does he make the basis of his appeal on a mere catchy slogan that is not based on actual performance."

In conclusion, Meyers quoted a Post-Dispatch editorial, which praised Nolte's record in safeguarding the city's finances and urged the voters to consider this, not partisanship.

"Therefore," Meyers added, "for the continued welfare of our city, to insure the continued protection of our fiscal affairs and to safeguard the splendid credit which St. Louis now enjoys, I urge all of our people to vote for Louis Nolte."

Mrs. John Trigg Moss Praises Nolte For Saying "No."

Comptroller Nolte's willingness to say "no" to proposals not in harmony with the city's financial interests was praised in a radio address last night by Mrs. John Trigg Moss, parliamentarian and an old friend of the Nolte family.

"'No,'" she said, "was the one thing Mr. Nolte learned how to say early in the day. And for 20 years he has been saying 'no' and every one of his 'no's' have strengthened the credit of the city, and have been worth millions of dollars to the taxpayers, and have made our city a place of financial safety and security in which to abide. Every St. Louisan knows that when Mr. Nolte opposes a measure of any kind, whether it be a bond issue or a bill to pay, that he has knowledge which gives him definite and sufficient reason for his opposition.

"While such cities as New York, Chicago and Detroit found themselves in great financial distress, our 'watch dog' of the city's treasury has repeatedly used this terse slogan of 'no' and with it he has carried his people safely out of the bewildering years of the depression.

"Mr. Nolte has gained the reputation of being terribly 'hard' and awfully 'Scotch'—and he is without a doubt the most conservative of men, and does believe in practicing the most rigid economy—but his friends know him as a kindly, generous soul, very self-effacing and very humble, a man quick to answer to the call for sympathy or help to the less fortunate.

"He alone is responsible, more than any other individual, for the reputation St. Louis has as the most solvent, best-governed large city in the United States.

"Some one has likened his career to a text for a good sermon—dignity, sincerity, diligence, honesty—virtues all of the old school; efficiency and determination always to do right. It is unthinkable that the civic-minded people of St. Louis would be so blind to their own interests that they would turn against a man who has proven himself to be the valuable public servant Mr. Nolte has been for 20 years."

MRS. FORISTEL TO PAY TAX EXPERT $10,000

Probate Judge Approves Agreement Entered Into During Income Litigation.

An agreement by Mrs. Mae Foristel as administratrix of the estate of her husband, Edward W. Foristel, prominent St. Louis attorney, to pay Walter E. Diggs, an accountant, $10,000 for services in Federal tax litigation against the estate, was approved yesterday by Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold.

The litigation was in connection with income tax claims pending for several years before Foristel's death in 1934. He had employed Diggs to represent him in a petition filed with the United States Board of Tax Appeals for a redetermination of assessments. The tax claims were adjusted last May.

Judge Arnold also sustained a petition filed by Mrs. Foristel in which she asked to recover from the beneficiaries of a life insurance trust for the total tax she was required to pay the Government. The insurance trust was created by her husband from policies totaling $376,195. The court finds she is entitled to recover $15,825. She is the beneficiary of the trust during her life with the income eventually going to her five children or their heirs.

An inventory of the estate listed Foristel's individual property at $24,565. However, the Government included the insurance trust in computing the Federal estate tax and also property which had been listed as of undetermined value. By this method the gross value of the estate was placed at $502,809.

In view of the large number of claims, Oscar Habenicht, attorney for the administratrix, said the estate is insolvent. The insurance trust being no part of the estate is not subject to these claims, he said.

CIO UNION SEEKS RECOGNITION BY CENTURY ELECTRIC

Organizer Says It Will Present Demand to Be Accepted as Sole Bargainer for Employes.

A demand that the Century Electric Co., 1806 Pine street, recognize the United Electrical and Radio Workers' union for collective bargaining for all its 1800 employes, will be the next step in the efforts of John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization to organize 12,000 employes of St. Louis electrical manufacturing concerns, it was announced yesterday by William Sentner, organizer.

Sentner said the demand would be made in a letter to the company. Company officials, saying they had received no communication from the union, declined to comment.

Meanwhile, six blocks away, some 200 stay-in strikers who have occupied the plant of the Emerson Electric Co., 2018 Washington avenue, since March 8, planned Easter sunrise services for today on the roof of the building.

Weather permitting, Frank Schlieman, veteran employe who gives Bible readings daily before the strikers, will conduct the Easter services.

Joseph Newman, president of the company, has refused to deal with the union which claims as members a majority of the 2000 workers made idle by the strike.

Leaders of several CIO unions, including the Electrical and Radio Workers' Union, will meet today to form a committee to call on Gov. Stark and State Relief Administrator Wallace Crossley, demanding relief for needy strikers. They also expect to demand the removal of William C. Connett, chairman of the St. Louis Relief Committee, which has adopted a policy of not giving aid to strikers.

Following a conference arranged yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board, the Baldor Electric Co., 4353 Duncan avenue, announced that it would reinstate three employes who said they were laid off a week ago because of union activity. Edwin C. Ballman, president of the company, denied this was the cause, saying they had been suspended for interferring with the work of others. The men will return to work tomorrow. The union is seeking recognition at the Baldor plant.

Five East St. Louis Strikes End With Recognition of A. F. of L.

Strikes begun yesterday at four East St. Louis milling companies and a brick plant, were called off after a meeting at which the managers of the concerns agreed to recognize American Federation of Labor unions as collective bargaining agencies for the employes, Leo Quick, president of the East St. Louis A. F. of I. Organizing Committee, announced last night.

The concerns are the Dixie Mills Co., Tenth and Walnut streets; Alfocorn Milling Co., 3300 Brady avenue; Always-A-Head Mills, Thirty-fifth and Walnut streets; National Oats (Corno Feeds) Co., 1932 Baugh avenue, and the Hill Brick Co., Fifty-first street and St. Clair avenue. They have about 190 employes.

Operation of the mills and brick plant will be resumed Monday, and discussion of wage and hour demands will be taken up at a later meeting.

The strikes were called by union boilermakers, laborers, carpenters and engineers. Allied Mills, Inc., 1700 Brady avenue, has been closed since March 9, by a strike.

St. Louis Woolworth Employes to Get Decision on Terms.

Union spokesmen representing employes of Woolworth 5-and-10-cent stores in St. Louis and officials from the executive offices of the company in New York will meet here tomorrow afternoon to receive a decision by the New York company officers on a wage and hour agreement reached Friday by the unions and the St. Louis Woolworth representatives.

The agreement, if approved by the New York officials, will provide for wage scales which are 12 to 22 per cent higher than present rates here, Miss Kitty Amsler, secretary of Waitresses' Local Union No. 249, one of the union negotiators, told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

The agreement also provides for recognition of the retail clerks', cooks', waiters' and waitresses' unions as bargaining agents for all employes in the 37 Woolworth stores in St. Louis and St. Louis County, according to Miss Amsler. A 48-hour, six-day week would be established.

Howard's Cleaners Windows Smashed.

Windows in two additional branch stores of Howard's Cleaners, Inc., were smashed early yesterday. Windows have been broken in several Howard's stores and in the homes of non-strikers since March 10, when employes of the company's plant, 2515 North Grand boulevard, went on strike. Stores damaged yesterday were: 4976 Thrush avenue, $30, and 949 Goodfellow boulevard, $50.

FOUR BUS VICTIMS BURIED AT SALEM, ILL.

Business Firms Close Doors During Funeral Service; Graves Side by Side.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SALEM, Ill., March 27.—Funeral services for four of the 20 members of a professional roller skating troupe who lost their lives in a bus accident near here Wednesday were held this afternoon at the undertaking establishment of Mayor Omar McMackin.

They were buried side by side in individual graves in East Lawn Cemetery. The body of Miss Caroline Barton, a registered nurse, of Denver, Colo., was the only one which could be identified. The others were determined by elimination to be the bodies of Miss Mary Cooper, a skater, of Villa Park, Ill.; Jerry Hixon, assistant manager of the troupe, of Los Angeles, and William Ellison, a concession operator, of Chicago.

Business firms in Salem closed their doors for an hour when the funeral services began at 2 p. m. and a crowd of about 1500 gathered about the undertaking establishment. About 250 found space inside.

The funeral services were read by the Rev. George R. Goodman, pastor of the First Methodist Church at Salem, and the Rev. Father Fix, pastor of a Catholic church at Centralia. Members of the American Legion and professional roller skaters now appearing in St. Louis served as pall bearers.

The funeral home was filled with flowers, sent by associates of the dead and by Salem business men and civic organizations. The expense of the funeral is to be paid by the Transcontinental Roller Derby Association.

Bodies of the other 16 killed when a tire blowout caused the bus to hit a bridge abutment on Highway 50 were sent to their homes for burial.

The three survivors of the bus accident who were taken to Barnes Hospital in St. Louis were still in a grave condition last night. They are John L. (Schoolboy) Creekmore of Miami, Fla.; Dick Thomas of Chicago and Don Flanery of Kansas City, Kan. Thomas was driver of the bus. Creekmore and Flanery are skaters.

BROOKINGS REPORT STRESSES NEED OF NEW COMPTROLLER

Urges Roosevelt to Fill Vacancy; Suggestion for Three-Member Board of Audit Made.

WOULD REBUILD FINANCIAL AGENCIES

Report on Reorganization Program Expected to Go to Congressional Committee Tomorrow.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Senator Byrd (Dem.), Virginia, an outspoken critic of the President's proposals to reorganize executive agencies of Government, made public today a report of the Brookings Institution which sharply challenges the Administration's program.

The Institution—a research organization—urges complete rebuilding of the Government's financial agencies along lines far different from those laid down in the President's recent reorganization message.

Its recommendations are included in the second installment of a voluminous survey of executive departments, undertaken for the Senate Reorganization Committee, of which Byrd is chairman. He said the report was rushed to completion for the benefit of a joint Congressional Committee on Reorganization. Brookings officials are expected to lay their program before the joint committee in an executive session Monday.

The Comptroller General.

Views in the Brookings report and of the Administration clash most emphatically over the place of the Comptroller General in the Federal fiscal system. The President's program would strip him of all authority to veto expenditures of executive agenices, limiting his work to audit of the disbursements after they are made.

The Institution recommends that the Comptroller retain all his present powers and take over some of those now exercised by the Treasury, the Comptroller thus to remain an independent watch-dog over all Government spending, responsible to Congress alone.

While the Administration's plan would greatly expand the Treasury's functions, the Institution urges that its activities should be dratically curtailed. Its report calls for elimination of most of the emergency accounting and disbursing system, employing about 26,000 persons. The Comptroller-General and the Budget Bureau each would absorb part of its functions, under this recommendation.

Other Major Suggestions.

Other major suggestions include:

1. Strengthening of the Budget Bureau to permit a more thorough investigation of the financial needs of the departments and co-ordination of their functions. It would be transformed from a Treasury subdivision to an independent unit directly under the President.

2. Replacement of the Comptroller-General by a three-member board of audit and settlement "if it is desired to eliminate what may be considered arbitrary decisions of a single individual."

3—Establishment of a committee, made up of representatives from the Comptroller-General's office and the Budget Bureau, to coordinate their work.

In an earlier installment of its survey, the institution urged consolidation of Federal lending agencies, to effect a saving of more than $30,000,000 a year.

No estimate of savings accompanied today's report, although Byrd declared they would be "substantial." The primary emphasis is put on efficiency and what is termed a proper division of administrative management and legislative control of Federal expenditures.

Criticism of Roosevelt.

In its report the Brookings investigators also say:

"The failure of the President to appoint a Comptroller-General of the United States has placed the general accounting office under a serious handicap. A vacancy in the office of the Comptroller-General imposes unnecessarily heavy responsibilities on the Assistant Comptroller-General, who must act in his place. He cannot anticipate the policies to be adopted by a new Comptroller-General, and it may be assumed that he has no desire to make appointments or initiate policies which may embarrass a future incumbent of the office. Since continuous performance is a vital requirement of an efficient financial system, it is urged that the existing vacancy in the office of the Comptroller-General be filled as speedily as possible."

The present Assistant Comptroller-General is former Representative Richard N. Elliott of Indiana, who, as a Republican, has no chance of promotion to the office which pays $10,000 a year and for which the appointment is 15 years.

President Roosevelt has given no indication as to when he intends to nominate a successor to J. Raymond McCarl, whose term as Comptroller expired last July.

INJURED WOMAN SAYS SHE WAS THROWN OFF TRUCK

Another Apparent Auto Victim Found in Street Doesn't Know What Hit Her.

Miss Dorothy Gansert of East St. Louis, in Christian Welfare Hospital there with a fractured ankle and internal injuries, told deputy sheriffs she was injured when an acquaintance, whom she named, shoved her out of his truck Friday night because she refused to accompany him to a roadhouse. She is 19, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred L. Gansert, 1713 Frederick street, East St. Louis.

Mrs. Leroy Dupree, 2623 Russell boulevard, was found unconscious in the street in front of 1722 South Broadway early yesterday, injured, apparently, by an automobile. She had suffered a skull injury and a fracture of the collarbone. She said she was knocked down while attempting to cross the street but did not know what hit her. Raymond Dyreks, a salesman, 1321A North Twentieth street, reported to police that his car had passed over an object in the street in that block, but that when he circled the block and returned he saw nothing unusual.

1300 BOY SCOUTS SEARCH FOR MISSING SCOUT LEADER

Hunt for Robert W. Miller in Arizona; Officers Think Young Man Was Murdered.

By the Associated Press.

SAFFORD, Ariz., March 27.—Thirteen hundred Boy Scouts searched today for Robert W. Miller, missing 23-year-old scout executive. Canals in the Safford Valley were drained during the night and searched minutely after dawn. Officers think Miller was killed by a man he had given a ride.

Sheriff Emert Kempton announced the search would be conducted thoroughly from Globe, Ariz., to El Paso, Tex. Miller was en route to Globe from Safford when h was last seen alive Wednesday. Kempton and Sheriff Charles R. Byrne of Globe said their investigation has produced no tangible clew. The National Boy Scout organization posted a reward of $500 for Miller.

Miller was last seen alive in Thatcher, a small town three miles west of here. Less than two hours after Howard Smith, a co-worker, saw Miller in Thatcher, his car was parked in front of a store at Duncan, 42 miles east of here, in the opposite direction from Miller's destination.

MEMPHIS WINS RIGHT TO BUILD POWER PLANT

Tennessee Supreme Court Also Overrules Objections Against Chattanooga System.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 27.—A Tennessee Supreme Court decision gave Memphis and Chattanooga the right to go ahead with plans to construct municipal power plants.

The court overruled objections by the Memphis Power & Light Co., and the Tennessee Electric Power Co., which serve the respective cities.

The Tennessee Electric Power Co. contended an act of the Legislature authorizing construction of a municipal plant and distribution system at Chattanooga and the issuance of bonds for that purpose was unconstitutional. The high court affirmed the decision of the Chancellor sustaining the validity of the law.

Memphis, which has a contract with the Tennessee Valley Authority to purchase electric power for 20 years, is about to enter into a contract with the Public Works Administration for the purchase of $9,000,000 of its bonds with which to erect an electric plant.

The Memphis Power & Light Co. sought to enjoin the city from proceeding with the contracts on the ground they were in violation of certain provisions of the State and Federal Constitutions.

The court ruled:

"That TVA and PWA have authority to make such contracts as are here involved."

"That the Legislature of Tennessee has expressly authorized the city of Memphis to enter into these agreements."

"That neither contract is violative of any constitutional provision."

"Complainant, no doubt," the opinion recited, "feels aggrieved that these governmental agencies are preparing to compete with it in the distribution and sale of electric energy, but that does not render the contracts here involved invalid."

The court pointed out that the electorate of Memphis, by a vote of 32,735 to 1868, had approved a $9,000,000 bond issue for a municipal plant for the distribution of TVA power.

SEEKS WRIT AGAINST JUDGE E. L. PADBERG

Dentist Alleges He 'Usurped Power' in Taking Jurisdiction in Wife's Suit.

Dr. Henry Lewis Glynn, a dentist, of 3935 Russell boulevard, asked the St. Louis Court of Appeals yesterday to issue a writ of prohibition against Circuit Judge Eugene L. Padberg, restraining him from assuming jurisdiction in a divorce suit filed by Mrs. Evelyn Glynn.

Dr. Glynn charged that his wife was a resident of East St. Louis, and alleged that Judge Padberg had "usurped judicial power." After hearing testimony concerning Mrs. Glynn's residence Judge Padberg overruled a plea in abatement filed by Dr. Glynn and is now, the dentist's petition said, about to determine her application for alimony pending trial of the divorce suit.

The Court of Appeals directed Judge Padberg to file "suggestions" in answer to Dr. Glynn's application by next Wednesday, and allowed Dr. Glynn until Friday to file his reply.

A transcript of testimony, given by Mrs. Glynn at the hearing on her husband's plea in abatement, showed that she had lived with her parents in East St. Louis since January, 1936, when she and Dr. Glynn went there because she was an expectant mother.

Mrs. Glynn denied, however, that she had established residence in East St. Louis, and testified that her furniture was in storage in St. Louis. Before January, 1936, she said, she had resided with Dr. Glynn in St. Louis, which she still regarded as her residence. They were married in 1930 and separated in April last year, when Dr. Glynn returned to St. Louis.

In his application for the writ of prohibition, Dr. Glynn alleges that Judge Padberg lacks jurisdiction in the divorce case because Mrs. Glynn had not resided in Missouri for one year before the suit was filed in October and was not a resident of Missouri on the day it was filed, and because the acts of which his wife complains in the divorce suit were not committed within Missouri or while one or both of them was a resident of Missouri.

Mrs. Glynn's petition charges general indignities, alleging that her husband was sulky, refused to speak to her for two or three weeks at a time, and told her he did not love her and had made a mistake in marrying her.

165 PUT ON VOTE LISTS

Judge Baron Issues Order for Persons With Legal Disability.

Names of about 165 persons not on the registration lists after the registration of Feb. 18 were ordered placed on the lists by Circuit Judge Max G. Baron during the last week after it had been shown that they were ill, out of the city or under some other legal disability on that day.

A large number of additional applications to be placed on the registration lists are expected to be made before the municipal election April 6. Some of the applicants had changed their places of residence since the registration and some had come of age since then.

Low Rating for Missouri Jails.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The Federal Bureau of Prisons has reported that of the 99 Missouri jails inspected since July 1, 1930, only three ranked as high as 60-69 per cent—the bureau's third classification. Twenty-three Missouri jails were classified as 50-59 per cent, while the remaining 73 were under 50 per cent. During the fiscal year ended last June 30 the bureau used 36 Missouri jails to house a daily average of 320 Federal prisoners. Only three of the nation's 2913 jails inspected by the bureau were ranked 90-100 per cent. Seventeen were ranked 80-90 per cent, 77, 60-69 per cent, 900, 50-59 per cent, and 1684 under 50 per cent.

Mrs. Gehner Estate Tax $6121.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 27.—The State Treasurer today received a check for $6121 in payment of the inheritance tax on the estate of Mrs. Minna Gehner, St. Louis, who died June 30, 1936. Two grandsons inherited the $237,000 estate.

MISSOURI VALUATION REDUCED $2,826,939

State Tax Board Fixes Realty and Personalty Valuation at $3,184,450,991.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 27.—The State Tax Commission today recommended an assessed valuation of $3,184,450,991 for all real estate and personal property in Missouri, for 1937 taxes, in a report to the State Board of Equalization, which will fix the final valuations.

The valuation recommended is a reduction of $2,826,939 from the assessment of these classes of property fixed by the Board of Equalization for 1936 taxes.

Assessments will be determined later by the Tax Commission and Board of Equalization for that part of the property of public utilities directly assessed by the State, and for privately owned rolling stock operated on railroads. The total assessed valuation of all property in the State in 1936 was $3,792,474,495.

Recommendations by the commission for 1937 valuations for real estate and personal property were as follows:

Farm land, $944,385,569, a decrease of $12,082,764, or 1.26 per cent, from the 1936 valuation.

Town lots, representing real estate in cities, towns and villages, $1,851,726,650, an increase of $1,576,679, or .08 of 1 per cent, over the 1936 valuation.

Total for farm land and town lots, $2,796,112,219, a reduction of $10,506,085, or .37 of 1 per cent, from the valuation last year.

Personal property, $388,338,772, an increase of $7,679,146, or 2 per cent over the valuation last year.

Assessments recommended for St. Louis were $893,004,080 for real estate and $93,870,610 for personal property. The commission adopted the amounts recommended by the City Assessor. The 1936 valuations for St. Louis were real estate, $895,129,560, and personal property, $92,432,440.

The commission recommendations for St. Louis County were $189,919,107 for farm land and town lots, an increase of $2,588,372 over the total of last year, and $23,429,194 for personal property, an increase of $632,786.

HOLT SAYS C I O SEEKS OVERTHROW OF GOVERNMENT

Senator Adds 'Communist Inspired Order's Main Weapon in Attack on Industry Is Sit-Down.'

ASSERTS LEWIS HAS MANY REDS AS AIDS

Declares Chief Said Several Years Ago That 'Revolutionary Leaders Sought One Big Union.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Senator Rush D. Holt, West Virginia Democrat, attacked the Committee for Industrial Organization today as a "Communist inspired order," and declared "its underlying principle is the ultimate overthrow of the American form of government."

Holt added in a statement, that the C I O seeking enrollment of all workers in industrial unions, has adopted the "sit-down strike" as its "principal weapon" in an "attack upon American industry."

"This weapon, based upon the fundamental Communist doctrine of seizing private property," he declared, "was transported here through Communist demonstrations in France.

"John L. Lewis, who heads this anti-American organization, has enlisted the united support of the Communist party in his revolutionary attack upon American principles of government.

"Outstanding Communists."

"Many of his chief lieutenants are outstanding Communists."

Holt added "these are serious charges, but they are easily proven out of the mouth of John L. Lewis himself."

He asked "is industrial unionism founded on Communist principles," and quoted Lewis as declaring in the United Mine Workers' Journal several years ago:

"The major points in this revolutionary program of the Communists are a well organized movement into a common departmental industrial union, controlled by a single leader of Communistic principles and affiliation, and owing allegiance to the Communistic organization . . . conversion of all craft trade unions into single units of workers within an industry known as industrial unions with coordination under a sub-Soviet union owing allegiance to and accepting the mandates of, the Communist international and those subsidiaries, the Red Trade Union International at Moscow . . . the revolutionary leaders in America are making a nation-wide attempt to obtain control of the American Federation of Labor, reorganizing the craft unions on the basis of one big union in an industry and weld them into a central revolutionary agency in America."

Quotes Lewis Again.

Holt also asked "are the Communists plotting to overthrow our Government by seizing control of the great trades union organizations in America," and quoted Lewis as having said several years ago:

"The purpose of the Communist party is to seize control, if possible, of the great trades union organizations in American and have their power and their influence exercised in such a manner that they can overthrow the Democratic form of government under which we live and substitute therefor the . . . form of government that exists today in woe-begotten Russia."

Holt also referred to John Brophy, and Sidney Hillman, leaders in the C I O drive and declared:

"Here are Communists, denounced a short time ago by Lewis himself, now raised to leaders in the C I O movement. It is an old saying that leopards do not change their spots. Sometimes, leopards are known to have devoured their enemies. It appears to me John L. Lewis either is donning a leopard skin, or he's been devoured by his old enemies, the Communists."

REHEARING MOTION STRUCK OUT FOR 'INSOLENT LANGUAGE'

Attorneys of Girl in Injury Suit Criticised Appeals Court for Granting New Trial.

A motion for a rehearing filed by counsel for Verlyn Collins, a Negro girl, in her damage suit against John S. Leahy, an attorney, was denied yesterday by the St. Louis Court of Appeals. The court also ordered that the motion be struck from the files because of "intemperate and insolent language." The motion was signed by J. Edward Gragg and Robert L. Aronson, plaintiff's attorneys.

The girl was injured in October, 1930, by an automobile driven by Leahy's chauffeur in front of her home, 3704 Finney avenue. A jury verdict for $7500. The verdict was later reduced on appeal to $3500. Subsequently, the Court of Appeals remanded the case for a new trial, holding that the verdict was excessive and was the result of passion and prejudice on the part of the jury. It was on this decision that a motion for rehearing was sought.

The motion criticised the action of the court in granting the new trial.

Raskob's Son's Fiancee

MISS DELORES NORTER, RENO (Nev.) girl whose engagement to Robert P. Raskob, son of John J. Raskob, former National Democratic Committee chairman, was announced at a dinner in Reno last week. Raskob has been in Reno for a year and a half looking after mining interests of his father. The marriage will take place in June.

CLAIM AGAINST CLOSED BANK FORMALLY CHANGED BY DECREE

Supreme Court Reversed Ruling That $26,656 in Chouteau Trust Was Deferred Debt.

In accordance with a decision by the Missouri Supreme Court, a decree was entered yesterday by Circuit Judge O'Neill Ryan establishing a claim of $26,656 held by the Security National Bank Savings & Trust Co., successor trustee, against the closed Chouteau Trust Co. as a general claim. Previously Judge Ryan ruled it should be in the preferred class of claims but the ruling was reversed on appeal by the State Finance Commissioner, who is in charge of liquidating the assets of the Chouteau Trust Co., which closed in January, 1933.

The claim arose from accumulated deposits made at the Chouteau Trust Co. to pay interest when due on a $500,000 dead of trust against the Winston Churchill Apartments, 5475 Cabanne avenue. The Chouteau Trust Co. had acted as trustee under the deed of trust until its failure, when it was succeeded by the Security National.

The latter contended that the interest fund was a special deposit. The Finance Commissioner, through Creighton B. Calfee, liquidating officer, pointed out that the bank was not required under the terms of the deed of trust to hold the deposits in a special fund. The agreement provided, Calfee said, that the trustee could invest the funds. The claim originally was for $27,800 but has been reduced by liquidating payments.

CHORUS TRIALS MAY 3 FOR MUNICIPAL OPERA

Greater Emphasis to Be Placed on Ballet Proficiency This Season.

Ninety-two chorus members for the Municipal Opera will be selected at auditions May 3, 4 and 5, the place to be announced later. Only St. Louisans may compete.

First rehearsals for the chorus will be held Friday, May 7. A ballet master, as well as a regular dance director, will join the production staff for the first time this season. Great emphasis will be placed this year on ballet presentations by the dancing ensembles, because of the large number of colorful light operas and operettas. Both directors will be named soon.

The chorus members, men and women, will be judged on quality of voice, stage presence, appearance and ability. Dancers will be selected for their versatility, appearance and, more closely than in previous seasons, for ballet proficiency. A large number of candidate is indicated by advance inquiries.

Richard Berger, production manager, and his staff will conduct the auditions. Members of the staff who have been re-engaged are Zeke Colvan, stage director; Raymond Sovey, art director, and George Hirst, music director. Their assistants are yet to be chosen.

Casting of principals for the 12 musical productions has begun in New York under Berger's direction.

"The Great Waltz," which has not been presented before at the Municipal Theater, will be the opening production, starting Friday night, June 4. It will be the only show to run 10 days, the others being only for seven.

Four other shows new to Forest Park audiences will be offered. They are the English version of Smetana's comic opera, "The Bartered Bride"; Ziegfeld's musical, "Louie the Fourteenth"; the American premiere of Robert Stolz's operetta, "Wild Violets," and the world premiere of "Salute to Spring."

The revivals will be "The Fortune Teller," "Music in the Air," "The Mikado," "Prince of Pilsen," "Pink Lady," "Robin Hood" and "Babes in Toyland."

Most of last season's ticket holders have renewed their subscriptions. If the requests for season reservations continue at the present rate, the number of season subscribers will be the largest in the history of Municipal Opera, the management announced.

Missing Rented Plane Is Found.

HOUSTON, Tex., March 27.—An airplane sought since a stranger rented it for a 30-minute practice flight Thursday was found today near Camp Bellton, about 60 miles southwest of San Antonio. A detective said the plane was in good condition. The pilot did not give his name when he rented the ship.

NAZIS PROPOSE GAG ON EUROPEAN PRESS

Goebbels Supposed to Be Back of Idea, but It Doesn't Take Hold.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 27.—The Nazi-edited Zwoelf Uhr Blatt came out in a special edition today for measures to "reform" the European press by curtailing its freedom, publishing contributions from 20 editors and an editorial believed to have been penned by Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels. The paper attacked "international press terror" and declared:

"Freedom of the press is, in reality, defended only by reactionaries of a past epoch."

Other newspapers did not take up the cry. It was recalled that although some Nazis long have clamored for a general European "gag rule," international newspaper men have been admonished directly only to be truthful, and have been told that treatment of news must be a matter of "personal discipline."

Wilhelm Weiss, head of the German Confederation, was the guiding spirit of the Zwoelf Uhr Blatt's campaign.

In the introductory editorial, a "noted German authority," believed to be Goebbels, complained about the "anti-German campaign" abroad. It said "crass lies" should be opposed by good will, but, lacking this, "by all the means of power of a modern state."

Among the contributions was one from Virginio Gayda, Italian Fascist writer, who said: "It would be no mistake if the League of Nations would add a special commission to the many existing ones to control the press terror."

The Zwoelf Uhr Blatt pointed out that "Nazi Germany has made it impossible for the German press to slander foreign nations or incite their leaders." It did not mention the "La Guardia incident." Secretary of State Hull apologized twice to Germany for the New York Mayor's aspersions on Reichsfuehrer Hitler. Hull also directed the United States Ambassador to make representations on anti-American articles in the Nazi-controlled press but the articles continued nevertheless.

FORMER NEGRO SLAVE DIES

Mrs. Martha Pettis, Said to Be 100, Buried in National Cemetery.

Mrs. Martha Pettis, a Negro, said by relatives to be 100 years old, was buried yesterday in National Cemetery, Jefferson Barracks, beside her husband, Abram Pettis, a private in the Union Army. She died Tuesday of infirmities of age at her home, 5514 Michigan avenue.

Born in slavery in St. Louis County, she was sold as a child to a Farmington (Mo.) minister and his wife. Her mother and six brothers and sisters were sold to other families when their original owner died.

Surviving are a son, a daughter, 13 grandchildren, 27 great-grandchildren and five great-great-grandchildren.

When you see that tinge of "Pink" act promptly see your dentist—
Don't be a "DENTAL CRIPPLE"
Let this modern dental routine help keep your gums healthy—your teeth sparkling white
Change today TO IPANA AND MASSAGE
HAS YOUR tooth brush flashed that dental warning—that tinge of "pink"? True, it may seem only a small warning...but it's one you definitely can't afford to overlook...it's nature's way of saying "Don't let gum troubles start!" Right then and there you may be drifting into a future dental tragedy—right then and there you may be a "dental cripple" in the making.
At the first sign of "pink tooth brush" —see your dentist! You may not be scheduled for serious gum trouble—but your dentist should make that decision. Usually, however, it's just another case of gums robbed of work by our modern, soft-food menus. Gums denied the natural resistance of coarse, hard foods... gums that, as many dentists will tell you, need "the stimulating help of Ipana and massage."
Ipana and massage is a modern way of helping to promote solid, healthy gums—as well as sparkling, lustrous teeth. Rub a little extra Ipana on your gums each time you brush your teeth. Gradually you'll feel those lazy gums awaken. Circulation quickens. They grow firmer. They become healthier, more able to resist dental disorders.
Change to Ipana and massage, today. Adopt this oral health routine and make your smile one you can be proud of—a smile that's brilliant, gay, sparkling white.
Remember A good tooth paste, like a good dentist, is never a luxury.

ANTS ACCUSED MEN OUSTED AS EXECUTORS

John P. Molloy Files Motion to Remove McMenamy and Walsh.

A motion was filed in Probate Court yesterday by John P. Molloy, assistant city jailer, seeking removal of Malcolm McMenamy and Alphonse J. Walsh as executors of the $200 estate of his mother, Mrs. Catherine Molloy, who died in December, 1934. McMenamy and Walsh, whose interlocking real estate interests have attracted official attention recently, have been charged with embezzlement in the investigation of their affairs.

They were appointed executors without bond. Molloy's motion asserts that they are incapable of carrying out the trust imposed in them, are unsuitable for it. It also asserts that they have failed to discharge their official duties, and says that unless they are removed immediately waste of the assets will occur. Molloy and a sister are principal beneficiaries of the estate.

A motion by Molloy for removal of the executors was overruled by Probate Judge Glendy B. Arnold in October, the court holding that a showing of diversity of interest in their part was insufficient, although they were officers of firms in which funds of the estate were invested. Judge Arnold said 10 days ago that he had ordered McMenamy and Walsh to make a settlement of the estate last January but that they had not done so, McMenamy explaining he had been delayed by illness.

POPE TO BLESS THRONG IN ROME THIS MORNING

First Public Appearance Since Start of His Illness in December.

By the Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, March 27. — Elaborate precautions were taken tonight to protect the frail health of Pope Pius XI in St. Peter's on Easter morning, his first public appearance since the start of his illness last December.

For the benediction he expects to give the throngs outside St. Peter's, a huge wooden structure has been built behind the balcony on which he will stand—simply to shield him from currents of air.

Double folds of velvet curtains, 40 or 50 feet high, were placed behind the main altar in the cathedral for the same purpose, during the Easter mass.

A special stand has been built beside the throne, so the pontiff may descend from the portable throne on which he is carried to the mass and mount to the permanent throne at the main altar without unnecessary exertion. His physician, Dr. Aminta Milani, will be with him throughout the ceremony.

"Gloria in Excelsis."

Today, the Easter pilgrims and hundreds of tourists heard the bells of hundreds of churches—silent since Holy Thursday—ring forth in honor of the "Gloria in Excelsis"—an anthem sung within cathedrals and churches to prepare the faithful for celebration of Christ's resurrection.

In one of the picturesque ceremonies marking the end of the 40-day lenten period, Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli struck sparks from flint and steel to light the "new fire" of St. Peter's basilica, symbolizing the advent of the resurrection.

Paschal candles were lighted in all churches altars draped in somber black and purple were re-decorated with their white and gold ornaments.

Hundreds of new priests were ordained throughout Italy as a part of joyful Holy Saturday ceremonies.

Among those ordained in Rome were the erstwhile American students of the Propaganda Fide (propagation of the faith) college, Fathers Joseph E. Cieslukowski and Francis J. Flynn of Grand Rapids, Mich., and Father Pius A. Benincasa of Buffalo, N. Y.

Largest Candle in Rome.

The largest paschal candle seen in Rome was that blessed by Cardinal Pacelli and given to the Pope. It was eight feet tall and three inches in diameter and ornately decorated in gilded wax petals.

Holy Saturday was a day of rejoicing throughout the land. Paschal processions were held even in the smallest villages. Priests went from home to home sprinkling holy water on portals, living rooms and objects of daily household use. Little girls held up their dolls to receive the absolving drops.

In Florence, crowds frantically cheered a pyrotechnic display. The explosion of a sacred cart drawn by two white oxen with gilded hoofs—indicating to peasants they would have excellent crops.

Cardinal Pacelli will celebrate the special Easter mass at St. Peter's tomorrow, to be attended by thousands of people who will see members of the diplomatic corps and the entire papal court arrayed in full dress uniforms.

The Pope will celebate private mass in his apartment, then appear briefly on St. Peter's balcony upon conclusion of the basilica ceremonies.

Burial of Congressman's Mother.

GOLCONDA, Ill., March 27.—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow for Mrs. Tennessee Parsons, widow, aged mother of Claude V. Parsons, Congressman for the Twenty-fourth District. Parsons, called from Washington, reached Golconda yesterday an hour after his mother's death.

LIABILITY LIMIT IN BURNING OF LINER MORRO CASTLE

U. S. Judge Knox at New York Approves $290,000 Figure; 400 Death and Injury Claims.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Federal Judge John C. Knox affirmed today a settlement in effect since Sept. 10, 1936, limiting liability in the steamship Morro Castle disaster to $290,000.

George W. Betts, chairman of the Morro Castle committee which will determine about 400 individual death and injury claims growing out of the ship's burning Sept. 8, 1934, said the settlement amount had been accepted by more than 95 per cent of the claimants.

Judge Knox' order was signed on application of the AGWI Navigation Co. and the New York & Cuba Mail Steamship Co., formerly known as the Ward Line, operators of the vessel.

Betts said the committee expects to sit for several months to consider claims arising from the disaster which took 132 lives when the ship burned off the New Jersey coast.

WHO'D EVER THINK IT? 5-tube console at this price . . . we got to move them just to make room for others; can you stay away? — $19.88

WE THOUGHT THAT THESE! Should be in the open. 3-pc. garden set; a wow at $1.39; a regular whoopee at — 79c

MAYBE WE'RE CRAZY! We bought these lathes discontinued numbers, and can't sell them at $12.95. So, here goes some of our profit, at — $9.95

WHAT A BREAK FOR YOU! But only 5 $49.95 electric ranges. Yes, they're good, but last year's models and floor samples; now marked — $49.95

THERE JUST ISN'T ANY JUSTICE! No, you can't get South America on this radio. But if you want a small set for your bedroom or camp, you're foolish not to jump at this 4-tube. Formerly $8.95. — $5.95

SLEEPING SICKNESS! On our shelves, these men's robes were "Walkouts" at $2.98. Now you benefit because we've made them "Throw-Outs" at — $1.98

IT'S BREAKING OUR HEART! These men's shirts were "lulus" at $1.29 and $1.95. But somehow or other they didn't sell . . . perhaps they will now. — $1.00

WE KISS 175 GOOD-BY! Our buyer thought he was good. He paid $1.29 for these QUALITY men's shirts, now they're slightly soiled, but you only pay — 50c

OUT WITH THEM! We bought just 50 pairs of men's pigskin gloves to sell at $1.98. If you have the heart and want to buy "ahead of time" you'll save. Formerly $1.98. — $1.00

WE CLOSE OUR EYES! When we marked these men's suits down from $19.75 . . . yes, the sizes are broken, only 15 left, but it will pay you to shop. — $10.88

WHO'D EVER BELIEVE IT! Values to $11.45. 50 boys' 2-pants longie suits in broken sizes and if we can fit you, you'll get a "dandy" 2 long pant suit for only — $6.99

THESE NEED THE AIR! We sold plenty of boys' knickers at $1.59 . . . but we ordered too many. So, we're stuck, and if your boy could use 3 pair at this price — $1.28 Pr.

ALAS, AND ALACK! Who'd ever think these jacket style bolero and peasant $2.98 and $3.95 dresses would come to such an end. Sizes for misses and women. — $2.44

SAD NEWS FOR US! The buyer just couldn't sleep at night, so he decided to reduce these $1.50—20x36 oval carpet samples to clear his conscience. — 69c

BUYING BLINDFOLDED! But you can see with your eyes open that these bedroom vanities that we bought to sell at $35 are real buys at — $14.95

WE GOT STUCK ON THIS! But you've got lots of things to paste up around the house. You can buy this 10c Dennison glue for — 5c

THERE'S A LONG, LONG TRAIL! Awinding, and that's our 36-inch lingerie taffeta; 2 and 10 yard lengths in lingerie shades. It's just got to stop winding, so take it for only — 19c Yd.

WE'RE KICKING IN WITH! Children's shoes; regular $1.00 quality, but our new merchandise manager says, "They must go, quickly." — 79c

IT'S STRAIGHT STUFF! We told you we'd tell the truth. We bought these women's felt slippers for Xmas selling. Real comfort for the house and what "a comfortable price." — 29c

OH, MY GOSH! Imagine being able to pick-up a PERFECT electric kitchen clock for this price. It gives us the blues to mark them to — 66c

GOOD-BYE—GOOD BUYS! We just got caught short. Frankly, we reduced these compacts once before, unless we're crazy they'll go at this "lowest in our history price." — 17c

HICKORY, DICKORY, DOCK If you need a new clock, you're lucky! We've reduced our regular $2.98 mantal electric and winders. Only a few to wind up at — $2.29

NO LUCK, NO CHANCE: Just a case of optimism. We bought too many—to sell at 20c . . . man look at the price. Catalin salt and pepper shakers. — 15c Pr.

EH! WHAT, WATSON: These Seminole sheets, 63x93 size, were just soiled by handling, but a little water and soap makes them worth 98c again. Yours for only — 69c

STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER: That's the truth about this merchandise . . . garter girdles . . . small sizes, 26 and 27, only. Formerly 29c . . . marked to — — 10c

CREEPIN' IN: Here is a value that just must creep in this list. Creepers size 3 only that sold formerly for 39c. — 23c

OPEN YOUR EYES: And see these values . . . women's silk pongee. Puerto Rican 2-piece pajamas that sold regularly at $1.00, now — 84c

NO SLIPS ON THESE: Only a few left . . . assorted rayon lingerie . . . Panties, Vests, Briefs, Bloomers that sold up to 29c; marked down to — 19c

IS YOUR SIZE HERE? 40-42 and 44 silk crepe slips that will make you happy . . . sold regularly at $1.19, now — 84c

WHAT A VALUE: Come in and see for yourself . . . women's knit rayon gowns that must go. A 69c value. Broken sizes, and we hope you're lucky?! — 49c

CAN WE FIT YOU? If we can here is a clearance item that's a whirlwind! Women's full-fashioned silk hosiery in 8½ and 10½ only . . . marked from 59c to — 44c

FEDERAL JUDGES DISCUSS ASSIGNMENT OF COLLET

New Jurist, Judge Otis Says, Will Handle Cases in Both Missouri Districts.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 27.—Missouri's five Federal Judges met here today to discuss duties of Judge John Caskie Collet, whose appointment recently was confirmed by the United States Senate, but who is awaiting his formal commission from President Roosevelt.

Judge Merrill E. Otis of the Western District announced following the conference that Judge Collet would handle one-fifth of all the cases in both the Eastern and Western Missouri districts. Judges Charles B. Davis and George H. Moore of the Eastern District came here from St. Louis to meet with Judges Albert L. Reeves and Otis of the Western District and Judge Collet.

Judge Collet will preside at Jefferson City, where Judge Otis previously has presided. Judge Otis said Judge Collet probably would be assigned to assist in the event of a crowded docket in the outlying divisions. It was stated he probably would be called on to preside from time to time in the Cape Girardeau and Hannibal divisions as well as in the St. Louis division of the Eastern District.

It was indicated that Judge Collet would be given the oath before Judge Reeves, who is the senior District Judge of the State.

MASON ASSERTS NOLTE GETS TOO MUCH CREDIT

Aldermen's President Says Comptroller Has No Power to Prevent Expenditures.

Denial that Comptroller Louis Nolte, Republican candidate for reelection, was able, by virtue of powers of his office, to prevent any municipal expenditures or was entitled to sole recognition for preserving the city's credit was made in a radio address last night by President William L. Mason of the Board of Aldermen.

Mason and Mayor Dickmann for the last two years have formed the Democratic majority of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, the city's fiscal body, Nolte being the third member. Mason's speech was in support of the candidacy of Lawrence Boogher, Democratic nominee for Comptroller.

"Some campaign utterances might lead the uninformed to believe Nolte was responsible for everything good accomplished and prevention of anything bad, but with no responsibility for the waste and inefficiency which has been inflicted on the city during his incumbency by his own political associates," Mason declared. He said Nolte, for lack of power, was not entitled to credit for progressive measures under the Dickmann administration.

"Purely Advisory Powers."

All appropriations must be by ordinance in the Board of Aldermen and, if they are for legal purposes, the Comptroller cannot prevent their use, Mason continued, pointing out that the Comptroller has only one of the three votes on the Board of Estimate, which also passes on appropriations. "With the Board of Aldermen and the Board of Estimate as now constituted, the powers of the Comptroller so far as expenditures are concerned, are purely advisory," the speaker remarked.

There was no reason why Boogher would not make a good Comptroller, Mason declared, and the Democrats intended to maintain the city's excellent credit. Nolte's supporters were spreading the idea that Nolte alone was responsible for the good financial standing of St. Louis, but "nothing could be farther from the truth," Mason asserted.

The Democratic campaign claim that Mayor Dickmann had saved nearly $9,000,000 in municipal expenditures in his term, as compared with the preceding four years under Mayor Miller, Republican, was repeated by the aldermanic president, who added: "That has been done, not because of any restraint imposed on us by the Comptroller, but because of the honesty and thrift of the Mayor, his able department heads and the general exercise by all classes of city employes of the same qualities throughout the service, and because we, the Democratic majority in the Board of Aldermen and Board of Estimate, have in the interest of economy imposed the most rigid restraint upon ourselves."

Refers Back to 1917.

Credit was given Nolte for the fact that the per capita public debt of St. Louis was $94.07, compared with an average of $196.65 for American cities, but, Mason went on, it would be impossible to increase the debt here beyond about $100 per capita because of constitutional limitations. When Nolte took office in 1917, succeeding the late James Y. Player, a Democrat, city bonds were selling at a premium and the city credit was substantially as good as today, the speaker said.

"Under the Charter," said Mason, "the Mayor is the chief executive, with the power and duty to exercise general supervision over all the executive departments, including the department handling the city's fiscal affairs."

The Charter says that the Mayor shall exercise all executive powers, except as otherwise provided by the law or the Charter. It makes the Comptroller the head of the Finance Department, including the assessment, collection, treasury and supply divisions, and gives him general supervision over all these divisions. The Charter also gives him general supervision over all fiscal affairs and charges him with preserving the city's credit.

RAILROAD SUED FOR $95,000 OVER DEATH OF SWITCHMAN

Widow of Emery Deal, Killed in 1935 Accident, Seeks Damages Under Federal Act.

Suit for $95,000 damages was filed in Federal Court yesterday under the Federal Employers' Liability Act against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad by Mrs. Mayola Deal for the death of her husband, Emery Deal.

Deal, a switchman, was killed April 12, 1935, in the railroad yards at Evansville, Ind., when, it is alleged, he was thrown from the top of a freight car by the action of a defective brake he was trying to operate. Mrs. Deal, who is suing as administratrix of her husband's estate, has two daughters.

Counsel for Mrs. Deal is Charles P. Noell, who is suspended from practice in the State courts. Federal Judge Davis last month dismissed a suit to disbar Noell in Federal Court, holding that the adoption by the State Court of a special commissioner's report in its disbarment proceedings against Noell without hearing the defendant's exceptions was such a failure of due process of law as to prevent a Federal Court from giving full faith to the State Court's judgment. United States Attorney Harry C. Blanton has appealed from Judge Davis' ruling to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

PART TWO — ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 28, 1937. — PAGES 1—4B

SOCIALISTS DEBATE INDORSING CIO UNIONS

Norman Thomas "Personally Favors" Lewis Group; Convention Defers Action.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Socialist leaders debated behind closed doors tonight their party's attitude toward the A. F. of L. and C I O fight and a farmers' and workers' party alignment. Test votes were scheduled but formal action on all resolutions was deferred until Sunday's sessions of the special national convention.

Daniel W. Hoan, Milwaukee Socialist Mayor, arrived unexpectedly at the convention today following reports the Wisconsin delegation would protest against an attempt by an Eastern bloc to have the convention indorse John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization.

Mayor Hoan remained only for the morning session, returning to Milwaukee in mid-afternoon before start of the debate on whether the party should take sides on the union issue.

Prospects of a CIO indorsement increased when Norman Thomas, party leader, said he "personally favors industrial unions" and that he thought the CIO had made "wonderful progress" toward organization in major industries.

Hoan made only the passing comment that he, too, favored industrial unionism, but that he thought "the Wisconsin Federation of Labor (A. F. of L. branch) is a fine bunch."

Carl Minkley, Socialist secretary in Wisconsin, continued to declare his opposition to either a CIO or A. F. of L. indorsement. He said, however, talk of the Wisconsin delegation bolting was "a lot of nonsense."

CROWDS SEE JUDGING OF DOGS AT ARENA

Finest Exhibit to Be Selected Tonight, When the Show Will Close.

Champions and sons of champions, dogs of proud lineage from all over the country, held the stage at The Arena yesterday as the twenty-fifth annual show of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club got under way before one of the largest crowds ever to witness a dog show here.

From the time the exhibition opened in the morning until the first day's judging ended last night the aisles and spaces about the judging rings were crowded.

There was plenty for spectators to see, for the more than 670 dogs on exhibition come from some of the finest kennels in the country, represent 45 breeds. The climax of the two-day show will come tonight with the selection of the finest dog of them all.

The dogs were as diverse as the spectators, tranquil eyed sporting dogs, zippy terriers full of nervous energy, pedigreed poodles, placid St. Bernards.

The show this year, which is sponsored by the St. Louis Junior League, adopted the eastern vogue of open benches. That is, the dogs are displayed in partitions with no bars between them and the spectators. They show to much better advantage than formerly.

The popular trend in dogs changes from season to season. This year more cocker spaniels are entered than any other breed. There are an even 100 cocker spaniels while Kerry Blue Terriers and Sealyhams are unusually well represented.

Specialty Events.

Specialty events included contests in the proper handling of dogs. Children of Junior League members competed in one ring with two-year-old Mahlon B. Wallace III, winning one class. Grace Niedringhaus, 10, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion W. Niedringhaus, won another, and Lila Jones, 14-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Meredith C. Jones, was adjudged the most proficient handler among children from 11 to 14 years of age.

Miss Abigail Gross of Villa Duchesne, won the school and college handling class.

A picturesque competition entitled "The Lady and Her Dog," in which entrants were costumed to represent the nations in which the dogs they exhibited originated, was won by Mrs. Joseph L. Needham. She wore a German costume and showed a Doberman Pinscher.

One of the exhibits was a selection of dog drawings by school children. Prize winners, in their respective age groups, were Julia Delaloye of Hawthorne School and Lee Drummond and Betty Bolin, both of Mary Institute.

Results of Judging.

Major results yesterday were:

Golden retrievers: Best male and best of breed, Bingo of Yelme, owned by John K. Wallace; best female, Speedwell Tango, from the same kennel.

Doberman Pinschers: Best male, Horst v. Gerdts, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Gerdts, Davenport, Ia.; best female, Antonia v. Dormunheim, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Gutheil, Indianapolis, Ind.; best of breed, Falko v. Lindenhof, owned by Charles W. Bradley, Winnetka, Ill.

6 KILLED IN MEXICO IN POLITICAL FIGHT

Clash in Tabasco Connected With Rumors Ex-Dictator May Return.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO, D. F., March 27.—Gov. Victor Fernandez Manero of Tabasco announced here tonight he had been notified six men were killed and two wounded today in fighting in his State growing out of local political differences.

Earlier reports placed the number of dead at 12, in the encounter, which occurred at the Cuauhtemoc ranch village near Centla. This version, which was unconfirmed, said machine guns were turned on workmen returning from a political rally.

The Governor announced that in response to his telegraphed inquiry the municipal president of the town of Alvaro Obregon informed him the dead numbered six, with one man missing. The report said shooting started after Candelario Mexquita, chief of police at Cuauhtemoc, tried to break up an unauthorized political meeting. Mexquita was one of those killed.

Afternoon newspapers connected the Tabasco killings with reported agitation there arising out of rumors that Tomas Garrido Canabal, once dictator of Tabasco, now an exile in Costa Rica, was planning to return to Mexico and re-enter politics.

Posters extolling Garrido Canabal appeared yesterday in several places in this city, only to be torn down quickly.

NEW WARSHIP ARMORED AGAINST AIR ATTACKS

Navy to Ask for Bids From Private Firms on $60,000,000 Vessel Tuesday.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Bids on a new warship armored against attack from the air as well as sea will be asked for Tuesday by the Navy.

The ship will be of 35,000 tons, costing about $60,000,000. It will be the first battleship the country has built in 20 years. The award for construction will be made to a private shipbuilding yard about June 2 and work will begin around July 1.

Wholly New Line of International Trucks Announced

Sales and Advertising Plans Also Explained at Meeting of Dealers Here.

An entirely new line of International trucks, ranging from one-two tons to heavy duty six-wheeler models, was announced here Wednesday at a meeting of 300 dealers and members of the company's truck sales organization held at Hotel Chase. Sales and advertising plans for the rest of the year also were discussed.

E. A. Dunsmoor, branch manager, gave a talk on the expansion of research and engineering laboratory facilities at International Harvester's truck factory at Fort Wayne, Ind., including the construction last year of a large, new, modern proving ground devoted entirely to truck testing.

Manufacturing facilities at the two big truck works at Fort Wayne and Springfield, O., were enlarged by addition of new buildings and new, modern machine equipment. At Fort Wayne, an axle manufacturing unit with 125,000 square feet of floor space was built. Engine production departments were also enlarged.

At the Springfield works, where light-duty International trucks are manufactured, new buildings with more than 300,000 square feet of floor space were erected. These included a new assembly unit, one of the most modern in the automotive industry. There are three parallel assembly lines, each nearly 1200 feet long. Other new buildings provide greatly increased cab, body and sheet-metal parts production and painting facilities.

The meeting was one of 89 similar meetings held the same day at International Harvester branches preliminary to public announcement of the new trucks.

When advertising programs for the year were presented, special emphasis was placed on the value of local newspaper advertising.

Diamond Pins Awards to 12 Salesmen for Safe Driving of Cars

As part of a nationwide safety campaign involving 3500 salesmen, 750 of whom have driven five years without accidents, Raymond Hoffman, manager of the St. Louis Safety Council, presented to 12 men diamond pins symbolic of their safe driving records. The presentations were made on behalf of the Continental Baking Co. at a dinner meeting held at the Fairgrounds Hotel.

Five salesmen received four year awards, five received three year awards and 15 received one and two years awards.

This local ceremony was duplicated in almost 100 cities in which the company operates. On the first of the year, 750 of its salesmen throughout the country qualified for the five year award. The firm says that by the end of 1937, 1010 salesmen,—29 per cent will be eligible for the honor. These men will not have been responsible for a single accident in five years.

Independent Tire Dealers Will Meet Tomorrow Morning

National Officer to Explain and Discuss Fair Trade Rules Approved by F T C.

The Missouri independent tire dealers will meet at Hotel Statler at 10 a. m. tomorrow to hear an address by George J. Burger, secretary and general manager of the National Association of Independent Tire Dealers, who is making a nationwide trip to talk with dealer groups.

A. P. Woehrle, State director of the association, says that Burger will discuss the fair trade rules recently approved by the Federal Trade Commission as coming under the Clayton and Robinson-Patman Act. Woehrle declares that these rules, the first offered to be approved under the joint act of Congress, will make it difficult to start price wars.

Burger will also speak on the Patman Act, which the national association supported, and what independent tire dealers have gained by the enactment of this legislation.

Burger is expected to give firsthand information as to activities in Akron, O., and plans and policies at Washington that have a bearing on fair and competitive conditions.

Studebaker Checking Car Paint Thickness With Electrical Gauge

An electrical gadget, so sensitive that it can measure to the "nth degree" the thickness of paint or lacquer on steel, is being used to check the perfection of the many coats of lacquer on Studebaker cars, according to Jack Ashner, general manager for Arthur R. Lindburg, Inc., Studebaker distributer in this area.

The Studebaker factory has found the gauge of great service in establishing an accurate check on the thickness of lacquer on all parts of an automobile body as it emerges with the final coat.

Drivers Report Gas Mileage on Trip From Detroit to Oreg

Two 1937 Ford V-8 Tudor sedans with the new 60-horsepower engine, the other with the 85-horsepower engine, recently were driven from Detroit to Portland, Ore., over and zero temperatures over kinds of roads. Performance records were kept for the total distance of 4044 miles.

Harvey Commons, Oregon garage owner, said he drove the distance in his "60" Ford sedan, averaging 19.3 miles to a gallon of gasoline. G. Gansle, Oregon farmer, accompanied Commons all the way. said his "85" averaged 19.6 miles to the gallon. Both cars were driven the same distance each day at an average speed of 40 to 45 miles per hour, they reported.

A daily accounting was kept by the drivers, who said they had officials of the Detroit Automobile Club and the Oregon State Motor Association check the figures. Standard gasoline was used throughout the trip. Amounts were checked by using credit cards for all purchases. The complete report of the trip was presented to the Portland branch of the Ford Motor Co.

Chevrolet Truck Completes Test Run of 10,244 Miles

Driven Around U. S.—Average of 20.74 Miles to Gallon of "Gas" Certified.

The second annual safety and economy test run conducted by the Chevrolet Motor Division of General Motors Sales Corporation under official sanction of the American Automobile Association contest board was recently completed after a 10,000-mile tour around the rim of the United States.

The run was made in a half-ton commercial pick-up truck carrying a certified pay load of 1000 pounds. Driven by Harry Harts, veteran racing driver, the truck met every kind of road and weather condition during the trip.

The certificate issued was based on a day-by-day report made by Stanley Reed, official A. A. A. observer, who accompanied Harts throughout the trip. The official figures showed an average of 20.74 miles to the gallon of gasoline at an average speed of 31.18 miles an hour for the 10,244.5 miles of the run.

The truck was selected from the regular Chevrolet assembly line at Flint, Mich., by Reed and Eric von Hambach, regional representative of the A. A. A. Motor, transmission, rear axle, hood and gasoline tank filler were sealed before the truck left Detroit, Dec. 12. Reed broke the seals when necessary for refueling, keeping an accurate record of all gasoline and oil that went into the car.

The entire run, according to the official certificate, consumed 493.8 gallons of gasoline and seven and one-half quarts of oil for a total fuel cost of $101. The running time for the more than 10,000 miles was 328 hours and 31 minutes. The oil was changed twice during the trip to allow for climatic conditions, once at San Francisco and the second time at Wilmington, Del.

Faster Air Service From Coast to Coast Will Start on May 15

Faster air passenger service across the United States in the new T W A luxury sky sleepers over the shortest and fastest coast to coast route will be inaugurated May 15, John B. Walker, traffic vice-president, announces.

"The speed of the craft fully loaded to its 24,800 pound capacity, is 218 miles an hour. With one engine, the speed is 128 miles an hour, more than half its high speed, at a ceiling of 8500 feet," said Harlan Hull, T W A chief pilot, a member of the test flight crew. "Absolute ceiling is 24,000 feet and on one motor with normal operating load the ceiling is 10,500 feet."

Millions of Miles of Cotton Cord in Automobile Tires

More than 30,000,000 miles of cotton cord, enough to circle the earth 1200 times, will be used this year in building tires in the Detroit plant of United States Rubber Products, Inc.

Tires depend on their cotton cord body for their strength. While a car actually rides on the air in your inflated inner tubes, it is the body of the tire which supplies the strength to carry the weight of the car. At the same time, this body must be flexible and shock-absorbing.

There are thousands of cords in a tire body, built up layer by layer to provide four, six, eight plies or more of safety cords, with each ply running at cross angles from its neighbor to give balanced strength and uniform flexing action.

GOV. RIVERS ASSAILS 'CROCHETS' OF JUDGES

One of Four Executives of Southern States to Speak for Court Plan.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTA, Ga., March 27.—Four Southern Governors joined tonight in a radio appeal for enactment of President Roosevelt's court remaking scheme as the best way to solve conflicts between judiciary decisions and administration desires. The four were Gov. Bibb Graves of Alabama, Gov. E. D. Rivers of Georgia, Gov. Richard W. Leche of Louisiana and Gov. Olin Johnston of South Carolina.

Speaking on the nation-wide hookup, Gov. Rivers who campaigned on a pro-Roosevelt platform, said he favored the President's program "because the Supreme Court as now constituted seems determined to frustrate every effort" to "correct evils" in the existing social and economic system.

He described the proposed changes as "unexciting and harmless as a twice-told tale" and suggested such alterations were sometimes necessary "to bring the court abreast of public opinion."

The question confronting the people, Rivers added, "is whether laws passed by Congress and approved by the Congress in response to public demand" are to be interpreted according to the spirit of "liberty and democracy or in accordance with the personal crochets of outmoded Judges."

"All Supreme and No Court."

Gov. Graves, one of the first Southern Governors to voice approval of the Roosevelt proposal, referred to Chief Justice Hughes' recently published letter saying additional Justices of the Supreme Court would not increase its efficiency.

"This illuminating statement of the Chief Justice showing such a remarkable dispatch of business makes one wonder why the delay in the important cases concerning people compared with the dispatch in so many cases concerning 'things,'" Graves asserted.

Gov. Leche said "the real basis of the present issue is neither legal nor constitutional but ecomonic."

He said that "when banks, not poor folks, got Federal money there was no talk of 'strain' on the Constitution.

"It was only when relief was sought to be given at the bottom," he continued, "when the Government money was paid in sums of $20 and $30 a month to the poor citizen, that the Constitution became affected.

"When the economic royalty was pried loose from the receiving end it was then only the great principles of our forefathers became involved and the Constitution became endangered."

Doctrine of "Our Enemies."

Gov. Johnston said there was an "evergrowing demand in my part of the country that the issue be decided at this session of Congress."

"This is no time to return to the ancient doctrine of our enemies that it is best to do nothing," he added.

"It is the privilege of the overwhelming majority of the nation," said Johnston, " to expect that the National Government will carry out the mandate expressed by the voters of our nation on three successive occasions.

"This is true no matter what the issue may be since no one can contend that in a democracy such as ours a minority can continue to block the will of the people so insistently and repeatedly expressed."

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN

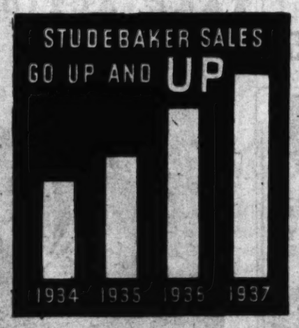
Please take note of these challenging assertions

1. The Studebaker Dictator is America's finest six-cylinder car.
2. The Studebaker Dictator with overdrive is matched in gasoline economy only by the three cars of lowest price.
3. The Studebaker State President Eight offers performance and luxury that cost hundreds of dollars more in other cars.
4. Studebaker cars have the strongest, safest, quietest steel bodies ever constructed.
5. Studebaker cars are built by the best craftsmen in the automotive industry—a group of men with a guild tradition extending back for 85 years.
6. Studebaker is the only car with doors that close lightly, tightly and silently on rattle-proof rotary latches—the first car with such innovations as the automatic hill holder and the thrifty Fram oil and motor cleaner.

We challenge any impartial agency to investigate the above assertions. These advantages, plus brilliant style, explain the fact that Studebaker sold 76% more cars in the United States in 1936 than in 1935. Visit any Studebaker showroom listed below and ask them to let you look at "The Inside Story of the 1937 Studebakers."

THE STUDEBAKER CORPORATION

ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH



Studebaker is marching ahead more brilliantly today than at any time in its 85-year history. In 1936, Studebaker sales of passenger cars in the United States alone were 76% ahead of 1935. And now come the figures for 1937. The chart at the left shows Studebaker sales by years up to March first. Look how 1937 Studebaker sales are soaring above even record-breaking 1936. Motorists everywhere every day are calling the exciting new 1937 Studebaker Dictators and Presidents America's spotlight cars. You buy a popular favorite when you buy a Studebaker. See it today!

CANADIAN BOARD OPPOSES USE OF LETHAL CHAMBER

Parliamentary Investigators Find That Hanging, Now Used, Is Greater Deterrent to Crime.

(Copyright, 1937.)

TORONTO, Ont., March 27. — A special parliamentry committee named to consider an amendment to the Canadian criminal code to substitute the lethal chamber for the gallows has decided that "hanging is a greater deterrent to crime than other forms of capital punishment" and also that "hanging is no more inhumane than the lethal chamber."

Because of the effect on the public mind of certain mistakes that had occurred in hanging—two decapitations having occurred in recent years—the committee recommended that executions be carried out in central places in each province.

"These errors," the committee reported to Parliament, "created a revulsion of public feeling, and no doubt are largely responsible for the present investigation. In the opinion of the committee, the mistakes made were unfortunate, and it is recommended that the Attorney-General of each province take whatever steps may be necessary to prevent a recurrence of such regrettable incidents."

Investigation of lethal chambers in the United States showed that it took from 12 to 15 minutes from the time the condemned person entered the death cell until he was pronounced dead.

"The ordeal of the lethal chamber would appear to be about the same length of time as hanging," the report states. "The committee feels there is nothing in the evidence to show that the lethal chamber has any advantage over hanging in regard to length of time in connection with the death penalty."

Methods in Nevada, Arizona, Colorado, Wyoming and North Carolina were the subject of a Department of Justice inquiry, and the wardens in Nevada, Colorado and Wyoming unanimously agreed that lethal gas was the "most humane method yet devised."

"There is some difference of opinion as to its humaneness, but no possibility of mistake," the North Carolina warden wrote. Nevada's warden said: "As there is nothing to prove hanging is a deterrent to crime, so there is nothing to prove the lethal chamber is a deterrent."

It was found that the installation was inexpensive. Nevada (1924), and Arizona (1933) spent $250 each; Colorado (1934), and North Carolina (1935) spent $2500 each, and Wyoming (1935) $1000.

From Toronto's Deputy Sheriff Wills, who has witnessed Toronto's 11 hangings in the last 20 years, came a plea for a change in method of execution because, he said, he was always fearful of decapitation. A drug always is offered to prisoners an hour before, he said. Death occurs 10 to 17 minutes after the drop through the trap.

LAST FLOOD REFUGEES LEAVE CITY FOR HOMES

260 of 404 Families That Came Here Were Handled on Relief Basis.

The last of 404 flood refugee families who were cared for in St. Louis by the Red Cross went back last week to their homes, or to Red Cross shelters near their homes pending completion of arrangements for their rehabilitation, St. Louis Chapter of the Red Cross announced yesterday.

During their stay in St. Louis, which began late in February, they were quartered with friends or relatives or in rooming houses where the Red Cross paid their rent. Some received only incidental attention or service, but 260 families were assisted on a relief basis. The cost was about $5000.

Flood waters have now receded throughout the affected area and efforts of the Red Cross are being directed toward helping those whose homes were damaged or ruined to get a new start. The St. Louis Chapter was informed by national headquarters that 214,792 families have applied for assistance in rehabilitating their farms and homes.

KILLS SELF IN SANITARIUM

Retired Army Major Found Dying by Nurse in San Antonio.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 27. —Major O. J. Monger, 44-year-old retired army officer, died in a sanitarium today from a bullet wound in the abdomen. Justice Raymond Gehardt decided it was suicide. Monger was found in a dying condition in one of the hospital rooms by a nurse.

Judge Gebhardt returned the suicide verdict following an inquest in which he examined Dr. John W. Kenney, operator of the sanitarium, and Mrs. Wilma Weed, a nurse. Dr. Kenney said Monger came to the sanitarium March 15.

WABASH ADVERTISING MANAGER

Robert A. Willier, former head of the Washington University publicity bureau, has been named general advertising agent for the Wabash Railway. He succeeds Ludwig Rausch, who will retire Thursday.

Rausch was head of the advertising department for 34 years and an employe of the railroad 43 years. He began as a clerk in the ticket office in Chicago.

UNIVERSITY CITY FIREMAN QUITS AND ACCUSES CHIEF

Charges Political Pressure by Michael J. Lyons Caused Him to Resign After 9 Years.

George H. Edwards, a University City fireman for nine years until last Wednesday when he turned in his badge, charged in a letter to Fire Chief Michael J. Lyons, made public yesterday that he had resigned because of political pressure on the part of the Chief.

The letter declared Lyons complained to Edwards that Mrs. Edwards was campaigning against Alderman Matt C. Fogerty, who is running for Mayor, and that Lyons advised Edwards to "get straightened out" with Fogerty. Edwards told reporters his wife had not been campaigning.

Lyons denied making the statements attributed to him and said Edwards refused to give a reason for resigning at the time he turned in his badge. Fogerty said he knew nothing of the matter and added it appeared Edwards had been "coaxed" to resign to lay a foundation for charges by Fogerty's opponents that city employes were being coerced to work for Fogerty.

John Phiambolis, publicity man for Eugene D. Ruth Jr., Fogerty's opponent, denied Edwards' resignation and letter were inspired by the Ruth organization, but said he had helped rewrite the letter because of the nature of the language in the original draft.

CITIZENS' SCHOOL BOARD COMMITTEE SLATE IS NAMED

Action by Executive Group Is First Taken by Organization in Current Campaign.

A slate of candidates for the Board of Education was approved by the Executive Committee of the Citizens' School Board Committee, at luncheon at the Busy Bee tearoom yesterday.

Those on the slate were Mrs. Haymer Lowenhaupt and Richard Murphy, incumbents, for the two Democratic full terms; Emil J. Barth, incumbent, and Charles H. Hilmer, for the two Republican full terms, and Dr. Rudolph Hofmeister for the Democratic unexpired term.

The several hundred members of the general committee will be notified of the recommendations and asked to express approval. They represent various organizations. Formation of the slate was the first action in the current campaign by the committee, which two years ago campaigned for four candidates for the board, all of whom were defeated. Thomas F. Quinn, who was on the committee's 1935 slate, was appointed to a vacancy on the board last December and is a candidate now for a Democratic full term.

Persons attending yesterday's meeting were: Elmer B. Klein, a broker, chairman; Mrs. Charles L. Passmore, secretary; William Stephan and Mrs. Paul Blackwelder, co-chairmen of the Advisory Committee; W. Scott Hancock, Mrs. Arthur J. Krueger and Mrs. Julius Kunz, vice-chairmen.

POSSESSION OF MARIJUANA CHARGED AGAINST TWO MEN

Warrants Issued for Leo Gomez and Adolph Garcia in St. Louis County.

Warrants charging Leo Gomez, 36 years old, and Adolph Garcia, 35, with possession of marijuana in violation of the State law were issued last night by Justice of the Peace Henry James of St. Ferdinand Township, St. Louis County, following a report by Constable Andrew Sears, of seizure of a quantity of the drug in their homes.

Acting on an anonymous tip, Sears went to Gomez' home at 665 Leeton drive, Prospect Hill, and Garcia's home at 665½ Leeton drive, in the same building. In Garcia's quarters, he reported, two quarts of pulverized marijuana were found beneath the mattress of his bed, a pint jar of marijuana seed and in a coal shed five additional quarts of the drug. In a shed adjoining Gomez' quarters, Sears said he found 150 marijuana cigarets.

Gomez and Garcia denied knowledge of the presence of the drug. They were released on $1000 bond each. Under a State law, enacted in 1935, possession or sale of marijuana is a felony, punishable, upon conviction, by a fine of from $250 to $5000, or a penitentiary sentence of from two to seven years.

MRS. H. W. READ GETS DIVORCE AND IS WED TO G. E. DIXON

Both Prominent in Philadelphia Society, They Are Married After Her Decree in Reno.

By the Associated Press.

RENO, March 27.—Mrs. Helen W. Read and Fitz E. Dixon, both prominent in Philadelphia society, were married at the Baptist parsonage by the Rev. Brewster Adams today a short time after Mrs. Read divorced Charles N. Read.

Mrs. Read gave her age as 45. Dixon, who was divorced in Philadelphia last year, is 49.

Mrs. Read's divorce was granted at a private hearing on grounds of cruelty. She was married to Read at Elkins Park, Pa., Sept. 24, 1921.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 27. — Fitz Eugene Dixon, who was married today to Mrs. Helen W. Read in Reno, served as non-playing captain of the United States Davis Cup tennis team in 1929 and was formerly interested financially in the old Philadelphia Arrows ice hockey team and the Philadelphia National League professional football team.

86 FILE FOR OFFICE IN 8 COUNTY TOWNS

Little Opposition in Most Communities That Have Aldermanic System.

Filings of candidates for office in eight St. Louis County municipalities operating under the aldermanic form of government ended yesterday with 86 candidates having filed for the 43 offices to be filled in elections April 6. University City, Clayton, Brentwood, Ferguson, Valley Park, Glendale, Shrewsbury, Ladue and Florissant will select officials. Maplewood and Webster Groves, commission form cities, held primary elections last Tuesday at which two candidates for Mayor and six for Councilmen in each town were chosen.

Filings generally were light, with incumbents in many offices unopposed for re-election. In Ladue, candidates for Mayor, Marshal and Aldermen have no opposition.

Candidates are as follows:

University City: For Mayor, Matt C. Fogerty, Eugene D. Ruth Jr. and Roger D. Moore; Marshal, George F. Ward (incumbent) and John P. Mannion; Collector, William S. Steele (incumbent), unopposed; Alderman, First Ward, A. J. Haverstick (incumbent) and Dr. A. O. Ozment; Second Ward, Herman Barken (incumbent) and John J. Page; Third Ward, Dr. R. C. Seibert (incumbent), Norman Sutter and Mark Donovan.

Jacobsmeyer (incumbent), unopposed; Third Ward, Charles Spoehler Jr., unopposed; Fourth Ward, Andrew J. Shores (incumbent) and Frank Spahn; Fifth Ward, Albert Aloe (incumbent) and Edward Nussbaum.

Glendale: For Mayor, E. A. Holscher (incumbent) and Dr. Charles H. Leslie; Marshal, Thomas J. O'Meara (incumbent) and Fred Stickner; Collector, Fred C. Sackbauer (incumbent) and Miss Margaret Kelly; Police Judge, August Heitzler and A. G. Jannopoulo; Alderman, First Ward, Arthur L. Tomkins (incumbent), unopposed; Second Ward, John Murphy, unopposed; Third Ward, Robert Weiland, William H. Mills, John Maseter (incumbent) and Lewis Agnew.

Valley Park: For Alderman, First Ward, George B. James (incumbent) and Glenn Jones; Second Ward, William T. Vance (incumbent) unopposed; Second Ward (unexpired term), Charles C. Scholl and Dan Wolf; Third Ward, Emil Weggemann (incumbent), unopposed; Fourth Ward, James G. Hendrickson (incumbent) and Thomas A. Everett.

Brentwood: For Mayor, Walter R. Douglas (incumbent) and Jerome L. Howe; Marshal, Fred O. Lain (incumbent) and Arthur B. Withrow; Collector, Mrs. Mary McManis (incumbent) and August J. Elbrecht; Police Judge, George F. Kenney, Clarence O'Sullivan, Henry F. Ruck, Oscar R. Tuckett and Dan R. Wagner; Alderman, First Ward, Henry G. Besselman (incumbent) and Charles F. Schmitz; Second Ward, Joseph R. Hurst (incumbent) and James F. Gallagher; Third Ward, Lester J. Klersch (incumbent) and Robert G. Dugan.

Ferguson: For Mayor, Arthur H. Haill, unopposed; Collector, Henry J. Schaefer, unopposed; Marshal, Al Montrey (incumbent), R. R. Ulrich and August Mester; Alderman, First Ward, Edward Steinlage and Howard Leo Finney; Second Ward, Louis J. Greco and A. J. Epping; Third Ward, E. M. Schaefer (incumbent) and John G. Messmer; Fourth Ward, Edgar T. Hern (incumbent), William K. Ford and James V. Bellville; Fifth Ward, Henry C. Grimm (incumbent) and Herman L. Breitenbach.

Ladue: (All incumbents unopposed): For Mayor, Boyle O. Rodes; Collector, H. E. Billman; Marshal, E. S. Funsten; Alderman, First Ward, Alvin J. Goodbar; Second Ward, A. W. Shapleigh; Third Ward, William O. Reeder.

Shrewsbury: For Alderman, First Ward, Al Kinkel (incumbent) unopposed; Second Ward, H. August Brockland (incumbent) and Hugh B. Fitzgerald.

Florissant will elect a Mayor and three Aldermen. Names of candidates have not been announced.

Rotary Conference Here April 12-13.

The fifteenth annual conference of the fourteenth district, Rotary International, comprising part of Missouri, will be held here April 1 and 13. Delegates from clubs in 42 cities are expected to attend the meetings at the Statler and Jefferson Hotels.

County Schools Rich in Track Material; Four Meets This Week Open Season

By Reno Hahn.

County track prospects are good for the coming season, which will begin with three dual meets during the week and the annual State indoor event at Columbia on Saturday. A number of outstanding athletes of last season in the high jump, sprints, hurdles, 880-yard run and pole vault are returning this year.

University City, leading track team of the district during the past seven years, will again have a strong squad, coached by Henry Schemmer. The Indians, with outstanding boys in many events, and annually the largest squad in the county, have dominated track in this district since Schemmer started coaching there.

Other teams in the county are strong this year, however, and Maplewood, Normandy, Webster Groves and Kirkwood will contest the Indians' supremacy in many events.

Normandy is the only team that has a new coach, or rather coaches, this season. George Bruno, former Notre Dame football guard, and James Lawhon, star at Missouri in football and track, will have charge of the Vikings. Bruno will take charge of the field events, while Lawhon will coach the runners.

33 Meets Scheduled.

The county schools have already scheduled 33 dual and triangular meets for the season in addition to such major events as the State indoor and outdoor meets, the county and district events, Clayton's invitational meet, and the Chillicothe and Herrin (Ill.) relays.

The event in which there will be the most competition appears to be the high jump, in which at least six athletes are capable of clearing five feet nine inches. They are: Don Duchek, Kirkwood; Bob Howell and Sol Schumitzky, University City; Julian Jackson, Maplewood; Leon Smith, St. Charles, and Mel Klausmeyer, Normandy.

The sprints also have a good field, with Sherwood Hughes, Kirkwood's outstanding junior sprinter of last season, matching strides with such senior veterans as Marion Schaeffer, Clayton; Mel Schad, Normandy, who placed third in the State indoor 60-yard dash last year and third in the 220-yard event outdoors; Barney Mead, University City, who ran Schaeffer a close race in a recent trial at University City at the 60-yard distance, which Schaeffer won in 6.7 seconds; and Harry Davis, an improved Maplewood sprinter who also ran the same distance in 6.7 seconds but gets a better rating because he was without competition and ran with his sweatshirt on.

Joe Finch Standout Hurdler.

The field in the hurdles event will probably be dominated by Joe Finch, who was a sensation as a junior for University City last season. Finch's best competition will likely come from Bob Johnson of Kirkwood, who displayed improvement at the end of last season; and Schlesing of University City, and Jackson of Maplewood.

Maplewood appears to have control of the pole vault event, with two fine veterans returning. Steve Montrose cleared 11 feet 5 inches last season, while Elmer Halbrook was nearly as good. Pinke and Weber of St. Charles, and Sol Schumitzky of University City are other good vaulters.

In the quarter-mile event, Mel Klausmeyer of Normandy, State and county champion, is the best of the field, with Melvin Matlock, University City; Russ Henry and Paul Gremaud, Maplewood; Bob Scott and Elwein Dierl, Kirkwood, the best of a poor field.

In the weight events there are few seniors returning, but Julian Barnett, Kirkwood, and Victor Hilliar, Maplewood, are two juniors who may be stars in the senior division this season.

SISLER ON COMMITTEE TO NAME OUTSTANDING SEMIPROFESSIONAL STAR

By the Associated Press.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., March 27.—Honus Wagner, high commissioner of the Semiprofessional Baseball Congress, announced the appointment today of three former major league managers who will select the outstanding young ball player of 1937.

George Sisler, Tris Speaker and Lew Fonseca make up the special board.

The trio will attend the national semipro finals at Wichita, Kan., Aug. 13 to 25, where the selection will be made.

Wagner previously had named a representative from each of the teams in the National and American Leagues who will select the so-called All-America team of 16 members.

"The names of the 16 All-America players will be turned over to Sisler, Fonseca and Speaker as soon as they are made known, and it will be from this list that the No. 1 American sandlot player will be selected," Wagner said.

Ex-professional players will not be considered, and the lucky candidate will be assured a shot at a major league and a scholarship in the annual baseball school at Hot Springs, Ark., next February.

MISSOURI POLO TEAM TO PLAY 13 CONTESTS

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 27.—The University of Missouri will play its heaviest polo schedule this year if athletic authorities approve the tentative program of 13 games.

The schedule:

April 3 and 10—Alabama at Auburn. April 17—Iowa State at Columbia. April 24—Illinois at Columbia. May 1 and 3—Alabama Poly at Columbia. May 5 and 6—Oklahoma at Columbia. May 8—Illinois at Champaign. May 13 and 15—Iowa State at Ames. May 24 and 25—Ohio State at Columbia.

FOUR BOXERS NAMED FOR OZARK TEAM

Four more amateur boxers were named yesterday by the Ozark Association, to represent this district in the Junior National A. A. U. Tournament which will be held April 6 and 7 at the Municipal Auditorium. The boys are Forrest Potts, Donald Schulte, Jack Conway and Eric Koberg. They will be matched with boys from several other districts. It is hoped that the team from Honolulu which is now on its way to the Boston tournament via San Francisco will stop here.

Forrest Potts, 112-pounder, has been boxing three years and has represented St. Louis in two National Championships and has been a member of all the intercity teams.

Donald Schulte, bantamweight, likewise has been on several intercity teams and is a veteran of the ring despite his youthful appearance. Jack Conway is one of the hardest punchers in local circles.

Eric Koberg, 126 pounds, of Belleville, has made several trips on out of town teams.

All of the above named boys won titles in the recent district tournament.

ALOES AND CAMELS TIED FOR LEAD IN WOMEN'S PIN LEAGUE

A hectic race is in progress in Heidel's Women's Scratch bowling league, the final positions being very much in doubt with but three remaining matches scheduled after this week's play in which the Albert Aloe team won three games from Heidel Recreation, 2650 to 2425, enabling them to enter a tie for the lead with the Camels who won two games from White Lines, 2590 to 2426.

The Hermanns won three games from the American Lady team, 2702 to 2587, while the Harts also won three games in their tilt against Kroemeke, 2573 to 2374.

Marge Colbeck topped this week's individual scores with a count of 612, while Ethel Sablatnik scored 560, Lee Chase 570, Helen Frederic 569, Cora Bertram 556, Ann La Breque 555, Bernette Repking 566, Elenor Olliges 546, Ann Tonkovic 542, Helen Peters 539 and Gertrude Hanke 534.

This week-end affords the last chance to catch game fish legally until Decoration day, May 30, since the season closes on bass, crappie, jack salmon, blue gill and goggle-eye Wednesday.

The fact that many fishermen have reported well-filled creels in spite of bad weather is more because of the early season, hungry fish and well stocked streams. Conditions have been far from ideal since the deputies fired the shots opening day.

This is quite usual, however, and Missouri sportsmen are used to the discomforts that go with early fishing. As the weather warms and the spring rains come in for their part in the pageant, the large rivers will rise, headwater will meet the backwater and we will have the biggest run of fish into the creeks.

Until the reopening of the bass season on May 30 there will still be plenty of rainbows at Bennett Spring, Roaring River and Montauk State parks to test the skill of the casters. Channel cat and non-game fish such as carp, buffalo, redhorse, drum and all species of the catfish family will not be protected by a closed season until June 1.

Cal Johnson, fishing editor of Sports Afield, and an ardent student of the black bass, recently released an article on the life cycle of the black bass that should be of interest to Ozark fishermen. Johnson believes that there are five cycles in the life of the bass; three of these are of utmost importance to the angler. First, the breeding period which lasts from the first part of April until the last of May. This period is very important to sportsmen because it is during this time that the future of the fish family is determined. Never should a bass be taken at this time, although several states permit it. The fish, guarding the spawning beds, are very fierce and will protect their eggs from any and all enemies, and the great deal of striking makes them especially easy to take.

Period No. 2 is the best of all fishing days, according to some casters. This period, immediately following the spawning, is the time when bass will do the most striking. This lasts from the middle of June until August. It is almost a unanimous belief that the bass taken during these two months are those that gave the family the name of "fighting fish." They have developed a ferociousness during the spawning season which is carried over into the feeding.

No. 3 finds fish and fishermen alike. The warm days of August send the fish to the bottom of the deep pools and the fishermen simply try to out-lazy their prey. Cool days and early morning or late evening may bring the fish into shallows to feed but they strike without enthusiasm.

Next is the autumn period, which once again finds Mr. Bass ready to eat, and when caught he makes excellent eating. The cool waters and exercise make the flesh firm and tender. As a general rule, these fish are even harder fighters than the mid-summer ones. Whether it is because of their hunger or simply because they want a good fight before they are fighting fools.

No. 5 period is the time during which all anglers can repair their tackle and ponder over the "one that got away." From late November until the breeding period northern bass are in hibernation. The southern bass, including Missouri's, seldom need to go into hibernation because of the intense cold and as a result feed throughout the winter and attain a size far greater than their northern kin.

The main lesson to learn from Johnson's article is that if we are to have a good supply of fighting bass in the future it is necessary to use good common sense at the present. It is up to every sportsman to educate those who would poach on any game fish during the spawning or hibernation period, so that the numbers will increase for the coming seasons.

Why is it that opening seasons seem to be so disagreeable? Not only in fishing, but in field trials for the shooting dogs as well. Last Saturday and Sunday the St. Louis Field Trial Association held its annual spring trial at Warrenton. All during the week Old Sol beamed down upon the handlers and hounds in a manner most encouraging. Come Saturday morning and the opening call for the puppy stake and not only did Sol step out of the picture but a cold north wind, accompanied by a misty rain, played havoc with dispositions and footing.

Today the pointers and setters can be found in one of two places, either at the Mississippi Valley Dog Show, which is going on at the Arena, or at the Mexico (Mo.) Field Trials, which has a one-day stand today.

Next week the dogs will cross the river to test noses at the Belleville trials which will be run off under the auspices of the St. Clair County Pointer and Setter Club.

The "skeeters" are getting ready for the spring shoots. St. Louis Skeet Club members are planning an active season, as are all other organizations. The first municipal skeet field in the East has been installed at Providence (R. I.) Municipal Golf Course and has been dedicated to public shooting. . . . Another municipal project in the East, the Buffalo, N. Y., casting pool, which was erected with WPA funds at a cost of $35,000, is viewed with envy by casters throughout the nation, according to Hunting and Fishing. . . . Game authorities in Yellowstone National Park plan to reduce the famous elk herd by 4000 head this season due to drouth and depleted food supplies. . . . Perhaps Missouri could use some elk. . . . The value of the carp took another drop last month with an announcement by Iowa conservation experts to carry on a year-'round removal program on carp, whose feeding and spawning habits destroy valuable game fish.

C. B. C. NINE NAMES SCHULTE CAPTAIN

Christian Brothers' High School's baseball team elected George "Pete" Schulte captain of the team for the coming season at a meeting of the team's letter men yesterday. Schulte is a senior and has earned letters the last two years as second baseman.

HOMER HERPEL NAMED CRYSTAL LAKE PRO

Homer Herpel has been named golf professional of the Crystal Lake Country Club, Bopp and Clayton roads, according to a recent announcement.

Herpel has been with the St. Louis Country Club, Midland Valley, Osage C. C., Hillcrest and the Rock Springs C. C. of Alton.

NORMAN THOMAS FOR ROOSEVELT'S PLAN WITH REGRET

Socialist Leader Sorry President Didn't Bring Up Court Issue During Campaign.

SAYS AMENDMENT IS ONLY RIGHT WAY

In Radio Speech Suggests Three Changes in Constitution Which He Considers Necessary.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Norman Thomas, Socialist nominee for President in 1936, in a prepared radio address on President Roosevelt's court reorganization suggestion, said tonight:

"If I were a member of Congress, I should vote 'yes' on the President's proposal with a genuine feeling of regret that he raised the constitutional issue at this late date in this form and with a lively insistence that the issue cannot be properly settled without a constitutional amendment.

"I do not believe that of itself the President's proposal is a blow to democracy. I believe that it was a blow to the ideal conception of democratic functions that the President should have refused to discuss the issue during the campaign, only to raise it as critical after the campaign.

"I did my best to make the issue of a particular kind of amendment to the Constitution vital in the last campaign. That was when it should have been discussed. Then a mandate might have been given to expedite an amendment. I was completely unsuccessful in bringing this issue to the fore."

Thomas contended at least three amendments were necessary "to make the Constitution reasonably workable in this day and generation." First, an amendment to make the Constitution easier to amend. Second, for the direct election of the President and Vice-President of the United States, with some guarantees of the right of minority groups to get on the ballot. Third, an amendment conferring power on Congress with concurrent though subordinate power for state legislatures to legislate without danger of judicial veto for the economic and social well-being of the people.

Text of Address.

The text of the address follows:

"The public, as I have reason to know from experience, is today concerned to know from those who discuss the problems of the Constitution whether they are for or against the President's proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court. Very well, then, if I were a member of Congress I should vote yes on the President's proposal with a genuine feeling of regret that he raised the constitutional issue at this late date in this form, and with a lively insistence that the issue cannot be properly settled without a constitutional amendment.

"I do not believe that of itself the President's proposal is a blow to democracy. I believe that it was a blow to the ideal conception of democratic functions that the President should have refused to discuss the issue during the campaign only to raise it as critical after the campaign. I did my best to make the issue of a particular kind of amendment to the Constitution vital in the last campaign. That was when it should have been discussed. Then a mandate might have been given to expedite an amendment. I was completely unsuccessful in bringing this issue to the fore; I got no help from a public which was resolved to vote for Mr. Roosevelt with untroubled mind.

"Clever But Unconvincing."

"The form in which the President first suggested this proposal was clever but completely unconvincing. Mr. Justice Hughes and his associates have effectively demolished the argument that a court of 15 would be more efficient than a court of nine. To enlarge the court is more likely to delay than expedite its work. Moreover, the argument of age in the case of the nine old men has been overworked. The conservative members of the court do not think what they do because they are over 70. They thought it when they were 40. There are plenty of lawyers in the vigor of youth who are equally conservative.

"The case for supporting a larger court is simply this: The President has so engineered things that to support it is the only way to stand effectively and immediately for a liberalized court. A defeat of the President's plan will, in its inevitable effect be a triumph for that view of the Constitution which denies to the people effective power to regulate their own affairs. The Supreme Court is or should be part of the Government of the United States. There is no mystical grace that comes from appointment to the court which gives to judges supernal wisdom to interpret the document upon which there are honest differences of opinion, controlled basically by one's conception of the function of government.

"The court's own record, its inconsistencies, the sharp criticism by some of the best judges of the reasoning of their fellows — all these things refute the absurd notion that the court is merely interpreting the clear meaning of the Constitution. The court making constitutional law and when it makes this kind of law—especially when the majority of the judges are clearly out of line with public opinion—then democracy is not constitutional. If more conservative judges, five of whom are over 70, had resigned, no one would have expected Mr. Roosevelt to appoint their successors among men whose views on the constitutional functions of government were substantially those of Warren Gamaliel Harding. They did not resign and one can scarcely blame the President for feeling that that fact ought not indefinitely to block legislation for which he had won a popular mandate. He therefore proposes what is undoubtedly a constitutional method to meet the emergency.

"I agree that it is an emergency. I do not say this because of my approval of all the laws declared unconstitutional by the court or the laws which may be declared unconstitutional. I believe that N R A had outlived most of whatever usefulness it originally had; that by other devices the rights of labor could better be protected, and that that law at least required very drastic amendment. I also believed that A A A required in certain respects drastic amendment in justice to sharecroppers and others. Nevertheless, in a democracy, that should have been the function of Congress.

"Even so, my chief criticism of the court is not that it declared certain laws unconstitutional, but that in some of the cases, notably the A A A, the Guffey Act and the New York minimum wage law, the majority laid down principles which practically deprived the Federal Government and the states of power for effective control over agriculture and industry, no matter what the emergency. These decisions were the culmination of a long line of decisions, beginning with the Dred Scott case, in which the Supreme Court by its steadfast and strained protection of property rights made itself responsible for a vast amount of unnecessary human misery, for child labor, and the cruel exploitation of women.

"In the face of the record, for the President to desire a court in line with the best thought of his day is not unreasonable. He does not invite Fascism. His plan does not of itself jeopardize civil liberty. On the contrary, a democracy impotent to act because it is paralyzed by a judicial oligarchy would be more likely to invite a strong man to step in as dictator. Moreover, if the President appointed men of the type of Stone, Cardoza and Brandeis, they will be more, not less likely than the conservatives to defend civil liberty.

Strengthening a Precedent.

"These considerations outweigh the undoubted danger that the President is strengthening, not creating, a precedent, the size of the court has been changed before, which his successors may use in arbitrary or reactionary fashion. But what I regret and fear more than this danger is the growth of the singular illusion that all that is the matter with the Constitution is the Supreme Court, and the greater illusion that by the simple process of having 15 judges instead of nine, all constitutional issues will be automatically solved. It is amazing to find organized labor with its traditional distrust of government by courts waxing so enthusiastic for 15 judges instead of nine.

"Here let me repeat what I have been saying with increasing earnestness for the last 12 years. To make the Constitution reasonably workable in this day and generation at least three amendments are necessary.

"1. An amendment to make the Constitution easier to amend. We are not yet ready to write a new Constitution or to adopt all amendments which sometime may be desirable. For instance, we are not yet educated to an amendment dealing with the very real danger of a deadlock through a whole presidential term between the chief executive and Congress. If the Constitution is made easier to amend we can face new problems with some equanimity. Now 13 states with 5 per cent of the population can block amendments.

Direct Election.

"The second desirable change is a provision for the direct election of the President and Vice-President of the United States with some guarantee of the right of minority groups to get on the ballot. The present constitutional and legal set-up constitutes an almost insuperable barrier to the rise of a minority party to power. The danger that an election may be thrown into the House of Representatives where each state votes as one is very real. The fact that this has not happened since the election of John Quincy Adams and the further fact that there has been no serious disturbance arising out of our method of electing Presidents since the time of Rutherford B. Hayes is no guarantee of continued good fortune. This matter has nothing whatever to do with the Supreme Court, but everything to do with the Constitution itself.

Finally, it is necessary that there should be a carefully framed amendment positively conferring power upon Congress with concurrent, though subordinate, power for State Legislatures, to legislate without danger of judicial veto, for the economic and social wellbeing of the people. The Farmers and Workers Rights Amendment of the Socialist party and the amendment introduced by Mr. Amlie of Wisconsin are in line with this suggestion. It will be observed that we do not seek to interfere with the right of the court to defend civil liberty, a function which we wish it would exercise more vigorously and competently.

"This positive grant of power is essential because even if the veto powers of the Supreme Court were altogether removed, states' rights, would still be written into the Constitution and there might be serious conflicts between the states and the Federal Government in certain emergencies. Inevitably the states' rights cry would be raised on the floor of Congress in the interest of reaction. Today states' rights are workers' wrongs in the field of economic and social legislation to which state boundary lines are or should be irrelevant.

Opposes Veto by Congress.

"Only this positive amendment goes to the heart of the matter. To permit two-thirds of each House of Congress to override the Court would make for worse confusion in the already confused pattern of precedent and constitutional interpretation. The Court would rarely be overridden; the effort would mean endless delay at critical junctures. This two-thirds provision would raise practically insuperable barriers to the achievement by a labor or Socialist Government of its desired end through parliamentary action. A majority such a Government might get but scarcely a two-third majority in each house.

"To grant to State legislatures power to enact social legislation does not at all deal with the main issue which involves the power of Congress. The states are not big enough to do the job as Senator Borah ought to know. To propose that seven out of nine judges can do what five out of nine can't is merely temporizing with the problem of judicial supremacy.

Make Democracy Constitutional.

"In this day and age what we need is power for Government to act and to act democratically. Then it will be up to us to see that we have the type of organization, economic and political to bring about legislative action in the interest of the great mass of workers with hand and brain. Civil liberties may to some degree be protected against the exploiters and the mob by constitutional provisions interpreted by courts. They are eternally and always essential to the good society but the attempt to govern the changing current of economic life by a court under an ancient Constitution only plays into the hands of privilege and at the last by sheer paralysis of Government invites the coming of fascism.

"In no adequate way does the President's proposal deal with this situation. There is no reason in the light of history to assume that his six judges will remain liberal or that if they do they can by interpretation adequately alter the Constitution itself. Hence my plea, not a personal plea but the plea of my party, is for action through the Farmers' and Workers' Rights Amendment. Even now I hope that supporters of the President's emergency suggestion will rally to the more fundamental proposal, 'Let's make democracy constitutional.'"

FRENCH MISSION TO BE IN ST. LOUIS APRIL 6

Touring Mississippi Valley Commemorating 250th Year Since LaSalle's Death.

An official French mission, visiting the Mississippi Valley in commemoration of the 250th anniversary of the death of Cavelier de la Salle, the French explorer who took possession of the Mississippi River basin for his country in 1682, will be in St. Louis April 6.

The party of 13, headed by Andre Chevrillon, a director of the French Academy, will be entertained during its one-day visit here by the Chamber of Commerce, the Alliance Francaise and the French Society of St. Louis, and Hugues Brussel, French consul in the city.

Accompanied by three Canadian representatives, the mission will arrive in St. Louis at 8:30 a. m. and will be taken immediately on a sight-seeing tour of the city. Mayor Dickmann will extend an official welcome at City Hall, and at noon the visitors will be guests of the Chamber of Commerce at luncheon in Hotel Statler. They will leave for Chicago at 4 p. m.

Members of the mission include Raymond Laurent, president of the Municipal Council of the city of Paris, and other officers of the council; Jules Destombe of the Paris Chamber of Commerce; the Marquis de Crequi-Montfort of the Societe des Americanistes, and Mme. Simon Henri-Martin of the Comite France-Amerique.

Members of the Canadian delegation are Judge Edouard Fabre Surveyer of the Superior Court of the Province of Quebec, the Rev. Olivier Maurault, rector of the University of Montreal, and Jean Dufresne of La Presse, Montreal newspaper.

La Salle was the first to explore the river from the Illinois River south to the Gulf of Mexico. He took possession of the territory on April 9, 1682, and named it "Louisiana." In recognition of his achievement of exploration he was made governor of the region which he claimed for France. He was killed by one of his own men in a mutiny.

SERVICES AT RUINS OF SCHOOL TODAY

Gov. Allred to Broadcast Message to Families at London, Tex.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Tex., March 27.—Families of London's school explosion victims will hold Easter memorial services at the doorstep of the structure, wrecked by a gas explosion 10 days ago. Surrounded by the ruins, they will pay tribute to 455 students and teachers killed there.

Gov. James V. Allred, speaking from Austin, will read a message from President Roosevelt at the opening of a 30-minute radio program at 3 p. m. The Oil Belt Ministers' Association, headed by Rev. Cecil Lang of Kilgore, arranged the program.

The sympathy of school children throughout the nation is to be expressed in a nine-foot floral cross of thousands of red carnations on a field of white. Luther McClure, surviving pupil who was captain of the football team, will make the presentation to the parents of victims, in behalf of the National Junior Red Cross.

The memorial address will be made by Rev. R. L. Jackson, Methodist minister of New London. After the Governor's address there will be a minute of silence.

Gov. Allred has issued a proclamation in Austin asking Texas school children each to contribute a penny on April 7 to help finance a memorial to the victims of the explosion. He suggested schools conduct "simple memorial services" that day.

Both high school and grade school classes will be resumed Monday morning.

The Texas Insurance Commission, in a report issued today at Austin, attributed the explosion to "either the arcing of an electric switch or some open flame in the vicinity of a chemical laboratory" which ignited gas that had collected under the concrete floor.

Marvin Hall, fire insurance commissioner, said the conclusions were based on a study and report by George C. Hawley, chief engineer for the commission.

Bill Seeger Florist Inc., has leased the storeroom at 6310 Delmar boulevard, in the new modernistic one-story building recently built by the Delit Realty Corporation. The lease was arranged by the Henry R. Weisels Co.

The storeroom is 19x70, has tile floor and steel ceiling, and is equipped with handsome fixtures. The new flower shop was opened last Friday.

The building was promoted by Henry R. Weisels.

DEAL CONCLUDED FOR YORK DRIVE APARTMENT SALE

Blue Ridge Terrace Structure of 3 Stories Has 12 Units — Price Reported $100,000.

By Berry Moore.

Exemplifying the renewed demand for buildings of this type, negotiations have been concluded for the three-story fireproof apartment structure at 7544-46-48 York drive, in Blue Ridge Terrace, Moorlands. The identity of the purchaser is withheld pending conclusion of the deal, which is now in contract form. The price involved is approximately $100,000, predicated on estimated annual rentals, it was stated.

The structure, which has accommodations for 12 families, consists of five-room apartments. It is ultra-modernistic in design, and replete with innovations. The garage is an integral part of the basement. The recently completed structure occupies a lot 130 by 125 feet.

The building project was engineered by Anton H. Klauber, real estate dealer and operator, who confirmed the transaction.

A newly-built apartment at 7515 York drive was recently acquired by Edward F. Immerthal in a deal negotiated by the Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co., which financed the project. This building, in the English Tudor period, consists of four five-room apartments, including reception hall and living-room.

Indications are that deals involving apartments in Blue Ridge Terrace, especially those recently completed or under construction, will be features of the real estate market the ensuing spring and summer, real estate dealers state.

No Dearth of Offers.

There has been no dearth of offers for the 12-family fireproof building recently completed on the south side of Cromwell drive, east of Westwood in Blue Ridge Terrace, the agents state. This structure, which is of striking design, extends through the block to Clayton road, with facades on both thoroughfares. These apartments have five rooms and two baths and are equipped with every modern facility. The Anderson-Stocke-Buermann Realty Co. financed the building, which was erected by Jacob Rubin & Sons.

Construction has been started on six new apartment buildings in Residence Acquired and One Nearing Completion

No. 12 Washington Terrace, former residence of Harry L. Lesser purchased by Mrs. Ruth Haskel. The Goldman Realty Company represented the seller and Mary Potter Love, Inc., the purchaser.

Perspective of residence being erected at 32 Clermont Lane for Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Pauley. Architects, Gray & Pauley.

SEVERAL INTERESTING DEALS IN RESIDENTIAL PROPERTY MADE

Former Washington Terrace Home of Harry Lesser Sold—4632 Pershing Changes Hand.

The former residence of Harry Lesser, president of the Lesser Cotton Co., at 12 Washington terrace has been purchased by Mrs. Ruth Haskel. The purchase price was not announced.

The house is a pretentious three-story structure with large reception hall, living room, dining room and library of the first floor, four bedrooms, three baths and sitting room on the second floor, and three maids' rooms and bath on the third floor. There is a three-car garage with living quarters above, in the rear of the premises. The site is 100 by 210 feet.

The Arthur Goldman Realty Co. represented Lesser in the transaction. Negotiations for the purchaser were handled by Mary Potter Love, Inc.

This is one of several residences recently sold in this addition. These included notably the former town house of Sidney Schoenberg at 22 Washington terrace, acquired by H. C. Whiteside, and that of Mrs. Etta Cohen, at 22 Washington terrace, acquired by Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals. Both sales were effected by the Henry R. Weisels Co. Another recent sale was that of the residence of Samuel Pingree, at 43 Washington terrac acquired by Lansing R. Felker, president of the Laclede Insurance Agency, A. T. and Whitelaw Terry handled negotiations in this instance.

Schoenberg has completed plans for a residence of English provincial design to be erected on Conway road, west of Ballas road. It will be a two-story fireproof structure. Jamieson & Spear are the architects. The residence formerly occupying the site was destroyed by fire Jan. 22.

The residence of George Neville, at 5916 Cates avenue, was sold last week to Walter Clogston. It has nine rooms, two baths and hot-water heat. The premises includes a three-car garage. The site has a 60 foot frontage. Cornet & Zeibig handled the transaction in connection with Leonard Stedelin.

Another sale effected by Cornet & Zeibig was that of the residence at 4632 Pershing avenue to Alonzo C. Church, associated with the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Co. The house has 10 rooms and three baths, and occupies a 60 foot lot. It was owned by Dr. Bernard J. McMahon. Cornet & Zeibig represented both interests in this transaction.

Cornet & Zeibig are conducting negotiations for several other houses including two on a large scale in St. Louis County.

Negotiations have been concluded through A. T. and Whitelaw Terry for two houses in Westminster place, but announcements are withheld, pending the transfer.

CONTRACTS LET FOR ANOTHER HOUSE IN HUNTLEIGH WOODS

Arthur R. Lindburg has let contracts for the erection of another house on a pretentious scale in Huntleigh Woods on the west side of Lindbergh boulevard just north of Huntleigh Village. Plans for the new structure have been drawn by Hugo K. Graf, architect. The house has been listed with Edward L. Bakewell.

The new residence will be of painted brick with slate roof and the garage of brick and timber. A covered passage will connect the house and garage. The servants' quarters will consist of two rooms and bath, and are above the garage.

A feature of the main floor will be a fine stair hall with a large living room and dining room flanking each side. A dining porch opens off the dining room. Library, kitchen and pantry will complete the first floor. The floors will be of terrazzo on concrete. Mantels and a big bay windo- are from Henry Clay Pierce's house in Vandeventer place. The basement houses a large recreation room, quarters for housemen and the air-conditioner.

The second floor consists of a master bedroom with a fireplace and dressing room and bath; also three other bedrooms and two baths.

The house will stand on lot 31 of Huntleigh Woods, with a comprehensive view of the countryside and the city.

ADDITIONAL SPACE IN WAREHOUSE TAKEN

Associated Manufacturers Lease 10,000 Square Feet in Building on Hadley Street.

The Associated Furniture Manufacturers has taken a long term lease on 10,000 square feet of additional floor space in the two-story warehouse on Hadley street, north of Cass avenue, which gives it a total of 50,000 square feet in this building. The Illinois Terminal Railway traversing this section, is available for shipping purposes.

The concern has offices and display rooms in the Glancy Building, at the southwest corner of Eighteenth street and Washington avenue.

The Hadley street building is a holding of the Brecht Casing Co. The lease was negotiated by the Breitt & Naumer Realty Co., represented by Eugene L. Wehmeyer as vice-president.

The LoBaKnamel St. Louis Co. has leased the two-story building at 3918 Olive street, owned by the St. Louis Realty Securities Co. The building comprises approximately 15,000 square feet of floor space.

The company is introducing a new process used in painting. Fred E. Koenig will serve as manager of the local plant.

This lease was also arranged by Breitt & Naumer Co. through Wehmeyer.

CLEREMONT LANE HOUSE NEARING COMPLETION

Construction of the new residence of Walter W. Pauley in Cleremont Lane is nearing completion. The house is of modified colonial design with an open porch and railing extending across the front and connecting with a screened-in porch on the west. The first floor is constructed of brick painted white with clapboards above. The structure was designed so that the living room, dining room and three master bedrooms would have southern exposure.

The lower floor contains a living room, dining room, kitchen pantry, breakfast room, lavatory and a two-car garage. There are three bedrooms on the second floor and two baths and a large maid's room and bath. The living room is knotty white pine with an old colonial finish.

The site was acquired through Mary Potter Love, Inc., and Meier, Comfort, Bergs and Judge, Inc.

Pauley is a member of the firm of Gray & Pauley, architests, which designed the house.

Sales Involving 65 Parcels.

During the last 26 days Dimmitt-Rickhoff-Bayer has closed 36 sale involving a total of 65 parcels. The demand for residences and residence sites was mentioned by the concern as noteworthy.

PERMIT VALUES UP 33 PER CENT IN FEBRUARY

Increase in Construction Activity Last Month Was Shared by Eight of Nine Geographic Divisions.

Building activity in February, measured by the value of permits issued, was substantially greater than in January, 1937, and in February of a year ago, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins announced today.

"This is only the second time in eight years that February permit valuations have exceeded January valuations," Miss Perkins said. "The increase of 33 per cent between January and February was due to a gain of 48 per cent in the value of new residential construction, a gain of 14 per cent in the value of new non-residential construction, and a rise of 31 per cent in the value of permits issued for additions, alterations, and repairs to existing buildings. The increase in building activity was shared by eight of the nine geographic divisions. New England was the only section to show a decrease.

"A decided gain in residential construction is shown by permit values as compared with the corresponding month of last year. The value of this type of building shows a gain of 94 per cent. There was an increase of 25 per cent in the value of new non-residential buildings, and a gain of 72 per cent in the value of additions, alterations, and repairs. The aggregate value of all buildings for which permits were issued in February shows an increase of 63 per cent over February, 1936."

Percentage Change Shown.

The percentage change from January to February in the number and cost of buildings for which permits were issued for each of the different types of construction in 1524 identical cities having a population of 2500 or over is indicated in the following table:

Class of Construction.	Change from Jan., 1937 to Feb., 1937. Number	Est'd Cost
New residential	*15.0	*48.3
New nonresidential	* 7.7	*13.5
Additions, alterations and repairs	*12.7	*30.7
Total	*12.4	*32.5

The percentage change compared with February, 1936, by class of construction, is shown in the table below for the same 1524 cities.

Class of Construction.	Change from Feb., 1936 to Feb., 1937. Number	Est'd Cost
New residential	*78.4	*94.4
New nonresidential	*71.1	*24.5
Additions, alterations, and repairs	*36.0	*71.8
Total	*49.6	*63.1

Compared with February, 1936, an increase of 115 per cent is shown in the number of family-dwelling units provided in these 1524 cities during February, 1937.

The data collected by the Bureau of Labor Statistics include, in addition to private construction, the number and value of buildings for which contracts were awarded by Federal and State Governments in the cities included in the report. For February, 1937, the value of these public buildings amounted to $14,790,000; for January, 1937, to $3,361,000, and for February, 1936, to $13,200,000.

Improvement Projects.

Permits were issued during February, 1937, for the following important building projects: In New York City—in the Borough of the Bronx for apartment houses to cost nearly $1,400,000; in the Borough of Manhattan for apartment houses to cost nearly $3,000,000; in the Borough of Brooklyn for apartment houses to cost nearly $1,500,000; in the Borough of Queens for apartment houses to cost nearly $14,000,000 and for one-family dwellings to cost nearly $1,300,000; in Philadelphia, Pa., for one-family dwellings to cost nearly $700,000; in Chicago, Ill., for school buildings to cost over $1,300,000; in Indianapolis, Ind., for store and mercantile buildings to cost nearly $500,000; in Bay City, Mich., for factory buildings to cost over $500,000; in Detroit, Mich., for one-family dwellings to cost over $2,200,000 and for factory buildings to cost over $400,000; in Washington, D. C., for multi-family dwellings to cost nearly $1,300,000 and for school buildings to cost $1,200,000; in Fernandina, Fla., for a pulp and paperboard mill to cost $2,000,000; in Miami, Fla., for one-family dwellings to cost over $500,000; in Miami Beach, Fla., for one-family dwellings to cost over $450,000; in Baltimore, Md., for one-family dwellings to cost over $500,000; in Houston, Tex., for one-family dwellings to cost over $800,000; in Los Angeles, Cal., for a Federal Courthouse and Postoffice to cost over $8,000,000, and for one-family dwellings to cost over $1,800,000; in San Francisco, Cal., for one-family dwellings to cost over $550,000, and in Stockton, Cal., for a hospital building to cost nearly $500,000.

SEVEN SALES REPORTED BY SOUTH SIDE CONCERN

Rengel-Weber Realty Co. reports the following sales:

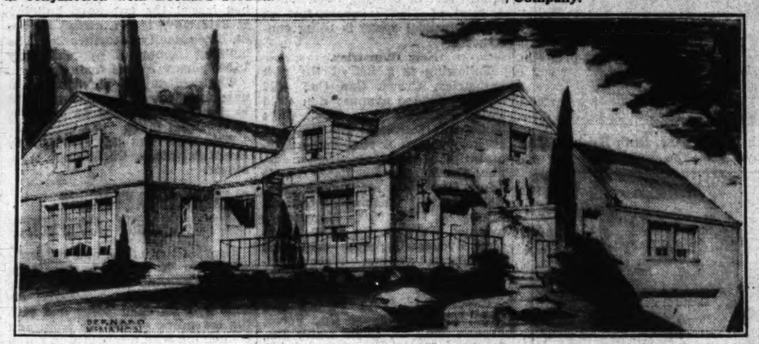
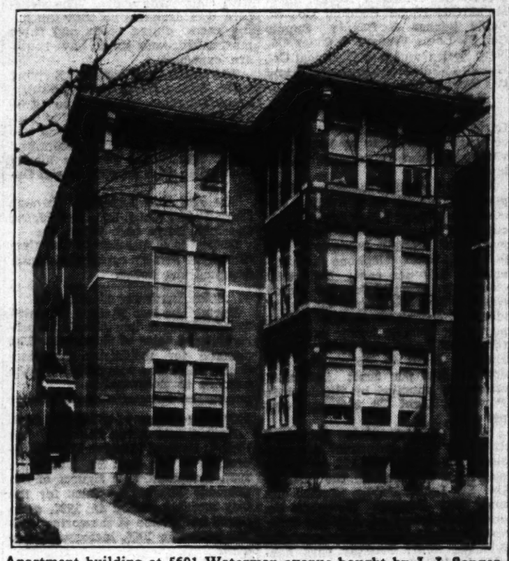
Residences and Apartments Sold; Design for Home

Residence at 5916 Cates avenue purchased by Walter Clogston from George Neville. The transaction was handled by Cornet & Zeibig in conjunction with Leonard Stedlin.

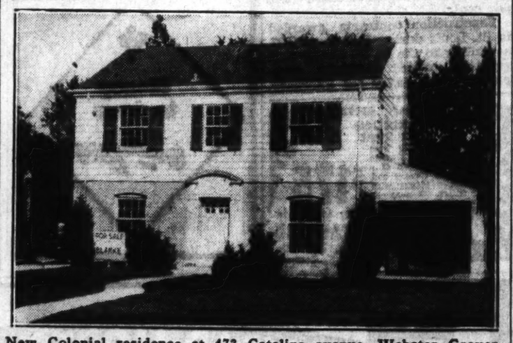
Residence at 1058 Jackson recently acquired by M. Franklin, president of the Franklin Roofing Company from Kurt Treuer. The transaction was handled by the Franklyn E. Meyer Real Estate Company.



Drawing of house being built for Dr. D. A. Darling in Westmoor Park, on Clayton road. Architects, William McMahon & Sons.



Apartment building at 5601 Waterman avenue bought by J. J. Sanger from a client of the Henry R. Weisels Company which handled the transaction.



New Colonial residence at 473 Catalina avenue, Webster Groves, sold to L. J. Gable of Lansig Day & Company. The Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Company and the Trembley Wilson Real Estate Company handled the transaction.

CONCERNS ENLARGE QUARTERS IN DOWNTOWN BUILDINGS

The Angelica Jacket Co. has leased an additional 7500 square feet in the five-story fireproof building at the northeast corner of Fifteenth and Olive streets, thus increasing its floor space in this structure to 50,000 square feet.

The Garrison-Wagner Printing Co. has leased 8000 square feet, or the entire fifth floor, of the Advertising Building at the northeast corner of Seventeenth and Locust streets. The additional space will give the concern about 50,000 square feet in this building.

The lessor in both instances was the Wizard Lightfoot Appliance Co., which formerly occupied the quarters under a long lease.

The Griffith & Groves Real Estate Co. handled the negotiations.

Business Building Sold.

Frank W. Bray reports the following sales:

A mercantile building, at Tower Grove and McRee avenues, from Genevieve H. Hoffpauer to a client of Heimenz Realty Co. A six-room residence at 135 Peeke avenue, Kirkwood, Mo., for Charles K. Schweizer to C. E. Hartwein.

WEBSTER GROVES RESIDENCE BOUGHT BY L. J. GABLE

The new colonial residence at 473 Catalina avenue, Webster, has been acquired by L. J. Gable of Taussig Day & Co. It has the usual first floor rooms, together with a large screened porch, and three bedrooms and two baths on the second floor. There is a two-car garage, rathskeller, and the house is air conditioned. Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co. represented the seller and Trembley-Wilson Real Estate Co. the purchaser.

Delmar Boulevard Lease.

The Shanghai Chinese Restaurant Co., of which Charles Quin is president, has leased the storeroom at 6312 and 6314 Delmar boulevard in the new one-story modernistic building in the University City white way. The lease was arranged by the Henry R. Weisels Co., which promoted the building, designed by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect. A refrigerated air conditioning system is to be installed.

The restaurant concern has been operating a restaurant in the storeroom at 6314 Delmar, which is inadequate to its requirements.

"OLD NEIGHBORHOOD" SAFEGUARDING IN BILL

Protective and Improvement Association Authorized in Jefferson City Measure.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Creation of neighborhood protective and improvement associations is authorized in a bill introduced in the House of the Missouri Legislature. The act incorporates a proposal which some of the best minds in the field of real estate and city planning have been developing for two years. It would open the way for a new kind of pioneering, the remaking of "blighted" areas of our cities and the throwing of proper protection around home neighborhoods that now do not have it, according to Herbert U. Nelson, secretary of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

"The bill seeks," said he, "to open an effective way through which property owners in a neighborhood may act, in line with the general city plan, to establish desirable conditions in their own home environs, and gradually eliminate undesirable conditions.

"A city is a collection of neighborhoods. The important elements of family life and security of home ownership rest, in no small degree, upon the character of a neighborhood. Maintenance of neighborhood character in turn depends upon some control of land use. When stores, filling stations, billboards, and garages are permitted to come into a neighborhood of homes, unfavorable conditions arise which tend to discourage the home owner, and he leaves as soon as he can. The result is the blight which is the prevalent disease of our American cities today, and which threatens billions of invested wealth.

"Persons acquainted with the matter realize keenly that neighborhood factors are what build up real estate values. Favorable factors can be maintained only if property owners in a neighborhood have some vehicle through which they can act together protected by assurance that if they put in money and effort to set up more comfortable home conditions the value will not be swept away overnight by the coming in of some offensive or inharmonious use.

"Our zoning ordinances were our first great attempt to set up protection for home areas. They do not cover the older regions. Meantime sound developers of "exclusive" residential sections went further. They have shown that good layout for a neighborhood can add much to its home quality. Also, because they were able to start with new land, they could and did impose, through private contracts, control of future use, that is so home buyers might be sure their neighborhood would keep its character. In these newer subdivisions, neighborhood improvement associations have been organized as a matter of course.

"But older home neighborhoods have even greater need of such associations, since they are more subject to destructive force. The act now before the Missouri Legislature proposes to give old neighborhoods powers similar to those which new subdivisions or small suburban village governments already have.

"A neighborhood is an entity hard to define but easily understoods. It is not too large to be beyond comprehension of the common man. Everyone is interested in his own neighborhood. The neighborhood is therefore the natural unit upon which to take action that will get the effective support of the average citizen."

Bungalows and Flats Acquired.

The Banner Realty Co. reports sales as follows: Bungalow at 5417 Sunshine for Joseph McCarthy to Harold Schifferdecker; 4562 Newport; bungalow for client of Branner Realty Co., to Ben Leary; 3215 Minnesota, cottage for Valentine Gmerek, to James Murphy; four-family flat, 1848 South Fourteenth street, for Henry Doerhoff to Adam Schneider; 4452 Itaska, bungalow for E. R. Borter to Joe Berend.

DEALS CONCLUDED FOR YORK DRIVE APARTMENT SALE

Blue Ridge Terrace and plans are being made for others.

The largest of these is being erected at the northeast corner of Buckingham and Westwood drives by Edward J. Murtrux, architect and builder, as a speculative investment. The estimated cost of this project, including that of the site, is $125,000.

This structure will be two stories in height, modernistic in design, fireproof in construction and air conditioned. There will be 16 apartments, eight of four rooms with one bath and eight with six rooms and two baths. The site is 140 by 120 feet.

Construction Started.

Construction has been begun on a three-story modernistic building on the west side of Forest court, south of Wydown boulevard in Blue Ridge Terrace by Jesse Sprague, for undisclosed interests. This project, involving an outlay of $110,000, including the site, is being financed by the J. R. Van Raalte Mortgage Co. This building will contain 14 apartments of four and five rooms, including sleeping porches and will be air conditioned. It will occupy a lot 130 by 120 feet.

Negotiations are pending with Cornet & Zeibig for sites available for various apartment projects, several of which are contemplated on a large scale. The promoters contemplate launching construction with a view to completion this spring.

An undisclosed client of the Dubinsky Realty Co. has purchased a six-family apartment building at the northwest corner of Spring avenue and De Tonty street, in Shaw's Lafayette addition. The sale was made by the E. A. Bokern Real Estate Co. as agents for A. E. Hulage, the grantor in the transaction. The purchase price was not disclosed.

The three-family apartment building at 5601 Waterman avenue has been acquired by J. C. Sanger. Each apartment has seven rooms and 2 baths, sun parlor. The lot is 40 by 195. There is a four-car garage with side drive. The Henry R. Weisels Co. negotiated the sale.

BUNGALOWS IN SUBDIVISION AND TRACTS IN COUNTY SOLD

The John C. Greulich Realty & Investment Co. reports the following sales in Ingleside subdivision, on North Florissant and west of Riverview boulevard: Bungalow at 8828 Drury Lane to Gladys W. Kays; bungalow at 8552 Drury Lane to Frederick Westerhold Jr.; bungalow at 8560 Drury Lane to Bradford N. Locke; a lot, 42 by 190, on Drury Lane, for Francis J. Mc Gunigle to a client; a cottage on Clay avenue to Martin Schweppe for William E. and Caroline S. Dueing; a 20-acre farm on Derharker and Halls Ferry roads to Henry F. Strauss for Fred Westerhold Sr.; a two-acre tract on Sink road to Joseph E. Fischer for Fred Westerhold; flat at 2830 North Twenty-fifth street to Harrel E. Wagner for John Bischer; a residence at 3601 Clay avenue to Daniel J. Sullivan for Olive Coleman; flat at 4026 Lexington avenue to Minnie Wolf of Detroit, by a client; bungalow at 5473 Ruskin avenue to Sophie W. Schopfer for Ferdinand S. Buenger.

Taylor Avenue Store Leased.

A storeroom 20 by 80 feet at 514 North Taylor avenue, has been leased by Oscar Handler, through the Henry R. Weisels Co. The lessee will conduct a ladies' and children's ready to wear shop.

SOUTH SIDE AGENCY REPORTS RECENT TRANSACTIONS

The Jolly Real Estate Co. reports transactions closed during the first three weeks of March as follows:

No. 5207 Robert avenue, brick bungalow, from Anton E. Froidl to Walter and Josephine Juelich; 4363 Wallace avenue, frame bungalow, from Lizzie Faerber to Milton J. Kiefer; 3558 Bamberger avenue, brick bungalow, from Frank G. Burns to Albert and Mary Guze; 4348 St. Louis avenue, bungalow, from Dorothy A. Hoelker to George Grossman; 4988 Scholimeyer avenue, brick bungalow, from J. B. Wilmering to George J. Rohling and Hazel Rohling; 5225 Tennessee avenue, brick bungalow, from E. Ubben; lot at Parkwood and Haven street from Myra Thompson to Beatrice Smelcer.

HOUSE OF UNIQUE DESIGN IN ST. LOUIS HILLS

The new residence of Ralph A. Heinicke, president of the St. Louis Lithographing Co., at 6520 Itaska avenue in the St. Louis Hills subdivision, being developed by the Cyrus-Crane-Willmore organization, is a notable departure from the usual regimentation of the urban house set conforming to the lot lines. This building is angled on the lot-site, thus affording views in all directions. This also serves to protect the views from adjacent homes by elimination of the close-up.

The house is not only unusual in type, design and construction, its unique interior arrangements provide more adequately for modern living and comfort. There are no waste areas. All use areas are conveniently and compactly grouped around a central stairway for flexible and practical use conceived for this building by the architect Ed. H. A. Volkmann.

INDUSTRIAL BUILDING ON JEFFERSON AVENUE SOLD

The two-story industrial building at the southeast corner of Jefferson avenue and Eugenia street, has been bought by the St. Louis Lighting & Protection Co. It was owned by the J. G. Brinkmeyer estate.

The Christian-Brinkop Real Estate Co., the Isaac T. Cook Co. and the Frank J. Frick Real Estate Co. participated in the negotiations.

Property Recently Sold.

The Altmayer Real Estate Co. reports the following sales:

A brick cottage at 4519 Evans avenue for William G. Bridgeman Jr. to Bessie Brody; residence at 4523 Gibson avenue for Mr. and Mrs. John Schwarz to Mrs. Laura O'Rourke; bungalow at 4317 Juniata street for Mr. and Mrs. Samuel P. Meyers to Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Barker; bungalow at 4016 Fairview avenue for Mr. and Mrs. William H. Teepe to Clarence H. Fairchild; double flat at 3001-03 South Compton avenue for Mr. and Mrs. William Gubser to a client; bungalow at 3135 Gurney avenue for Mr. and Mrs. Herman Walters to Mr. and Mrs. Woodworth Smith; single flat at 3011 Indiana avenue for Mr. Howard Lively to Mr. and Mrs. John Schoeber; bungalow at 3614 Michigan avenue for a client to Mr. and Mrs. Alex Darnell; single flat at 2806 Wyoming street to Mr. and Mrs. John Chrestel; brick residence at 4874 Walsh avenue for Fred Koch & Son Building Co. to Mr. and Mrs. John E. Schwarz; bungalow on Green Parks road for Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Weber to Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Rector; cottage at 4363 Wallace avenue for Mr. and Mrs. William Faerber to a client of Jolly Realty Co.; single flat at 3871 Alberta street for Clarence H. Fairchild to Mr. and Mrs. William H. Teepe; three-family apartment at 6016 Maple avenue to Mr. and Mrs. William Gubser; bungalow at 7060 West Big Bend road for Mr. and Mrs. John Schoeber to Howard Lively.

Business Quarters Leased.

The building at 1603-05-07 Lafayette avenue, together with the vacant lot in the rear thereof, has been leased by the Winter Motor Car Co., which handles Willys and Hudson Terraplane motor cars. Alterations are now being made to the premises.

The Krawil Printing Co. has leased space on the first floor of the building at 13 South Fourth street.

The Airway Electric Appliance Co., manufacturers of vacuum cleaners and household appliances, has leased 1800 square feet on the fifth floor of the Mid-City Building at 320 North Grand. The concern now occupies quarters in the Syndicate Trust Building.

Negotiations incident to the above mentioned leases were handled by Arthur H. Fuldner of Oreon E. and R. G. Scott.

Colonial Residence Designed for Narrow Lot

This Brick and Frame Home Was Planned to Meet All Restrictions of the Subdivision in Which It Was Built.

IN several outlying communities certain building laws and restrictions have been set up which determine the type of house that is to be built in that particular neighborhood. Many of these restrictions are established by the trustees of the subdivision and are intended to maintain property values in the tract. Houses in a group of this kind are usually similar in character and size and this goes far toward upholding the value of the property.

The house shown here was designed to come within all the property restrictions in the tract. It was to be a one and one-half story house with at least two bedrooms on the second floor and the cost was to be no less than $7000. Since the lot was 45 feet wide and side building lines and a side drive were to be allowed, it meant that the maximum width for the house was 29 feet.

The style of the house is the popular Colonial and the plan was developed with the view towards making the rear yard into a garden. Living room and dining room face this garden and open out on a brick terrace.

The entrance hall is spacious and has an unusually large guest closet. The stairway is the typical Colonial with white balusters and dark hand rail. From this hall one goes directly into the living room.

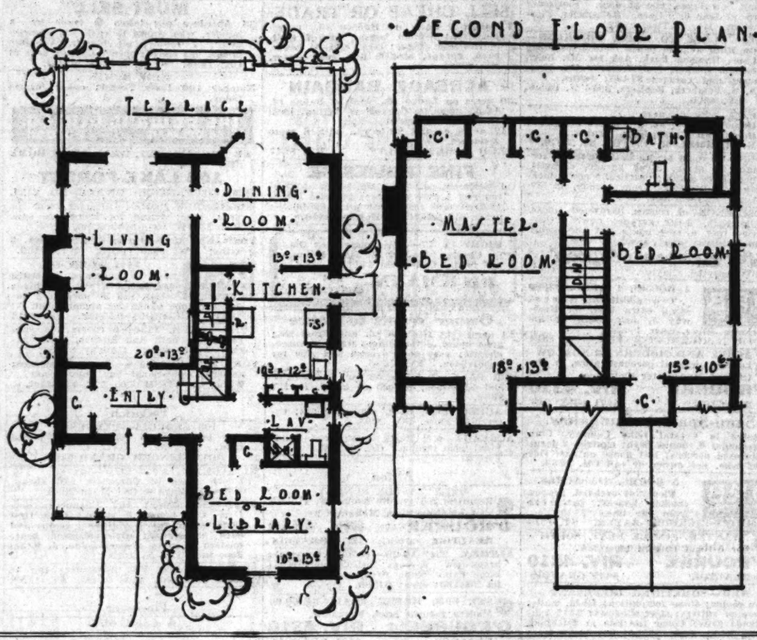
This room has two exposures and ample wall spaces for larger pieces of furniture. The delicately designed Colonial fireplace is balanced by a built-in bookcase on the opposite wall. The dining room which opens from the living room has a large bay window with French doors which lead to the terrace. The exterior wall of this room was purposely left blank in order to accommodate dining room furniture. The kitchen opens on the front entry and is efficiently arranged. There is a double drain board sink and ample cabinet and counter space. Access to the basement is through the kitchen by way of a side entry.

THE downstairs bedroom in the small home is coming to be regarded as a necessary part of the floor plan. Where the second floor is unfinished it may serve as such since it is usually planned near a downstairs bath. Where the bedrooms are on the second floor this downstairs bedroom may become library, study or guest room in accordance with the owner's wishes.

There are two good-sized bedrooms and a bath on the second floor. The master bedroom has three exposures which assure ample ventilation. Each bedroom has good closet space; the linen closet is just outside the bathroom. Storage space may be arranged in the gable of the library wing.

Specifications call for a poured concrete foundation, complete insulation and a winter air-conditioning furnace. The exterior is brick painted white and the gables of the second story are of frame construction. The roof is of blue-black composition shingles with flecks of red which give a certain warmth to the dark color. The garage is spaced on the rear of the lot. The house contains 24,000 cubic feet and the price, figured at present St. Louis price levels, is approximately 35 cents per cubic foot. This cost also includes the architect's fee.

The house was designed by Fred C. Sternberg, who is a member of the St. Louis Chapter, American Institute of Architects.



A New Building Problem

The increasing use of air-conditioning in homes brings up the problem of framing the house so that the air ducts can be easily carried through the partitions to the second floor.

The carpenters of the present generation have become used to the system of heating where small pipes are all that have to be considered, so they have not yet become accustomed to allowing for the larger metal ducts. Therefore, unless the framing of the house is studied and carefully planned before the work actually starts, added expense is almost sure to occur when the sheet-metal workers arrive on the job and start cutting plates and sills to get their ducts up through the walls.

All this can be avoided by reasonable care before hand. Frequently several ducts must run up through a bearing partition that has girders at each floor. In the cellar, if the girder is set below the floor joists, the duct can be curved over it; but where it is flush trouble ensues. In such cases a split girder should be used, either in steel or wood, so that the ducts may run through the space left between the two halves of the girder. If these provisions are not made as the frame is being erected, either there must be excessive cutting of important structural members or expensive bends must be inserted in the ducts, thus lessening their efficiency, adding to the costs and necessitating building odd boxes at ceiling lines or in corners to hide the ducts.

The more carefully the framing of the house is planned before work starts, the more smoothly the work will go and the less it will cost. In no other part of the operation is careful preliminary study more important than in the framing.

FRESH AIR AND SUN FOR NURSERY

Mothers the world over desire cheerful, pleasant nurseries for their children.

In arranging for a room of this kind, an abundance of fresh air and sunlight is important. If possible to add a sleeping porch to the room, it means great benefit to the occupant.

It is necessary, too, that materials used in the room be of the varieties that are readily kept clean. This safeguards the health of the child and reduces the labor of the person caring for the room.

In a room modernized for a nursery with a small amount of money, the walls were covered with paper of a light pastel plaid. The woodwork was painted a deep cream, and a composition floor resembling planking was laid. Venetian blinds were hung at the windows, and there were no curtains to hold the dust.

No ceiling light was used, and wall brackets had shades which completely eliminated any possible glare. No wires were strung about the room to cause falls or other accidents. Cupboards were provided for toys. Suitable and attractive furniture was chosen, and a washable rug covered the floor. While the room had a clean, well-cared-for look, there was a sufficiency of color introduced to prevent a bare appearance.

FOR BETTER LIVING

Kitchens are gay as well as business-like this year. Walls and trim are often painted bright colors, with cabinet moldings and window sashes in Chinese red, orange and other contrasting hues. Gay tulips may be stenciled above a tile wainscoting or on the center of cabinet doors.

An attractive scheme of decoration seen in a kitchen of a new home in Northern Virginia has semi-gloss white ceiling and walls, woodwork medium gray, trimmed with vermilion. The floor is coated with deep gray and the curtains at the windows combine the vermilion with white in a checked fabric.

A delightful sunroom in a renovated Westchester home owes much of its charm to the stenciled decoration on the broad flat trim of the many windows. A meandering vine was the motif, applied in green on a background of cream. The baseboard is green and the floor a darker green.

In decorating a top-floor bedroom with sloping walls and dormer windows, care must be taken to avoid the feeling of stuffiness. A small all-over-patterned paper is suitable with such a room, and the woodwork may be painted the same shade as the leading color in the paper. Ruffled curtains without draperies are a good treatment for dormer windows.

When building a home arrangements may be made to finish a top-floor bedroom at a later date.

A good white paint will reflect from 82 per cent to 89 per cent of the light striking it, while a dense black will reflect only about 2 per cent, and intermediate shades range between these figures.

SMALL WINDOWS MAY BE MIRRORED

Small windows were a great favorite in houses built during an earlier period. They were frequently placed at either side of a fireplace, over bookcases. Many of these houses are of sound construction and have large, airy rooms.

If the curtaining of the various-sized windows in these houses presents a problem to the new owner, a suggestion employed in a Jersey home may be of some value. Mirror glass was fitted over the little windows over the bookcases, and the result was a mirrored niche.

Plan Sleeping Porch with Care

There is no doubt that a sleeping porch, in many parts of the country, is a delightful feature as far as comfort and livability are concerned; but there is also no doubt that, architecturally, most of them are unfortunate, to say the least.

To project a two-story porch from the end of a Cape Cod cottage or an Italian villa is usually fatal to esthetic values, but such a pleasant and useful adjunct should not be sacrificed on the altar of architectural purity. By building enough solid masses in the walls to give it the look of a room, rather than a porch, it may appear as an extension.

Such a subterfuge is hardly honest architecture, however, and with the scorn of such deceits that modern designers have showered upon the old school those who still prefer the established forms are more sensitive to them and less willing to take that easy path. However, there are ways in which such a porch can be included without resorting to the common practice of attaching a bird cage on stilts to the side of the house and without disguising its true function.

A recessed porch with wide opening does not spoil the contours of the house and, if skillfully treated, can be fitted into the elevation quite acceptably and without any effort to deceive. Of course, recessing the porch does rob it of some of its breezes, but there are few places where the night air outside the house is not cool enough to make sleeping possible, even in the hottest weather.

Another solution is that of the modern school; disregard old conventions and build the various functional parts of the house where they will be most useful, and let the elevations take care of themselves.

Small Window Panes Make Repairs Simple

In the last half of the past century, large window panes became available. With the desire for "something different" that entered architecture after our Civil War, these were made standard.

The preference for small panes has returned and, except in the modern style, should be used both for good appearance and for economy of repair.

Splash Blocks.

Do not let downspouts or leaders empty directly on the ground; provide splash blocks at least three feet long under the spouts to carry the water away from the house.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. In laying a flagstone terrace, can it be placed right on the ground? J. L. B.

A. It can, but if heavy frosts are to be expected, it may heave and possibly crack. A foundation wall around the edge and a bed of coarse cinders or gravel at least eight inches thick under the terrace will help keep it intact. Of course, a concrete base for the flagstones will add greatly to its strength.

Q. We are going to build a house and are debating whether we should have what they call a hipped roof or a gable roof. Which would you suggest as best? ALICE M.

A. It is impossible to say which would suit your house better without knowing more about the type of house you contemplate building. However, if either type will be suitable, there are several points in favor of the gable end, or pitched roof: it gives more attic room and is much easier to ventilate.

Q. Is there any fixed rule for the height and depth of the steps in a staircase? MRS. RUTH J.

A. There is no one rule, but several, so you may take your choice. In some rules the sum of the rise (height) and tread (depth) equals from 17 to 18 inches. In others the product of the two equals from 70 to 80. It is advisable, if there is plenty of room for the stair, to keep the rise as near 7 inches as possible and not over 8 inches. The tread, or rather the cut, which is the distance from the face of one riser to the face of the next, should be between 9 and 11 inches.

Q. What height from the floor do you recommend for window sills? S. T.

A. In living rooms, if there is sufficient wall space so that no furniture need be placed under the windows, a low sill is desirable, even as low as 16 or 18 inches. In bedrooms and rooms where the wall space under the windows is needed, 2 feet 6 inches is better. If low window sills are used, be careful not to just pull the whole window down. Keep the head well up and make the window longer.

Q. I want to put a stone fireplace in the living room of the house we are building, and the builder says we must use yellow fire brick on the inside. Can't stone be used? It would look so much better.—MRS. MARY H.

A. Many types of stone can be used quite satisfactorily for the back and sides of fireplaces, but it is well to make sure before you use any that the kind contemplated for your fireplace is one of these. Some stones "explode" when subjected to excessive heat and cannot be used for fireplace interiors. The stones for the back and sides should be laid with the grain parallel with the floor; if they are laid with the grain in a perpendicular position, they will scale off. The back of the fireplace should not be less than 12 inches thick and preferably 16 inches. Hard-burned red brick also makes a nice lining for a stone-faced fireplace, so that may be used if no other proper stone is available. For the hearth, a large flat stone of the type that will withstand fire may be used, but it should be good and thick, and, unless laid on the ground, it should be on a concrete foundation. If laid with the flat grain parallel with the floor it will scale somewhat, and after a time there will be a hollowed-out place in the center; but if you keep a good deep bed of ashes on it, it will serve for many years.

H. W. FRAHN, President Central Chevrolet Co.

offers the sixteen (16) best Used Car bargains in St. Louis. Read the descriptions—come to this address—inspect the cars and I believe you will agree my statement is correct.
H. W. FRAHN

2931—'34 Chevrolet Coach	This one is really a beauty. Looks like new, runs like new, and carries a positive guarantee. See it today	$325
3049—'31 Chevrolet Coupe	There's lots of miles of real service in this exceptional car. Frahn picked it and personally checked every detail before selling	$150
3116—'35 Chev. Master Coach	This is as near to a perfect car as you will ever find. Paint, tires, motor, upholstery are in perfect shape	$395
3119—'36 Ford Fordor	Just traded in on a new Chevrolet and one of the finest used cars we have ever offered. It's a real bargain for only	$435
3152—'32 Chevrolet Sedan	The mechanics have checked this one over and it really purrs! Frahn personally believes it is a real bargain	$235
3174—'34 Ford Sport Coupe	If you are looking for a car with plenty of dash, backed up with a real smooth-running motor, see this one—only	$225
3175—'33 Chevrolet Coach	Ordinarily this car would sell for a much higher price, but Frahn says to sell it now to make room for new trade-ins	$245
3190—'35 Chevrolet Coach	Here's an ideal family car with every detail carefully checked. You can't buy the same quality elsewhere for only	$365
3182—'32 Ford Coach	Someone will get a real buy in this car which has always received good care. Exceptionally fine finish and worth more than	$145
3213—'35 Buick Sport Sedan	Ask our salesman for a demonstration. Ride in this one, and you'll learn what a real used car bargain really is; only	$485

TRUCKS

3222—'34 Chevrolet Pickup	This one really is a bargain. If you want a good truck with plenty of power and getaway, don't miss this one	$245
2074—'31 Chevrolet Panel	Some wise delivery man is going to get a real bargain in this speedy, dependable panel job. It's only	$185
3091—'34 Dodge Panel	This one should sell for more money but we have to have the room. You'll agree with Frahn that it's really a bargain for	$345
227R—'35 Chev. 1½-Ton Cab-Chassis	We've sold lots of trucks to satisfied customers, but we've never seen a bargain to equal this	$325
246R—'34 Chev. 1½-Ton Cab-Chassis	We just traded this one and have to get rid of it right away to make room. A real buy at	$295
249R—'32 Chev. 1½-Ton Cab-Chassis	We know this one won't stay on the floor long at this price. See it today and get a real bargain	$195

CARDINALS GET ONLY ONE HIT AND LOSE TO SENATORS, 2-0

BREADON LIKES CARDS' CHANCES BUT RICKEY IS NOT CONFIDENT

By W. J. McGoogan

Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, wouldn't give the club's chances of winning the pennant for those of any other team in the league, but Branch Rickey, vice-president and general manager of the Redbirds, fears the Cardinals may be the most over-rated club in the major leagues, according to statements by each of them last night.

Rickey talked over the telephone from Albany, Ga., where he went from the Cardinals' training base at Daytona Beach, Fla., while Breadon returned to St. Louis yesterday afternoon because of the illness of an adopted daughter.

The call to Rickey was prompted by a dispatch which stated that Branch had said the Cardinals "were" the most over-rated club in the major leagues.

What Branch Really Said.

"No, I did not say that," yelled Branch over the phone. "I did say that it was entirely possible that they may be the most over-rated team in the country, that their showing might justify that observation. Now, I told that young fellow to get that straight and I was afraid he would get it twisted."

Rickey was also quoted as saying the club's showing so far had raised considerable doubts about hitting power.

"No, I didn't," came back Rickey. "I did say that they haven't done any hitting as yet but I am confident that they will hit. I think they're all right and anybody who thinks that may be all wrong except Frank Frisch, who, I think, is the greatest manager in the country. He knows just what the trouble is."

Branch didn't say whether he gave the Albany interviewer a chance to figure that one out, but the mention of trouble indicated something might be wrong with the team, so Rickey was asked:

"What is the matter with the team, then, in your opinion?"

"Oh, I don't know. Maybe the doldrums, a certain self-sufficiency that's hard to explain.

"Say, what did they do today?" Rickey inquired as to the outcome of the Washington-Cardinal game.

One Pleasing Feature.

"They were beaten 2 to 0 and got only one hit off Weaver and Jablonowski," he was told, "but they did get some good pitching from McGee and Andrews, apparently."

"Well, you see I made the statement I did before I knew the outcome of the game. But you say McGee and Andrews did well? That's great, that's fine."

"How about Mize at first base, how about Terry Moore in center field, Gutteridge at third base and Owen behind the bat. How're they doing, Branch?" was the next question.

"I don't want to talk about anybody individually," he returned, "but Warneke has looked good so far and I'm expecting some good things from him."

Breadon was optimistic after a day at the hospital with the little girl who is recovering nicely from an operation for doublemastoid and that, perhaps, had something to do with his viewing the Redbirds' chances through rose colored glasses.

Sam is notoriously a fan anyway and always thinks his club is the best in the business. After five National League pennants and three world championships in the past 11 years he has had some justification.

Believes Club Is Stronger.

Anyway, he declared he felt the club was 20 per cent stronger this year because the reserves appeared to be that much stronger than the prospective reserves of 1936.

"And except for numerous misfortunes, we would have won the pennant last season," he declared. "The hitting in the South thus far has been weak," he went on, "but averages don't lie and when men like Mize, Medwick and Pepper Martin have hit .300 or better for years they'll do it again. And they haven't started as yet.

"Of course, I would rather win than lose and I hope they start soon, but I'm not worried.

"Gutteridge has been over anxious at third base. He's a nervous, high strung kid. But he'll settle down. He's our kind of ball player and has what it takes. He has courage, a good arm, speed, and he loves the game.

"Ogrodowski has looked like a different player since his arm has become better and I think it's doubtful if Owen will take the first string job away from him although Mickey looks good.

"Dizzy Dean is in a good frame of mind. When he came in, he runs all the way. He's hustling

Mills Batted Hard And Browns Lose To Kansas City, 6-3

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

McALLEN, Tex., March 27.—Ineffective pitching by Howard Mills, the Browns' left-handed recruit from San Antonio, permitted the Kansas City Blues to come from behind today and beat the Browns, 6-3, in an exhibition game that was witnessed by 1000 fans. The weather was still cold, the mercury remaining in the low fifties and this was responsible for the small turnout.

Runs batted in—Stumpf 2, Mazzera, Oglesby, Breese, English, Knickerbocker. Two-base hits—Stumpf 2, Bell. Three-base hit—Mazzera. Home runs—Oglesby, Breese. Sacrifice hit—Caldwell. Stolen base—Breese. Double plays—Marshall to Schulte to Oglesby; Hornsby to Knickerbocker to Davis; Mazzera to Hemsley. Base on balls—Off Caldwell 2, off Mills 3. Struck out—By Vance 1, by Moncrieth 2, by Mills 2. Umpires—Owens and Rue.

When Mills went to the mound in the sixth inning, after Earl Caldwell had held the Blues to seven hits, and one run for five frames, the St. Louis team was leading, 2-1, thanks to a bit of fence busting by outfielders Beau Bell and Mel Mazzera in the big leaguers' half of the sixth. Bell had opened with a double off the right field fence, Hornsby had followed with an infield hit and Mazzera had driven them both in with a long triple off the right field wall.

Lead Is Erased.

Thus the 1-0 lead the Blues had taken when rightfielder Al Marchand had walked and scored on George Stumpf's double in the first inning, was completely obliterated.

First baseman Jim Oglesby was the first batter to face Mills and he promptly tied the score by pumping a long homer over the right field fence. Catcher Eldon Breeze came through a few moments later with even a longer homer over the left field fence and th Blues were in front, never to be headed.

Marchand opened the eighth by beating out a smash to Hornsby's right. Stumpf walked and Bolyard singled to right, but Bell made a swell pickup and his perfect throw home would have caught Marchand at the plate had not the recruit catcher, Benny Huffman, working as Mills' battery-mate, dropped the ball. Stumpf reached third on the play and scored on third baseman Charley English's long fly.

In the eighth, Kansas City added another run when Eddie Marshall walked, took second a Mills' overthrow and sped home on Stumpf's double. The Browns tried to stage a rally in the ninth, but it fell short by three runs. Mazzera opened with a single, took second as Huffman was grounding out, and scored on Knickerbocker's base hit.

A Remarkable Throw.

Earlier in the game, Mazzera covered himself with glory with a remarkable throw from the outfield that nailed pitcher Vance at the plate, trying to score from third. This was in the fifth inning when it appeared as though Caldwell was going to get into trouble when he filled the bases with nobody out. Vance singled, Schulte beat out a smash off Hornsby's bare hand and Marchand walked. Stumpf fouled to Clift and Bolyard raised the long fly to Mazzera and the fine play at the plate followed.

Brownie Notes.

Many fans from Caldwell's home town of Pharr, Tex., three miles east of McAllen, attended the game. Caldwell formerly taught school at Pharr and last winter packed citrus fruit at McAllen.

Topper Rigney, former Detroit Tiger shortstop, and now a resident of Harlingen, Tex., manned the microphone and described plays

BOB WEINSTOCK BEATS HODGE FOR DISTRICT TENNIS TITLE

By Davison Obear.

Showing great improvement over his play in recent years, Robert Weinstock won the St. Louis district indoor singles tennis championship last night by wearing down the aging Karl Hodge in a four-set final at the Washington University field house. The scores were 10—8, 6—2, 3—6, 6—3.

Weinstock, leading member of the W. U. net team and pupil of Ike Macy, St. Louis Country Club professional, succeeded Albert Rothschild of New York, former St. Louisan who did not defend this year. Weinstock shares a leg on the new Roy Culbertson trophy with Rothschild.

The veteran Hodge, long an outstanding player in the district although now in his "forties" managed to win only one set, the third, when he pulled himself together and drove his forehand shots more

WRAY'S COLUMN

Yes, We Have No Bananas.

SAN ANTONIO, March 27.

AFTER three weeks of training, during which the Browns have played several games, we are able to state with confidence that if the St. Louis team is going to crowd anybody out of an American League pennant position, we know nothing about it.

We may conjecture, reasonably, that Manager Rogers Hornsby is in much the same state of mind. That's because, if you ask us or him to name the team's outstanding pitchers we and he would be compelled to answer: "Yes, we have none, today."

The joker is in that little "today." Tomorrow the situation may be something different. But the fact is that today pitchers have not really had a chance to show themselves under pressure. Perhaps about April 17, when you ask if we have any star pitchers, we'll be able to say: "Sure, help yourself out of this bunch—they're all stars."

The facts are, however, that Manager Hornsby has gleaned some favorable, although not yet convincing information about some of his staff men. This leads him to believe, for example, that he will get some really important help from: Blake, Hildebrand, Koupal, Caldwell, Tietje and Van Atta. If he's only a fraction right, and if the team outhits and outplays last year's club as it is expected to, second division rivals are going to have to go some in order to get out of the way of the climbing Browns before being pushed out.

They Can Hit.

THAT'S because this outfit is going to smack the enemy pitching far and near—mostly far. The club has shown its power in preliminary games. You can look for long hits from Allen, Vosmik, Bell, Bottomley, Clift and Hornsby. You can expect reasonably good hitting from West, Coleman, Hemsley, Davis, Carey, Knickerbocker and Lipscomb.

There is a real Murderers' Row possible when Allen, Vosmik, Bell, Hornsby, Bottomley and Clift are in the lineup. The others will not be weaklings.

The defense admittedly being

Can They Stop the Millers' Winning Streak?

These three players, Leo Carbol, Stopper Nelson and Joe Matte, form the No. 1 defense combination of the Flyers, who tonight begin the final playoff series for the American Hockey Association championship, opposing Minneapolis. The Millers have won their last nine games. But Johnny MacKinnon's men have something to protect, too—the championship, so something will go by the boards.

BROWNS' NO. 2 TEAM LOSES TO MILLERS, 15-1

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW BRAUNFELS, Tex., March 27.—The Browns' No. 2 team, under the direction of Jim Bottomley, dropped a 15 to 1 decision to the Minneapolis Millers of the American Association here this afternoon.

Bottomley said before hand that the game was to be in the nature of an experiment for Pitchers Les Tietje and Chief Hogsett. It was just that for both hurlers were sandbagged freely. Tietje did not really cut loose. He bent a curve or two over the dish, but for the most part tried to speed them by.

Hogsett seemed free and loose on the hill, but the Chief took things too easily. He tried to crossfire the left-handed hitters without success. His support was spotty and the Millers reached him for run-making blows in the clutches to increase their score.

Four of the 15 runs were made on Tietje, while Hogsett allowed the other 11.

Tietje still must go quite a ways to show that he has recovered from his sore arm.

The Browns collected only five hits off Right-handers Tauscher and Wagner, veteran and rookie, with Catcher Angelo Giuliani getting two of them. The Browns scored their one run in the fifth frame without a hit, getting around as a result of walks to Hogsett and Barkley, West's infield roller and Coleman's long fly to Spence in center.

The Browns did not have a real chance to score more than once, excepting the second inning, when Tauscher filled the bases with free tickets. Tietje was up, however, and tapped meekly to Tauscher.

Tomorrow the two teams meet at San Antonio with Jakucki scheduled to do some twirling for the Browns and Belve Bean for the Millers.

KID CHOCOLATE WINS EASILY FROM TEDESCO

NEW YORK, March 27. — The comeback-bound Kid Chocolate of Cuba, one-time holder of the world featherweight championship, had an easy time outpointing Allie Tedesco of Jersey City in an eight-round bout at Rockland Palace tonight. Chocolate weighed 127 and Tedesco 125¼.

A crowd of 3000 saw the Cuban Negro pummel his opponent with a steady body attack that won him nearly every round. In the seventh he landed a stiff left on Tedesco's nose and started a flow of blood which continued to the end of the scrap.

Flyers Begin the Final Hockey Playoff Series Against Millers Tonight

By W. J. McGoogan

Victorious in the regular schedule of the American Hockey Association by 12 full games, the St. Louis Flyers tonight begin defense of their championship won last season, and the season before, in the final playoff series against the Minneapolis Millers at the Arena. The scheduled starting time is 8:30 o'clock.

On the basis of the season's play the Flyers should be prohibitive favorites to defeat the Millers, as they won seven, lost two and tied one in 10 games with Minneapolis up to the present.

However, the Millers came strong during the last few weeks, and counting their three-straight-game defeat of St. Paul in the semi-final playoffs, have put together a string of nine successive victories, which includes two triumphs over the Flyers.

Not once this season have the Millers been able to defeat the Flyers at The Arena, the St. Louis team winning four games and tying one on home ice.

All the previous dope may be thrown in the waste basket in a short series, though, and the young, fast, eager Minneapolis team may upset their more experienced rivals.

Each Game to a Conclusion.

Each of the five games is to be played to a conclusion regardless of the time it takes. The second game is to be played at The Arena tomorrow night, after which the teams will move to Minneapolis for contests Wednesday and Thursday, then return here for a fifth meeting if it is needed.

The Flyers swept aside Kansas City in their penultimate series in three straight games and with the exception of Joe Matte and Bobby Burns, who are suffering from colds, the men are in condition for the finals. Ollie Mulvihill suffered a cut foot in Kansas City Tuesday night but the wound has healed sufficiently to permit him to play. Matte has a sore throat but went through a workout yesterday while Burns remained in bed in an effort to get into top condition.

Coach Johnny MacKinnon has announced that he will start Nelson in goal, Matte and Carbol at defense, Oscar Hansen, the league's leading scorer, at center; Mulvihill, left wing, and McDonald, right wing. This will leave himself, Swenson, Mitchell, Ingram, Burns and Purpur as spares.

Mulligan played with the Flyers some seasons back as did Jackson, while Patterson was a member of

ST. LOUIS BOY WINS IN U. S. SKATING MEET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Leo Freisinger, of Chicago, a member of Uncle Sam's 1936 Olympic team, took a big lead in the senior men's indoor sakting championships tonight by triumphs in the mile and 440-yard events. The tussle for the women's senior title was a wide open affair with four stars tied for first place.

Freisinger's pair of victories gave him 60 points. Behind him was another Chicagoan, Vic Ronchetti, who finished second in both races for a 40-point total. Delbert Lamb of Milwaukee, another Olympic team member, took third place in the mile to go into a tie for third with Joe Bree of New York at 10 points each.

The surprise of the opening night's competition was the failure of Marvin Swanson of Minneapolis, the national outdoor champion, to score in either final.

The anticipated battle between Madeline Horn of Beaver Dam, Wis., and Dorothy Franey Droison of St. Paul, got under way as scheduled, but Mary Dolan of Minneapolis, who scored a surprise victory in the 440-yard final, and Eleanor Thiel of Chicago, crowded into the picture to share in a four-way tie at 30 points each.

Miss Horn's chances were damaged when she was disqualified from points in the quarter mile, in which she finished third, behind Miss Dolan and Mrs. Drolson. The judges ruled Miss Horn out for impeding Mrs. Drolson's progress as they rounded a turn on the next to last lap. Miss Thiel moved up to third through the disqualification. Miss Dolan's time was 46.8 seconds.

Miss Horn, however, pulled into the running easily by winning the mile in three minutes, 21.6 seconds, with Miss Thiel second and Miss Dolan fourth and out of the points.

Byron Moe of Minneapolis took the lead in the Intermediate Divi-

DIZZY DEAN WILL FACE TIGERS IN GAME TODAY

Weaver and Appleton Pitch for Washington—Rookie Padgett Gets Lone Hit in Fourth Inning.

By J. Roy Stockton.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

ORLANDO, Fla., March 27.—Cardinal batting power, feeble all spring reached a new low this afternoon and the Washington Senators, held to six hits by Bill McGee and Nathan Andrews, shut out Frankie Frisch's Gas House Gang, 2 to 0.

Don Padgett, the left-handed hitting recruit outfielder from Columbus, lined a single to center in the fourth inning, and that was the only safety of the day for the ambitious Redbirds. Joe Medwick hit a long fly to center field and there were a few lively bounders hit to the Washington infield but otherwise you would have thought that the Washington hurlers, Monte Weaver and Pete Appleton, formerly Jablonowski, were facing a group of grammar school boys.

One Hit Off Weaver.

Weaver hurled five innings for the Senators and the one St. Louis safety was made while he was on the hill. Appleton hurled the last four frames and his sharp downshoot, exploding like a fire-cracker, had the Cardinals swinging with ferocious futility.

Frisch had to find whatever consolation there was in the fact that his pitching also was rather good. McGee gave two singles and a base on balls in the first inning, but had it not been for a wild pitch that scored Buddy Lewis from second base, he would have gone through the inning without serious damage.

Lewis singled with one out in that first frame and Bluege popped a single to the same field. McGee then made his wild pitch, Lewis scoring and Bluege reaching third. After Sington walked, a double play, Mize to Durocher to Mize, ended the inning.

In the fifth with one out, Buddy Myer lined a single to right and after Hogan struck out, Wright batted for Weaver and walked. Chapman then hit a line drive that Frisch reached, but could not hold and Myer reached the plate just ahead of Frank's throw to Owen.

Birds' Pitching.

There were four singles off McGee in five innings and Andrews yielded two in his four frames on the mound.

It was a chilly dampish day, more suitable to pinochle or football and neither team seemed to be very much interested in the business of the ball game.

Redbird Notes.

Dizzy Dean will make his first appearance of the spring on the hill tomorrow afternoon when he faces the Detroit Tigers, his old friends o fthe 1934 world series, in an exhibition game at Daytona Beach. Jim Winford will divide the day's work.

A squad of reserves will journey to Sanford to play the Chattanooga Club of the Southern Association.

Dizzy's Reception.

Dizzy served on the coaching line this afternoon. When the announcer informed the crowd of 400 of the fact, over the public address system, there wasn't a sound from the stands.

The game was played in a drizzling rain. Florida got the frings of the cold wave and topcoats were taken from their hangers, much to the discomfiture of Chambers of Commerce.

Dizzy Dean in the last few days, has picked up approximately $200 playing golf. He twice defeated Mort Bright, owner of the hotel where the club is stopping. Dizzy shot the first nine yesterday in 33 and moaned that he had missed two short putts.

MISS MILEY WINS FROM BABE DIDRIKSON, 6-4

By the Associated Press.

AUGUSTA, Ga., March 27. — Miss Marion Miley, pretty veteran amateur campaigner from Lexington, Ky., defeated long-hitting Babe Didrikson, Beaumont, Tex., professional, 6 and 4, to win the seventh Augusta invitation golf tournament today.

Miss Miley's victory, achieved with a par-busting performance as a cold wind swept the Forest Hills course, made her a dual Augusta champion, for she also won the title in 1935.

A shivering gallery of approximately 1000 watched the pro-amateur final of the tournament.

MICHIGAN WINS NATIONAL INTERCOLLEGIATE SWIM MEET

WOLVERINES PILE UP TOTAL OF 75 POINTS TO GAIN TITLE

Ohio State Second With 39 Points, Yale Third—Haynie Voted Outstanding College Swimmer.

By the Associated Press.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 27. — Michigan stirred up a tidal wave in the University of Minnesota pool tonight and rode its crest to the National Intercollegiate swimming championship.

The Wolverines swept aside all opposition in piling up a total of 75 points, almost double that of its nearest rival, Ohio State, which had 39, and in addition accounted for two new national records in the two days of racing.

The new records went to the Michigan 300-yard medley and 400-yard free style aggregations. The medley team Friday lowered its own mark of 2:58.2 made in 1936 to 2:57.8, and the free stylers set up a new time of 3:32.2 in their specialty in tonight's windup event. The old record for the 400-yard free style relay was 3:34 made by Yale University in 1935.

Tom Haynie, Michigan's long distance star and a member of the 400-yard relay team, was adjudged the nation's most outstanding collegiate swimmer by a committee of the National Collegiate Coaches' Association.

Yale University pulled into third place, one point behind Ohio State, with 38. Other schools figuring in the scoring were: Northwestern 13; University of Iowa 11; University of Chicago 7; University of Pennsylvania 6; Stanford University 5; University of Minnesota and Princeton, 4 each; University of Illinois and Dartmouth, one each.

The Michigan team was awarded a trophy emblematic of the championship, the first time this has been done in the 14 years the meet has been staged. The Ann Arbor team also dominated last year's championships, held at Yale, and played a successful title defending role in its smashing triumph in the two-day meet concluded tonight.

The 1937 list of individual champions:

1500 METER FREE STYLE—John Macionis of Yale.
50-YARD FREE STYLE—Edward Kirar of Michigan.
150-YARD BACKSTROKE—William Neunzig of Ohio State.
220-YARD FREE STYLE—Tom Haynie of Michigan.
ONE-METER LOW BOARD DIVING — Jim Pattrson of Ohio State.
300-YARD MEDLEY RELAY—Michigan (Frederick Cody, Jack Kasley, Erward Kirar).
100-YARD FREE STYLE—Edward Kirar of Michigan.
200-YARD BREAST STROKE—Jack Kasley of Michigan.
440-YARD FREE STYLE—Tom Haynie of Michigan.
THREE-METER HIGH BOARD DIVING—Ben Grady of Michigan.
400-YARD FREE STYLE RELAY — Michigan (Waldemar Tomski, Tom Haynie, Edward Kirar, and Robert Mowerson).

sion by winning the 440 yard test and finishing second to Tom Beacke of Chicago, in the mile.

Lavergne Dahm, in the junior girls' quarter mile, and Neal Brunner in the midget boys' 220 yards, gave Cleveland two victories. Minneapolis also scored in the smaller sections, with Pat Maloney winning the junior boys' 440 yards, and Geraldine Bates taking the Intermediate Girls' race over the same distance.

The senior men will battle it out tomorrow night in three events, the half mile, three quarters mile and three miles, and the senior girls will attempt to settle their struggle in two tests the half mile and three-quarters mile.

Alfred Perry Jr., accounted for St. Louis' single victory by winning the Juvenile Boys' 440 yards in 45 seconds, with Bob Fitzgerald of St. Paul second and Jack McCaffrey, Chicago third. Ed. Le Maire of St. Louis was fourth.

The summaries:

SENIOR WOMEN 440 YARDS—Won by Mary Dolan, St. Paul; second, Dorothy Franey Droison, St. Paul; third, Eleanor Thiel, Chicago; (Madeline Horn, Beaver Dam, Wis., finish third but was disqualified). Time, 46.8 seconds.

all OK, we are wondering why the Yankees, the Tigers and the Indians are not beginning to worry about our Browns' pitching. Because, in our opinion, there is a just ground for worry lest that misfit bunch of aged and half-baked throwers should unexpectedly develop into a group of fairly good heavers.

It's a possibility, but hardly a probability. It isn't to be expected that a staff of veterans, not one of whom has won 20 games a season in years, if ever, will suddenly produce what it takes to beat pennant contenders.

Maybe We Were Wrong.

FEW days ago we wrote that Hornsby could "take it," but, thinking over one circumstance, we are not so sure. It happened at Austin. Hornsby and Beau Bell had been singled out of the Browns' squad and called to home plate for a few eulogies—and presents. They both are native sons.

The speaker began. Hornsby was the theme. He told of Hornsby's achievements on the diamond. He recounted deeds that made him the King of Swat. He quoted records by the yard, that Hornsby had achieved.

As he approached his climax, the superlatives mounted. Hornsby fidgeted from one foot to the other. He turned his face sideways, then all the way around. Then he swung back and looked helplessly from side to side, as if to say: "For cripes sake, can't somebody stop this guy?"

We even got the idea, at one point of the eulogy, that Hornsby blushed. Probably we're mistaken. The sun was hot—it might have been the new tan.

But we're here to say that Mr. Hornsby wasn't taking it. In fact, we got the idea that the only reason he didn't take it on the lam was because there was no outlet. He was completely surrounded by eulogists.

After it was over they gave him a book—something he seldom reads—and a four-quart hat, which he'll never wear.

He almost broke over the traces when they made him open the hat box and put on the Stetson. But one of the officials put it over by keeping a firm hold on one of Hornsby's arms while Rogers went through the motions.

The next time they get Hornsby out for presentation exercises we predict that they will have to do it with the aid of a firing squad.

Presbyterian Five Of St. Louis Wins Y. M. C. A. Title

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 27.—Two new champions won crowns in the Missouri Y. M. C. A. basketball tournament here tonight, and two of last year's winners successfully defended their titles.

The Avers Oilers of Hannibal captured the Class A championship by defeating Monsanto of East St. Louis, 20 to 16. The Hannibal Zims, 1936 champions, were eliminated in a semifinal encounter with Monsanto.

The St. Louis North Side "Y" was the other new titleholder. North Side defeated the St. Joseph Fleemans, 28 to 12, to win the Class B honors.

The Kansas City Northeast Juniors retained their supremacy in the junior division by beating Huffman Memorial Methodist of St. Joseph in the final, 26 to 19.

Kingshighway Presbyterian of St. Louis remained at the top of the church division by turning back Lafayette Presbyterian of St. Louis, 29 to 25.

CANADIENS DEFEAT DETROIT STARS IN HOCKEY TITLE SERIES

By the Associated Press.

MONTREAL, March 27. — The Montreal Canadiens won their first game in the playoff series with the Detroit Red Wings for the National Hockey League championship tonight, defeating the 1936 league and Stanley Cup champions 3 to 1 after Norm Smith, star Detroit goalie, was injured in the second period.

LENHART HURT, LEWIS TO BOX DONALD BARRY IN BOUT FRIDAY

Donald Reds Barry will take the place of Fred Lenhart as the opponent of John Henry Lewis in the main event of the boxing show at the Auditorium Friday night, Larry Atkins, matchmaker of the Fred W. Stockham Post of the American Legion, announced last night.

Barry, who hails from Washington, D. C., is a heavyweight, tipping the scales at about 195 pounds and in 1934 fought a 10-round draw with Lewis.

Lenhart reported to Atkins that he had an injured shoulder and asked that the fight be postponed for a week but Atkins decided there was no use in taking a chance that Lenhart would be o. k. by that time so he arranged for Barry's services.

Aside from the draw with Lewis, Barry's record is not an impressive one. Apparently he is a trial horse for the light-heavyweight divisions. He has met a number of the ranking boxers of both classes. He fought draws with Patsy Perroni and Abe Feldman, in addition to that with Lewis. He was knocked out by Joe Louis in three rounds in 1935, by Leroy Haynes in four rounds and Hank Hankinson in five rounds in the same year. He was kayoed by Al Gainer in five rounds in 1936 and lost to Nathan Mann and Hard Rock Harden.

Recently he dropped a 10-round decision to Eddie (Unknown) Winston.

These bouts are shown in the records of Barry's opponents as his name does not appear in the record book for 1937, but Atkins claims that he owns decisions over Charley Massera, Hans Birkie, Marty Gallagher and Natie Brown, who recently was knocked out by Louis in Kansas City.

Barry is scheduled to appear here early this week to finish training for the contest.

Lewis has been working out at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. for the past few days, boxing with Leonard Bostick and Monroe Harrison, among others.

Other members on the Friday card, too, have been busily engaged in getting ready for their contests. Allen Matthews, who is to box Texas Joe Dundee, has been working at the West End gymnasium; Joe Parks, who is to meet Honeyboy Jones, is going through his paces at the Business Men's Gymnasium today.

Jimmy Garrison, clever Kansas City lightweight, and Jose Estrada are due here in a day or so. They meet in the opening 10-rounder.

BEARS' NINE DROPS ANOTHER CONTEST, 12-10

By Reno Hahn.

It was still as cold as a well digger's big toe yesterday afternoon at Liggett Field, but that did not prevent Washington University from playing another baseball game with Bradley Tech. They went the full nine innings and when the benumbed statisticians had tabulated the score, they found that Bradley had won, 12 to 10.

The third of the three-game series, scheduled as the second half of a doubleheader yesterday, was postponed because of the cold weather. Bradley took the opening contest Friday afternoon, 15 to 11.

Steve Hopkins pitched for the Bears, and he was given an early lead when his mates hammered Hendricks, the starting Tech pitcher, for four runs. Bradley matched that number in the second with a like number, but the Bears tied it at 5-all in their half of the second.

In the fifth, Bradley regained the lead with three runs, and in the seventh and eighth added one and three runs, respectively. The Bears broke out with a rally in the ninth that threatened to tie the score, but they were checked after counting twice.

Bradley made 16 hits, the Bears 15. The Bears also were weaker in the field, committing five errors to only two for Bradley.

DETROIT TEAM MOVES INTO SECOND PLACE IN A. B. C. EVENT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27. — The Eckhart and Becker Brews team from Detroit gave the Mid-Western delegation in the American Bowling Congress its most impressive performance tonight by taking over second place in the major five-man team competition of the tourney.

The Detroiters rolled 3043 in their three games to miss by two pins the 3045 first-place performance posted by the Pastime A. C. of Syracuse several days ago.

The Detroit performance continued the rapid shifting of the leaders which featured the tournament sessions today and tonight, particularly the 699 score which sent Emil Garbarino, young Middletown, N. Y., Kegler, into the lead in the singles division.

extra innings by J. Roy Stockton

ORLANDO, Fla., March 27.

Serious Business.

JOHNNY LEONARD MARTIN, with his guitar and harmonica and his Cardinal quartet, does all he can to brighten the leisure hours at the training camp of Frankie Frisch's Gas House Gang, but one of the oldtimers remarked the other night as he looked at the boys sitting peacefully in the lobby chairs, that training camps weren't what they used to be.

"I mean they don't pull the practical jokes and frame up on the rookies the way they did in the good old days," he explained. "When I broke in, we never went through a spring without a badger fight and such like."

Of course you know what a badger fight is. It starts with two old-timers talking about their dogs and their badgers. Zeke allows as how Old Tillie was the best badger fighter he ever saw. What kind of a dog was she? Oh, just a cross between a hound and an airdale, with just enough bull dog somewhere along the line to make her take hold and grit her teeth. By this time one of the young players is interested and the build-up starts.

Perhaps the next night, Zeke remarks that the constable told him he had the best badger dog in the county and that if they could find a good tough badger, they planned to have a fight. The conversation goes on. The build-up may take a week. Finally the fight is arranged, to be held in the fire engine house, or in somebody's barn. They used to have livery stables in those days and you couldn't find a better place than a livery stable. Those really were the good old days. A garage doesn't compare with a good old livery stable. Concrete, gasoline and motors have taken something out of this country.

The Betting Is Heavy.

WELL, the betting began and everybody bet one way or another. And there were some hot arguments. Came the time for the fight and a loud argument as to who was going to release the badger. A badger always is taken to a fight in a wooden box. A rope is around his neck and the rope always protrudes from under the box. You see the rope, but don't see the badger. A badger fights better if he's kept in the dark until the time for him to pit his ferocity against a dog.

The livery stable keeper is disqualified as the badger releaser, because it is disclosed in a stormy argument that he has wagered $25 on the dog. Everybody has a bet and it looks like no fight, until the rookie is disclosed quite casually as the only man at the show who hasn't done any betting. He's the only neutral and so he pulls the badger. A large crowd is always there, the excitement is terrific and the nervous rookie is nervous and perspiring. He's thinking about the honor that is his and how he'll write home and tell the folks how he was picked by all the other big league ball players and village crackerjacks, to pull the badger at the big fight.

That's about the end of it, except that when the rookie pulls that rope, after many shouted instructions and warnings to pull it just right, hard enough, but not too hard, he finds that instead of a badger being on the other end of the rope under that box, it is only a rather homely piece of earthenware.

Stealing Oranges.

THEY framed on a veteran umpire at the Cardinal training camp at Avon Park, 10 or 11 years ago. Avon Park is in the citrus belt, and the boys talked for several nights about a wonderful grove down the road a half mile, a grove of wonderful king oranges, the best you could find. The owner was a crank, and it would be a good joke to pilfer a sack of those king oranges. It sounded like a good idea in the cool of a boresome evening and the umpire was all for it.

Quietly, with darkened automobile lights, they made their way to the grove. Frisch was one of the goats and Rabbit Maranville was another. We won't mention the umpire's name, because they've kidded him enough about it.

When the sack was half full of oranges, and the umpire had the sack in his hands, a challenge came from the darkness. Who was stealing his oranges, the voice wanted to know. "Stop where you are or I'll shoot."

Ball players and an umpire couldn't afford to be caught stealing oranges. It didn't take long to figure that out. So nobody stopped. The nimble Maranville fell out of the tree. The umpire and the ball players ran. There was a shot and behind him the umpire could hear somebody groaning.

A Weary Umpire.

TWO hours later the umpire staggered into the Avon Park hotel. He had skirted the town. He had waded drainage ditches. He had climbed fences and walked railroad tracks. Half way home, remorse struck him as he realized he had run, leaving a wounded comrade back there in the king orange grove. Frisch and Maranville did a bit of plain and fancy detouring, too, but before they got back they heard somebody laugh and realized they were victims of a practical joker. But the umpire spent a miserable night, thinking of that groaning comrade, back there in the grove.

For weeks, if a waitress asked that umpire if he wanted orange juice or a grapefruit, he looked around for somebody to fight. And he issued a warning that if anybody ever threw an orange or a grapefruit on the field while he was umpiring, he'd chase half a dozen stars out of the game, on one pretext or another.

Those were the good old days. Now it's bridge, a bit of singing by Pepper Martin's hill-billies, a couple of soda pops and off to bed. Baseball has become a serious business.

the St. Louis Eagles for a short time.

Clem Loughlin, coach, and William Tobin, business manager of the Chicago Blackhawks, have wired for reservations for the game, as have scouts for the Montreal Maroons and the New York Rangers.

A. Frank Ruppenthal, president of the Flyers, announced yesterday that he had closed negotiations for a series of games for the St. Louis players on the Pacific coast at the conclusion of the playoffs, regardless of the outcome.

The Flyers are to go to Portland, Ore., at the conclusion of the series with Minneapolis, then play Vancouver. Other contests are pending for Spokane and Seattle, Wash., Oakland, Cal., and possibly Los Angeles.

Only 11 men are likely to make the trip and the Flyers plan to meet today to decide those who will go.

Downtown "Y" Swimmers Win 5 State Events

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 27.—The St. Louis Downtown Y. M. C. A. won five first places and seven second places in the senior division of the State "Y" swimming meet at the University of Missouri today.

Charles Strotz and Don Rogivue, both of Kansas City, each annexed a pair of first places in the senior division. Entries from the St. Louis South Side "Y" failed to win any event, but collected a second place and six thirds.

WEINSTOCK BEATS HODGE IN DISTRICT INDOOR TENNIS FINAL

accurately as Weinstock became erratic.

But Hodge fell into errors in the deciding set. After the score was even at three-all, Weinstock went into the lead by winning his service. The youthful star then took advantage of Hodge's misplays to take the game and won the match by taking his own service in the final game.

It was Weinstock's service and stroke variety that gave him victory. He mixed the pace with good forehand and chop strokes and his back hand was working well.

About 150 persons attended the match. In the first set Weinstock took an early lead of three games, then Hodge won four straight. They alternated up to a 10—8 score when Weinstock's improved service gave him a decided advantage to take the set. In this battle Hodge had set point twice at 7—6 but lost it.

Feeling the effect of this punishment, Hodge nevertheless took the first two games of the second set. Then Weinstock pounded baseline shots at him and forced him into errors. Weinstock continued to improve his serve, frequently getting aces, to take the set.

Frank Keaney and Ted Eggmann won the doubles final. They defeated McNeil Smith and Bill Krueger, 5—7, 4—6, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

Nathe, Sottrell Win Doubles Bowling Match

The Silver Seals doubles team of Ambrose Nathe and Chris Sottrell won a special match from the star Club Plantation pair of Hank Summers and Lowell Jackson by 35 pins last night. The match was an added feature of the Classic Traveling League play at the German House Recreation.

Nathe rolled a score of 583 and Sottrell 591 for a total of 1174. Summers had 622 score and Jackson 517 for 1139. A side stake of $100 was the prize for the winners.

The Silver Seals retained their lead in league play by two games, with the Budweisers dropping from second to third and the Hermanns taking second.

The Seals defeated Say It With Flowers, 2966 to 2657. The Hermanns beat Club Plantation, 2935 to 2650. And the Witeks won from the Budweisers 2759 to 2672.

High man for the evening was Sam Garofalo of the Hermanns with a total score of 625. He had a high single of 245.

Warneke Great Acquisition.

"Warneke is one of the greatest acquisitions we ever made. You'd think he was with the club all his life the way he has taken to the other players and they to him.

"I saw Paul Dean throwing a ball to a catcher, Wednesday. He was bearing down and following through. He seemed to have plenty of stuff. After he had finished I asked him if his arm felt all right and he said he felt better than he had since 1934, that he just never felt right in 1935 or 1936.

"So you see I don't see any reason to worry and don't forget we're still three weeks away from our first game with the Browns."

BRADDOCK GIVEN THE PAPERS IN GARDEN'S SUIT, MARSHALL SAYS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—In spite of Heavyweight Champion James J. Braddock's insistence it must have been "two other guys," the U. S. Marshall's office in Newark, N. J., declared tonight he was served with papers in Madison Square Garden's suit to prevent his fighting Joe Louis in Chicago on June 22.

Braddock, through his manager, Joe Gould, and his attorney, Judge Samuel B. Gould, had asserted earlier that the papers were not served, as the Garden claimed, and that the titleholder would accept service Monday at Newark of a Federal Court order designed to restrain him from fighting Louis.

Robert C. Forrest, marshal in charge of the U. S. Marshal's office in Newark, made it clear tonight that there was no mistake as far as he was concerned. He explained he saw a man he definitely knew to be Braddock served with the papers by Deputy Marshal Gerald O'Shaughnessy this morning.

Investigators for Madison Square Garden were at Braddock's apartment house last night and saw him go in, Forrest explained. Early today, he was seen to leave by a rear door and get into an automobile containing three other men.

"O'Shaughnessy opened the door of the car, showed the papers to Braddock and explained what they were," Forrest related. "Braddock refused to accept them and held his hands in the air. O'Shaughnessy then laid the papers on Braddock's lap and Braddock drove off."

Confirming Forrest's announcement, Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, president of the Garden, also insisted Braddock was served, and remarked:

"It's very nice of Jim to offer to accept service after he has been served. This whole thing is ridiculous from start to finish."

The mix-up over the whole thing began when Carl S. Kuebler, Garden attorney, announced in Jersey City that Braddock had been served with the order requiring him to show cause April 5 at Newark why an injunction should not be issued to prevent the Louis fight.

After Marshal Forrest's announcement, Joe Gould, the champion's manager, still insisted Braddock had not been served with the papers.

"You can say for me," he shouted, "that Braddock hasn't been in New Jersey at all today. He has been here in my hotel with me. He is leaving here at midnight, because they can't serve him with the papers on Sunday.

"I don't know why there is all this kidding around about the papers. We haven't been served yet, and we won't be until Judge Gould, my brother, accepts them for Braddock Monday."

Earlier in the day William McDermitt, United States Marshall, in Newark said deputies hunting for the champion were reported to have served the wrong man.

Joe Gould in New York verified McDermitt's report and added jubilantly that the deputies had served one "Gunboat Williams," whom Gould described as a former sparring partner of Max Schmeling.

Champion in New York.

In addition to Gould's announcement of his willingness to accept the Madison Square Garden Federal Court order, the most important development of the day was the reappearance of Braddock.

The champion had been missing since last Monday when the Garden's attorneys instituted action against him in the Miami, Fla., courts. Braddock vanished about the same time the announcement of this action appeared. He was reported variously to be enroute to Illinois, New Jersey and New York.

The Garden is seeking to force Braddock to fulfill his contract to meet Max Schmeling of Germany in New York, June 3.

Judge Gould said it would not be necessary for Braddock to appear in Jersey Monday. He added that he (Gould) would accept the order for the champion at any time during the day in his Newark office.

Asked what his plans were for defense, the Judge said: "Our defense will simply be that our contract to meet Joe Louis in Chicago June 22 in no way interferes with our contract to meet Schmeling, June 3.

"Our contract with the Garden says that Braddock cannot participate in any fight with Joe Louis until after June 3, and unless I'm mistaken, June 22 is after June 3."

A paradox of the muddle at the moment is that Manager Gould yesterday expressed doubt that the Braddock-Louis bout will come off in Chicago, anyway. The Illinois Senate passed a bill limiting the price of tickets to $10, and Gould said the fight would not go on if this became law.

ST. LOUIS WAGNER TEAM TRIUMPHS IN Y. M. C. A. VOLLEYBALL

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 27. — Wagner of St. Louis defeated the St. Louis Downtown "Y", 15-6 and 15-9, here tonight to win the Missouri Y. M. C. A. volleyball championship, Class A.

Wagner, 1936 champion, was blasted out of the upper bracket in a first round game with Kansas City. The defenders worked back to the top, however.

DISTRICT BODY TO WORK WITH U. S. L. T. A. IN NATIONAL PLAN

Program Designed to Develop Amateur Stars for International Play—Local Committee Named.

St. Louis will be included among the more than a score of cities designated as observation points in the Junior Davis Cup program of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, the Post-Dispatch has learned from the Association.

Notification of this was not a complete surprise to the St. Louis District Tennis Association, which had appointed a committee to serve in this program in the event St. Louis was included.

In a telegram yesterday, replying to a Post-Dispatch inquiry, the U. S. L. T. A. said:

"St. Louis wil be included in our Junior Davis Cup program."

Assignments to 18 cities already had been made. The program is for development of promising young tennis players in different sections of the country and supervision of tournaments by sectional associations which are expected to produce material for future Davis Cup teams.

The committee named by the St. Louis Association is as follows: Wray Brown, chairman; Monroe Lewis, vice-chairman; Karl Hodge, Joyce Portnoy and Davison Obear.

The committee as yet has not had time to prepare its own plans. Kansas City has been designated as another control point in the program, but supervision of the two associations in the Missouri Valley is not expected to overlap.

One possible plan may be to divide the valley territory with St. Louis covering the eastern section, including Iowa, Eastern Missouri and Arkansas, and Kansas City the Western, of Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Western Missouri.

Outstanding players produced by this program will be sent to the national junior tournament at Culver, Ind., Aug. 2, where Davis Cup officials will have an opportunity for final observation of junior Davis Cup players who must be within the age limit of 15 to 20.

18 Squads Being Formed.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—An exchange of promising young players, as well as ideas, among the various sectional associations loomed today as one of the major developments in the United States Lawn Tennis Association's formation of junior Davis Cup squads.

Eighteen of these squads, under the direction of local chairmen, are being, or already have been, formed in as many leading cities, and at least a dozen more will have been established before the end of the year. Cities now on the list are New York, Chicago, Kansas City, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, Hartford, Memphis, Atlanta, Washington, Cleveland, Houston, New Orleans, Salt Lake City, Denver and Nashville.

Practicing at Longwood.

The most advanced steps have been made in Boston and Chicago. Many of the most promising youngsters in the New England area are practicing regularly on the Longwood covered courts at Chestnut Hill, Mass. Their instructor in the fundamentals of championship tennis is Ralph Chambers, Longwood pro who has coached the U. S. Military Academy teams at West Point.

A round-robin tournament in Chicago has uncovered a number of prospects, all of them within the junior Davis Cup age limit of 15 to 20.

In New York, the Eastern Lawn Tennis Association, after distributing detailed questionnaires to competitors in the recent national junior championships, has on file complete records on 60 of the leading juveniles in the district. The E. L. T. A. plans to pick its junior cup squad after running an invitation singles tournament early in the season.

As the nation-wide plan, under the general supervision of U. S. L. T. A. President Holcombe Ward progresses, there will be an exchange of outstanding youngsters between sections. Boys who stand head and shoulders above the competition in their own territory, will be given an opportunity to play elsewhere against juniors and leading senior players better able to give them the sort of rivalry they need.

Hopes to Produce Stars.

From these youngsters, who will receive coaching in court etiquette as well as technique, the U. S. L. T. A. hopes to produce in the near future a group of 75 to 100 capable of adding color, as well as class, to the wide run of senior tournaments.

The local chairmen, together with National Chairman Arlick H. Man, Jr., and Capt. J. H. Bishop, for several years in charge of the annual national junior and boys championships at Culver, Ind., make up the national committee and have general supervision over the program.

BILLIKEN NINE OPENS SEASON AGAINST IOWA

The St. Louis University baseball team will open its 1937 season tomorrow afternoon against the University of Iowa nine on Diamond No. 11 in Forest Park.

The Billikens, who won the district championship last year, are given small chance of defeating the Hawkeyes, who finished second in the Big Ten standings last year, winning eight of 10 conference battles and 16 of 22 games played.

Both teams were hard hit by graduation but Iowa has excellent prospects. The Billikens have also been handicapped by recent cold weather while the Hawkeyes have been playing the Southern circuit, meeting such teams as Louisiana State and Mississippi College.

Following the game with the Billikens, the Iowa nine plays two games with Bradley Tech at Peoria, April 2 and 3. This year's southern sojourn is the first since 1930 for Iowa University.

Bob Feller's Cousin.

Either Capt. Lowell Gosser or Harold Manders, both right-handers, will face the Billikens. Manders, a promising sophomore, is a cousin of Bob Feller, sensational Iowa schoolboy now with Cleveland.

Seven regulars from last year's Billiken team have graduated, including Roy Scott, submarine hurler, and Ed Drone, veteran catcher, who is expected to play on one of the Browns' minor league teams this year. The Billikens will also miss the batting power given by Henry "Red" Krause, Scotty McDonald and Jim Mason, who composed the Billiken outfield.

Carl Yates, husky left-hander, Lou Drone, second-sacker and pitcher, and Sid Mudd, third baseman, are the only regulars remaining from last year's club. Mel McGonnigle and Frank Reilly, sophomores, are also on the Bills' pitching staff.

Veith Breaks Thumb.

Johnny Veith, who was expected to take over the catching post vacated by Ed Drone, broke a thumb in one of the early practice sessions. Bill Clark, guard on the varsity football team, is the best of the other candidates for the catcher's position.

Several members of the St. Louis University varsity football squad, Woody Herrmany, Carl Totsch, Les Cagle, Frank Gayer and Johnny Nunn are candidates for the outfield positions.

DODGERS WIN FOURTH STRAIGHT VICTORY BY BEATING TIGERS, 6-3

By the Associated Press.

LAKELAND, Fla., March 27.—Landing on three rookie pitchers for a dozen hits, the Brooklyn Dodgers scored their fourth straight Grapefruit League victory today by trouncing the Detroit Tigers, 6 to 3.

While George Jeffcoat and Luke Hamlin were limiting the Tigers to five hits, the Brooklyns found Don French, Clyde Hatter and Pat McLaughlin easy to solve. After each club scored two runs in the first inning, the Dodgers took over the battihg fireworks, with Heinie Manush, making his National League debut this season, leading the attack with a triple and a single.

New Downtown Y Water Polo Team to Defend Junior Title In Meet Here Next Saturday

By Robert Morrison.

Hungarians are said to be simply wild about water polo. The reason for their rhapsody may be detected—maybe—by St. Louisans next Saturday, when several Midwestern teams will play for the Junior National Championship at Washington University's pool.

The game has become almost a national passion in Hungary, according to Ernie Vornbrock, coach of the Downtown Y. M. C. A. team, who is in charge of the coming A. A. U. meet.

If only Liszt could return and see the game that is stirring the hearts of his people! He might write 15 more Hungarian rhapsodies — he might.

It is a sort of rough, exciting game—if you can tell what's happening in a foaming pool full of men seemingly trying to drown each other and incidentally score a goal or two.

There may be about 10 teams, probably half from out of town, entered in this meet, Vornbrock said. Entries close Tuesday. Northwestern and Illinois University teams, Indianapolis' Hoosier A. C., Kansas City's Steuben A. C., and Chicago's Jewish People's Institute teams have indicated they may enter.

New Team to Play for Y.

The Downtown "Y," whose 1936 team won the junior national title last year and therefore is eligible for only the senior meet this year, will be represented by a different team.

On the team Vornbrock is training to succeed the present champions are three very good players, he said. Ed Schroeder, John Jennings and John Bruen all are strong and capable duckers.

This is the team which placed third in the junior outdoor meet at Louisville last summer. The other members of the squad are Wilbur Olsen, George Hemmer, James Phelps, Lado Dunajick, Jerry Dunajick, Joe Bocek, Douglas Phillips and George Middleton. In a game there are seven men on a side with substitutes usually limited to three by agreement.

St. Louis swimming clubs expected to enter the meet include the Y. M. H. A., South Side Y. M. C. A. and Washington University.

To help spectators keep track of who's who and what's what, Vornbrock said he plans to number all players' caps and set up a scoreboard for the title contests.

There are, of course, rules by which the game is played. But, the "Y" coach said, if there is an easy-going referee handling a match, the players are quick to take advantage of his near-sightedness.

Tackling Part of Game.

A player is not supposed to be "tackled" until he has the ball. And he should be released when he loses the ball.

"But they don't always do that," Vornbrock said. "You often see one player holding another under water when the ball and play is nowhere near them."

A very ducky game.

It once became so rough that they outlawed the soft water-polo ball and required a hard ball like the one they now use in the Olympics, in most college meets and in this coming A. A. U. event.

With the soft ball a player could grip it with one hand and do whatever seemed necessary with the other hand.

The preliminary rounds of the meet here will be held Saturday afternoon, beginning at 1:30, and the final will be played at night at 8.

BOYS AND GIRLS MUST GET PASSES EACH WEEK FOR CARDINAL GAMES

Boys belonging to the Cardinal Knothole Gang and girls of the Cardinal Girls' Club will be required to report to the agency which issues them their membership tickets once a week to receive passes for the Cardinals' games, it was announced yesterday.

Heretofore the boys' cards admitted them but it has been decided to give the agencies which issue the tickets control over the children throughout the summer, hence the new regulation.

Agencies include public grade and high schools; parochial grade and high schools; school playgrounds; city playgrounds; Protestant churches and Sunday schools; Y. M. C. A.; Y. W. C. A.; Y. M. H. A.; Y. W. H. A.; Boy Scouts; Girl Scouts; Jewish organizations and various other welfare organizations.

Boys and girls will be admitted to all Cardinal games except Sunday and holiday contests and any other games to which the Cardinal management may deem best to with-hold the privileges.

Boys and girls between the ages of 10 and 16 inclusive, are eligible for the Knothole Gang and the Girls' Club.

MACK ROBINSON SETS NEW JUNIOR COLLEGE BROAD JUMP RECORD

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., March 27. — Two National Junior College track and field records were bettered here today in a dual meet between Pasadena and San Mateo Junior Colleges.

Bill Wohle of San Mateo threw the shot 50 feet 6½ inches, bettering the mark of 48 feet, 2½ inches, made in 1932 by Gordon (Slinger) Bunn of Menlo Park, Cal., J. C.

Mack Robinson of Pasadena, Negro sprinter on the 1936 Olympic team, broad-jumped 25 feet ¾ of an inch. The official record of 24 feet 7½ inches was set in 1935 by Mushy Pollack of Riverside, Cal., J. C.

Pasadena won, 77½ to 53½. Robinson won three first places and one second.

STILLWATER, Okla., March 27. —Henry Iba, director of athletics at Oklahoma A. and M. College, announced tonight the Aggie wrestlers, new national intercollegiate champions, will not defend their national A. A. U. title at Baltimore, April 9 and 10. No reason was given.

SNOW PREVENTS SHAMROCK AND SPARTA BATTLE

Members of the Shamrock soccer team were inclined to rejoice over the postponement of today's scheduled match with Sparta Club at Chicago. With their scoring ace, Billy Gonsalves, a doubtful starter because of an injury, the Shamrocks were admittedly worried over the outcome at Chicago. Shortly before train time at noon yesterday, they were notified by Chicago officials that a five-inch blanket of snow and the probability of more bad weather made a postponement necessary. The match will be played next Sunday.

It is hoped that the week's rest will enable Gonsalves to shake off the effects of an injury to his groin. The prospects of victory depend to a large extent upon his condition, although Manager Alec McNab said yesterday that he was confident Eddie Kane would make a very capable replacement in the forward line. McNab had intended to start Kane at center, shifting Nilsen to inside right where he is quite at home. The surgeon treating Gonsalves informed club officials that the patient was showing good progress.

In the East, the New York Americans will engage in American League games while awaiting the outcome of the Western final. The Shamrocks, with a lead of 3-1 in goals as a result of their victoty here last Sunday, are expected to win the sectional title and meet the Eastern champions in a two-game series for the Dewar Cup. The national final dates now are April 11 and 18.

St. Louis has no professional soccer attraction today. With the field open, St. Louis Soccer League clubs booked no game, although they considered the advisability of bringing a club here from out of town. Prospects of bad weather stopped them.

Both Billy Gonsalves and Werner Nilsen have maintained an average of a goal-a-game in helping the Shamrocks win 21 straight games this season. Gonsalves has scored 23 goals, Nilsen 21, Jimmy Roe 15, Joe Strattman 6, Tom Erbe 5, Ray Egan 2 and Kane, Begley, Watson and Lehman 1 each. Larry Kickham, Tomich of Sparta and Benoist of Town Criers each tallied one in favor of the Shamrocks.

BLATTNER SEEDED THIRD FOR NATIONAL TABLE TENNIS MEET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Sol Schiff of New York, who led the American table tennis team to victory in Swaything Cup play in Europe last month, has been given the top-seeded position for the seventh annual national championship tournament at Newark, N. J., April 1-4.

Jimmy McClure of Indianapolis, follows Schiff in the list announced tonight by Reginald G. Hammond, chairman of the U. S. Table Tennis Association ranking committee. Bud Blattner of St. Louis, was seeded third, Abe Berenbaum of New York, fourth.

Ruth Hughes Aarons of New York, heads the women's list, and Lasslo Bellak of Hungary, tops the foreign stars.

St. Edwards will need to find its absent scoring punch this afternoon when it plays the Schumachers in the third round of the Municipal Soccer championship series, with the loser in today's game being eliminated from further competition. In a previous meeting between the teams, the Schumachers blanked St. Edwards, 2-0. The victor will meet the Stags for the title. The game will start at 3 o'clock at Fairground Park diamond No. 4, with a preliminary game between the Eighteenth Ward Democrats, Junior League champions, and an All-Star junior team starting at 1:45 o'clock.

Under the system in use this year, two defeats eliminate a team from competition. The Stags are the only undefeated team left, having won from the Andy Fredricks, 3-2, and the Schumachers, 2-0. The other teams have each won one and lost one game. The Schumachers defeated the St. Edwards club, 2-0, while St. Edwards beat the Fredricks, 3-2.

Lack of scoring ability has handicapped St. Edwards throughout the series, its forward line being excellent in obtaining scoring chances, but terrible in cashing in on them. The Schumachers also have failed to impress in their scoring ability, particularly in their game against the Stags, but they do have a fine defense.

If either St. Edwards or the Schumachers are to win the Muny title, they must win three games in a row, for after winning today's contest, they must win two games from the Stags to gain the title.

JACK SRENCO SEEDED IN NATIONAL TITLE HANDBALL TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Joe Platak, sturdy Chicago postoffice clerk, will go after his third straight singles title tomorrow when the National A. A. U. handball championships open at the Lake Shore Athletic Club.

Platak, in top physical condition, will be favored to successfully defend his crown against a fast field of 53 other singles entries, among them Sam Atcheson of Memphis, Tenn., and Angel Trulio of St. Louis, former titleholders and both semifinalists last year.

All of the players entered, who are listed on the official 1937 A. A. U. ranking list, will be seeded. Others to be placed on the select list will be announced tomorrow morning after an open draw. Platak, Atcheson, Trulio and Joe Powers of Los Angeles and Jack Srenco of St. Louis definitely will be seeded.

Twenty-nine doubles teams will go after the title held by Andy Berry and Joe Gordon of Los Angeles. Singles play will start Sunday afternoon and the doubles competition will open Monday. Finals will be held Saturday, April 3.

ST. XAVIER FIVE WINS PAROCHIAL TITLE BY DEFEATING ST. MARKS

St. Xavier School's basketball team won the championship of the Parochial League yesterday when it defeated St. Mark's in the third game of the title series, 18 to 14, at the C. B. C. gymnasium.

Leading scorer in the game was Boernemann of St. Xavier, with seven points. Metz and Cambron were other stars of the winning team, Metz especially so on defense. Cronin took high scoring honors for St. Mark's, with six points.

LEWIS' SUSPENSION IS LIFTED BY N. B. A.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 27.—Edward C. Foster, executive secretary of the National Boxing Association, today announced lifting of the suspension of John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight boxing champion. Lewis had been under the N. B. A. ban for allegedly failing to go through with a contract to box for a Washington promoter.

By Limerick Luke.

THE Browns have a pitcher named Trotter
Who showed he is not a sand lotter;
If he keeps up his pace
In the old pennant race
The Browns will get hotter and hotter.

Although it was mid-winter weather,
The Browns had their eye on the leather;
They put on a storm
A la mid-season form,
And the boys are all pulling together.

The promoters are all in a huddle
Regarding the championship muddle;
It has even been said
That Jim Braddock has fled
To fight Schmeling across the big puddle.

The fog doesn't seem to be lifting
With the scenery constantly shifting;
'Round in circles they go
In their quest for the dough,
With no idea whither they're drifting.

With a maximum ten-dollar charge
The park they would have to enlarge.
If they can't find a site
For this much deferred fight
Why not fight it out on a barge?

Safety First.

Just as we were about to comment on Joe Gould's remark to the effect that Chicago didn't want the fight because Mayor Kelly was not among those present at the signing of the articles of agreement, came the news that Kelly had telephoned from Miami that he was 100 per cent back of the bout. So probably it is safer not to say anything about it.

Keeping up with the Joneses is child's play compared with trying to keep abreast of those babies. When it comes to making lightning changes they make a plker out of the chameleon.

Still and all to think that the Mayor of Chicago should fail to lend his presence to so important an event as the signing of articles for a championship fight is almost as inconceivable as to consider the absence of John Hancock at the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

As a matter of fact, Joe Gould was so peeved over the Mayor's action, or lack of action, in the matter, that he considered taking the fight over to Berlin and letting Herr Hitler have a crack at it. Could anything be Feuhrer?

Joe says if Chicago doesn't want the fight there are plenty of places that do and he may even go around the world with it. He may be right. Where is there a better place for a world championship battle than the world?

An English race horse named "Come Back" ran a race at odds of 4 to 1 and lost later on the same day. "Come Back" lived up to his name and won at very long odds.

Which means that in the racing game
There must be something in a name.

After appointing a committee of three to pass on his eligibility to perform as a regular, Rogers Hornsby took the play right out of their hands by setting a pace that other candidates for infield positions were hard put to, to follow.

CINCINNATI PITCHER INJURED IN ACCIDENT

By the Associated Press.

TAMPA, Fla., March 27.—A training camp holiday brought the Cincinnati Reds their first 1937 casualty today.

Al Hollingsworth, star left-handed pitcher, suffered severe injuries to his right arm when his automobile was struck by another car. Rain had caused cancellation of the scheduled exhibition contest with the Philadelphia Nationals. Trainer R. J. Rohde reported that no bones were broken in Hollingsworth's arm and an X-ray examination confirmed his finding.

Yankees Trounce Bees.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 27.—The New York Yankees trounced the Boston Bees today, 5 to 3. The Yankees were held runless in the first three innings, but collected two runs each in the fourth and sixth innings, enough to win. They added another marker for good measure in the seventh. The Bees made two runs in the second, one in the sixth. Each team made eight hits.

38 ST. LOUIS U. FOOTBALL HOPES MAKE SQUAD, 31 AT WASHINGTON

By James M. Gould

After several weeks of spring practice, Coaches Jimmy Conzelman of Washington University and Cecil Muellerleile of St. Louis U. have pretty definitely decided upon the make-up of their varsity football squads for the season of 1937. Numerically, the Billikens will have the larger squad, as 38 candidates for the Blue and White appear to have successfully passed their spring "examinations," while at Washington it is expected that 31 players will constitute Conselman's varsity.

St. Louis U. has the greater number of veterans, 26 having played varsity football. At Washington only 16 have had real experience under varsity fire. Both schools have fine squads of upcoming freshmen, however, and both coaches are convinced that their 1937 teams will be stronger than those of a year ago.

Strangely enough, the chief problem for both coaches is to find a pair or pairs of competent endmen. At St. Louis, Co-Captain Dave Ruhl is the only one of real experience, though Gayer and Hagen have played on the varsity. At Washington, the two Siebert brothers are briefly experienced, while Paul Locke is the real veteran flanker. The Billikens are well-protected at the tackle spots with such veterans as Cagle, Diffley, Best and Padjen and Conzelman at Washington is not so well off with only Norman Tomlinson as an outstanding candidate for a job. Maginn, Cunningham and Jones will be prominent in the contention for other tackle jobs.

St. Louis U. has five experienced guards, while Bertagnolli and Meredith are first-string certainties at Washington.

At center, the Billikens have two lettermen in Hartman and Gorman; Washington has one in Charley Gould. Drabelle and Ed Chrisman will put up a battle for center assignments at St. Louis U., with Harmon, Hewitt and Harold Tracy, the latter a converted back, providing competition for Gould.

Both teams probably will have fine backfields. At Washington Minkey, Ferfecky, Bukant, Yore, O'Toole and Klein have seen plenty of varsity service and they will be "spelled" by such fine prospects as Warner, Shakofsky, Harvey, Pfeiffer and Umstadtt.

For the Billikens, the backfield veterans are Veith and Walker at quarter; McGonnigle, Nunn, Roemer, Totsch and Bill Cochrane at halves, and Herrmany, Harris and Sellinger at fullback. Denny Cochrane and Foehr at the halves, Burnes at quarter and Bridges at fullback, are leading younger candidates.

As things stand now, the squads for 1937 will be as follows:

WASHINGTON U.—Ends — Bill Siebert, Tom Hayes, Bob Hayes, Charley Siebert, Locke, McKelvey. Tackles—Tomlinson, Maginn, Cunningham, Jones, Merritt. Guards—Bertagnolli, Meredith, Harris, Brew, Corey. Centers—Gould, Harmon, Tracy, Hewitt. Quarterbacks — Yore, O'Toole and Umstadtt. Halves —Bukant, Minkey, Shakofsky, Harvey, Ferfecky. Fullbacks — Klein, Pfeiffer.

ST. LOUIS U.—Ends — Gayer, Brooks, Chapman, Ruhl, Dick Putnam, Hagen. Tackles—Cagle, Diffley, Mundt, Best, Padjen, Johnson, O'Sullivan. Guards—Yates, Genova, Clark, Vollmer, Shea, Oates, Tierney. Centers—Gorman, Hartman, Drabelle, Chrisman. Quarterbacks —Veith, Walker, Burnes. Halves—Nunn, D. Cochrane, Roemer, McGonnigle, Totsch, Bill Cochrane, Foehr. Fullbacks — Herrmany, Harris, Bridges, Sellinger.

This afternoon at 2:30, the Billikens will play their final intrasquad game of the spring season. Some 15 of the veterans will be excused from further practice this spring after the battle, while a few of the experienced players will leaven the freshmen in another week of play.

Following the Easter vacation, the Bears will resume practice tomorrow. The work will continue all week and will be climaxed by a "regular" game next Saturday which will bring the work period to a close.

Players Needed.

The Gebken baseball team of the Diamond Four League needs players for the coming season. Those interested are asked to communicate with Ray De Greeff, manager, 4128 Oregon, RIverside 2812.

TEN HORSES TO GO TO POST IN $10,000 LOUISIANA DERBY

JEWELL DORSETT AND DEAD CALM ARE FAVORED IN EARLY BETTING

Stake Race to Be Feature of Closing Card at New Orleans; Filly Has Yet to Win Classic.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 27. — A trim little filly named Jewell Dorsett and a Christmas gift horse, Dead Calm, drew the attention of form players in the $10,000 Louisiana Derby which ends a 113-day racing meet here tomorrow.

Despite the heavy downpour of the past two days the fast drying racing strip of the Fairgrounds track was expected to be fast or good when Johnny Morrissey sends them away from the starting stalls.

The field was cut until late today it appeared that 10 horses at the most would run the mile and an eighth for the Louisiana Jockey Club's richest purse.

Military and Pompoon were out of it and no standout horse was expected to go to the post. Chart players agreed it was a well balanced event. The comparatively small field was expected to eliminate bumping and fighting for position on the break and at the first turn.

Form followers expressed preference for Jewell Dorsett, the Lone Star Stable's three-year-old filly, and Mrs. C. Gregory's Dead Calm. Jewell Dorsett will have to beat precedent in addition to nine other horses as no filly has ever taken the Derby in its 16 runnings. Dead Calm, a Christmas present from Trainer Cecil Gregory to his wife, has shown vast improvement.

Others that are given a chance to finish in front are Sotuhland Beau, the Millsale Stable's Grey Count and another filly, Virginia J.

NARCOTIC CHARGES AGAINST RACE MAN, HELD AT SAN ANTONIO

By the Associated Press.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., March 27. —Joe Nelson, head starter three years at Alamo Downs race track here, was jailed on Federal charges today by Government agents who said they found a quantity of narcotics in the hotel room where he was arrested.

Nelson's arraignment before U. S. Commissioner Paul A. Lockhart was set for Monday. District Attorney W. R. Smith Jr. recommended $25,000 bond, as requested by New York Federal authorities.

Nelson was arrested on a warrant charging conspiracy to violate the narcotic laws, issued at New York. J. J. Biggins, district supervisor of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, said agents found a jar containing about five ounces of a drug, 50 grains of another narcotic, a half pound of a third type, and a pipe usable in smoking narcotics.

Biggins said the man admitted possession of the drugs.

The warrant for Nelson's arrest was issued on a complaint signed by Warren E. Stutzman, narcotics agent, who alleged that beginning August 1 the defendant and another man negotiated for purchase of narcotics to be delivered to various cities. The complaint named one George Corrigan, described as a "co-conspirator" but not a defendant, who said in an affidavit he was prepared to testify.

WASHINGTON-ST. LOUIS TENNIS MEET THURSDAY

The tennis meet scheduled for yesterday between Washington University and St. Louis University will be held next Thursday instead, a postponement having been agreed upon because some of the players involved were competing in the district indoor tournament, which was concluded last night at the W. U. Field House.

RUGBY ELEVEN IN CONTEST HERE TODAY

Rugby football, after the English manner, will be offered St. Louis sports followers at Forest Park drill grounds this afternoon when the Ramblers, leaders of the Missouri Rugby Union oppose the Central A. C. team. Play will start at 2:30.

A series of games between leading St. Louis and Chicago teams has been arranged, the first to be played at Chicago, April 11, the second here on April 18. A Mid-Western title match will be played May 16.

The Ramblers, victors over the Eighty-Niners, are favored over the Central in todays' game.

Crowder to Operate Club.

Alvin Crowder, former American League pitching star, will operate the Winston-Salem club in the Piedmont League this year.

BUNNY BABY, "EASTER SPECIAL," EQUALS TRACK MARK AT NEW ORLEANS

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 27.—After finishing second in her two other starts, E. K. Bryson's Bunny Baby took the measure of eight other two-year olds in the four furlongs of the Blue Bonnets Handicap at the Fair Grounds today.

The daughter of Transmute trailed the early pace, set by Conny Smythe's lightly regarded Stringalong, but moved up fast and at the finish w a half-length in front of F. P. Letellier's Fredalou, another long shot. Stringalong dropped back but held third money safe.

Despite her two previous seconds, Bunny Baby paid the good odds of $12.20 for $2. She equalled the track record of 46 4-5 seconds for the distance.

WAHOOS VS. WEBERS IN U. CITY SOCCER

The Zeltman soccer club, with half a game lead over the Wahoo Indians in their University City Soccer League race, oppose Stuart and Sons team in the second game of a doubleheader at Heman Park, on Olive street road, this afternoon. In the first game, starting at 2 p. m., the Wahoos meet the O. J. Webers. A victory for the Wahoos and a defeat for Zeltmans would give the Indians the lead in the second half-season race.

Tests prove that VINTAGE TOBACCO is at least 25% easier on your breath than all other 5¢ cigars tested

GIVE the ladies a break—switch to Vintage White Owls today. They're a man's smoke—yet they're perfect gentlemen where ladies are concerned.

New scientific discoveries have shown that White Owl's Vintage tobacco is exceptionally low in the substances that cause unpleasant tobacco breath. Tests with a delicate osmoscope prove that this tobacco leaves less odor.

White Owl is a better cigar because it always has a Vintage-tobacco filler. Nature—not factory processing—made this tobacco exceptionally mild, mellow and fragrant.

We maintain a vast crop-inspection system — the only known organization of its kind—to locate Vintage tobacco. Even in Vintage years, we classify all filler tobacco into seven grades—and buy only tobacco of the quality of the top three for use in White Owls.

We're pretty sure you'll like the taste of a Vintage White Owl . . . and the ladies will admire your taste for choosing it.

Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten different brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was at least 25% easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN

What may seem to be the end of the trail may be only the forks in the road. No man is through as long as opportunity is still being developed. Men are coming into this unusual business from every trade, profession and business and are making good. They find that character and consistent work still accomplish results which constantly increase. You will meet men in this office who are making BIG MONEY who once were in these lines: grocery clerk, opera singer, teacher, restaurant proprietor, salesman, shoe cutter, bank clerk, etc.

Our success which is world-wide, is based on supplying a definite need at an acceptable price. Our product is unique. 1937 is to date our biggest year; 1936 was our seventh consecutive record sales year.

You do not invest or buy anything in coming into this business. Nor are you bound down to seasons. It is important and imperative that you do a full day's work regularly and not incidentally. We prefer men 25 to 45, with family responsibilities. While men in this business make from $4,000 to $5,500 a year regularly, you probably will start on a more modest basis—perhaps from $100 to $125 or up to $175 your first month—slightly more your second month, and so on upward. You spent years learning your past occupation. Are you willing to spend twelve months as good or better that pays from the start? But don't come looking for a miracle. Come expecting something unusual, based on definite superiority.

If you are sincere and wish to start in on a new career on a basis based respect of success, call for personal interview. Apply at Suite 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th & Olive sts., Monday between 9:15 A. M. and 1:15 P. M. only.

WELL EDUCATED

Young men 35 to 35 years old with some sales experience wanted by 90-year-old manufacturing, wholesaling and retailing corporation to learn business and hold permanent good paying positions in the various departments of our business.

Men selected will enter free training with expenses paid, those qualified will be placed in salaried positions in our sales department with excellent opportunities in advance to managerial positions. Best character reference required. Write giving phone, age, details of experience; education; present occupation, if any; and salary. Box G-179, P.-D.

CAN YOU QUALIFY?

Are you between 35-45? Do you possess a good personality, aggressive and sales ability?

We want a man who has been successful in past employment whose present opportunity may now be limited, and who seeks a larger field with guaranteed future income.

This opportunity deserves your investigation. Only those giving full details will be called for interview. Box G-385, Post-Dispatch.

Americans Once Again Greatest Suckers for Phony Foreign Titles

Only a Dense Smudge Will Keep Off Clouds of Down-at-Heel Nobility From Abroad.

By Lucius Beebe

NEW YORK, March 27.

WHETHER it's a trend or just something like the termites, we don't pretend to know, but it's getting so there ought to be some new traffic regulations on foreign nobility in these parts. With the passing of the lean years the craze-e-e Americans have re-established themselves as the world's greatest suckers for titles, and the damaged merchandise that is being fobbed off on the supposedly canny New Yorkers is a caution.

Only a dense smudge will keep off the clouds of down-at-the heels barons, Sicilian dukes, pickpocket peeresses, monocled drink moochers and folk who have found fancy ways of spelling Ginsberg who swarm around the flossier bars and wax fat and sassy at the expense of dopes who think it smart to have a title in their entourage.

And the types with which Manhattan is crawling are more preposterous than Milt Gross's Count Screwloose, of Toulouse, or the dinner guests that Maggie Jiggs is always bringing home in the funnies. Runts and byblows and screwballs of assorted accents and authenticity bumming their way through saloon society on a basis of sheer patronizing insolence are making life so miserable for the reputably titled folk who are actually employed or have some legitimate errand in town that the real folk forego their badges of nobility wherever possible.

The foreign legion of fortune hunters even has organized a union, and if by achieving a miracle of bad manners or scoundrelly conduct some sol-disant casual of a collateral branch of a forgotten family of bankrupt Latvian debt-jumpers finds himself washed up in New York, he starts for Hollywood, where he can start all over again. Hollywood has as much discernment in such matters as the doorman at Tony's, and the nuts, the noblemen and the film actors all take each other, fairly enough, at their face values.

Half a dozen of Manhattan's worst cadgers and most patently fraudulent titles are at the moment being received as dukes and barons in Sunset Boulevard, to the ribald delight of the judicious, and there is a rumor the Santa Fe is inaugurating a Jim Crow car on The Chief for the accommodation of touring bogus nobility.

THERE IS SOMETHING pretty terrifying about the radio broadcast dinner party which the Henry Goddard Leaches gave last week and which they promise shall be a monthly feature of what is known with a simper as the private home life of the Leach family. With a table wired for sound and connected with a hook-to-hook coast-up, as a flustered announcer once dithered, Mr. and Mrs. Leach, Fannie Hurst, Ford Madox Ford, Sidney Lenz, Dorothy Thompson, Eugene Boissevain and some minor fry drank their soup into a microphone and discussed the question, "Is Bridge Destroying Good Conversation?"

Quite aside from the circumstance that the answer to the disputation would seem patently inherent in the title of the broadcast itself, the whole arrangement illustrates the frightening lengths to which folk will go to achieve any sort of promotion at all, even such ephemeral, momentary and dubious celebrity as that of a radio program.

It won't tax the imagination overmuch to foresee the time when Alexander Woollcott will broadcast a program of songs from his shower bath every morning or when microphones will be hung by the bedside reading lamps of popular celebrities, to catch whatever intimate sentiments they may voice while talking in their sleep.

One of the guests present at the Leach symposium was described as "president of the Gourmet Society," and indeed there may very well still be such an organization, although, if memory serves, its principal bid for fame was the occasion when somebody precipitated a near-riot at one of its diners by letting out a horse laugh during a reading of his own verses by Joseph Auslander.

If this ranking gourmet were actually present, he should have sternly interdicted the entire performance, as it is well established that true amateurs of fine food frown upon any conversation at all during meals. Such critical exclamations as "Excellent Gorgonzola" or "Thanks, just one more glass of Le Lafite," could scarcely justify a broadcast, and all else was illusion.

THE FANCIEST festival in prospect these weeks is the American Ballet's benefit Stravinsky performance at the Metropolitan April 27. . . . Stravinsky himself will conduct; one ballet, "The Card Party," will have its world premiere, and all the ballet nuts will be out in lavender plug hats and cerise hairwashes. . . . Quelle entr'chats! . . . Armando's little chalet of mirth in Fifty-fifth street has taken a leaf from John Perona's book and is getting out a weekly news letter listing patrons and their didos.

Nancy Randolph is up from Palm Beach and in circulation again at the more upholstered parties. . . . Nearly all the major broadcasting companies plan to review the Easter Parade on Park avenue with crowd stories, fashion experts and all the trimmings of a prizefight. . . . Hapsburg House is specializing in champagne sours, an elegant arrangement invented by the Emperor Franz Josef at the Zum Roten Igel in old Vienna.

THE VANDERBILT HOTEL is planning a dinner in honor of George Rector, sponsored by such notables as Jack Dempsey, O. O. McIntyre, Brock Pemberton and Charles Hanson Towne . . . A popular priced men's shop is featuring ready-made dress evening topcoats, lined in white and crimson satin, and says there's a real revival of them. . . . It's not a fancy, whimsical establishment, either, but notoriously hard-headed.

Myra Kingsley and Howard Taylor's Sunday evening supper symphonies at the Plaza are going over with a bang. . . . Report has it that Jack Kriendler, who has gone ranch-crazy out in Palm Springs, is going to institute a dude ranch bar upstairs at "21," with admission by costume only. . . . He himself has fallen in a big way for leather pants, ten-gallon hats and shirts fit to frighten the McCrory Brothers, the demon shirtmakers of Forty-sixth street.

QUICK COMEBACK

NEW YORK, March 27.

NOBODY CAN SAY Gloria Swanson isn't quick on the trigger. One day last week she was having luncheon at the door table at the Colony and g wearing a Miss Jessica hat, from the top of which protruded a little bunch of three deep red carnations, real ones. Elsa Maxwell, interested, paused as she passed to inquire how she kept them so fresh. "Just with a little water on the brain," explained Miss Swanson.

—o-o—

THE Helen Hokinson Influence: Gloria Graggitti swears to it that on the Mall in Central Park the other afternoon she overheard a garden-club type matron, apparently right out of the pages of "The New Yorker," retrieve a woolly muff of a dog from a too ecstatic romp, crying: "Moonbeam! Moonbeam! No madness now!"

Evening Wrap Fabrics

The choice of a fabric has much to do with the success of a spring evening wrap. If you prefer a short wrap that is quite youthful, the stiff satin cape is a fashion leader. The brilliant shade of "parlor pink" which has become popular recently, is featured in a striking model that is quilted in an allover design.

Many of the full-length evening wraps continue to be made of brocaded materials. A striking one combining a violet tone with silver will make the wearer look like a medieval queen. The blouse section is cut separately from the skirt part and both have fullness concentrated at the back, with shirring at the waistline. Sleeves are of the leg-o'-mutton type and a collar stands high at the back.

A NEW SCREEN HERO

FERNAND GRAVET, AN ENTHUSIASTIC HORSEMAN.

THREE POSES OF GRAVET.

THE NEW STAR SIGNING A FILM CONTRACT, WITH PRODUCER MERVYN LeROY LOOKING ON.

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, March 27.

FERNAND GRAVET will hear of the success of his first American film, "The King and the Chorus Girl" at his home in Paris, for he didn't wait to see the pre-view after Mervyn LeRoy had completed the picture. He packed up and left for Europe the minute the last "retake" had been shot. But he is coming back shortly to make another picture for LeRoy. He likes the American films, likes what American studios hand out in the way of cold cash, and will, we dare say, not be displeased with what American fans have to say about him when they see his first offering.

It is our prediction that the fans —particularly the women—will like Gravet. And, incidentally, you can pronounce that Gravay to be correct. He is a personable young fellow of 29 who resembles the Duke of Windsor not a little. His first picture, by an odd coincidence, deals with the love of an ex-King for an American commoner. True the American is a chorus girl, not a former Baltimore belle, and the ex-King has an inordinate fondness for brandy. But otherwise the screen story parallels what happened in England last winter.

Mervyn LeRoy will swear on the Hays book of rules that "The King and the Chorus Girl" is not the story of David and Wally. He says that Norman Krasna and Groucho Marx wrote the screen play back in 1935 and that he bought it early in 1936 before the world became Simpson conscious. And he points out that this isn't the first picture ever made dealing with a King and a commoner. He has us there.

To get back to Mr. Gravet. That, as you may imagine, knowing Hollywood's penchant for changing names, is not what he was christened. His real name is Fernand Mertens. His mother's maiden name was Graavay and when he became an actor he tacked that on the end of the Mertens. LeRoy, who snared Gravet on his last trip to Europe, changed the spelling, figuring that some crude Americans might call his new star "Gravy." The director-producer is particularly touchy on that point and those rude persons who have been foolish enough to refer to the star as "Gravy" in LeRoy's presence, have lived to regret it.

Gravet is not a Frenchman, in the true sense of the word. He was born in Brussels, thought he loves France and started his film career there. He speaks with an English, almost a cockney accent, picked up in British schools and in the British merchant marine. He served two years in the Belgian cavalry and air service. He also collects toy soldiers and makes little hats. That has nothing to do with his nationality but it piques our interest so we mention it early.

His father was Leopold G. Mertens and his mother was Fernande Graavay. Mr. Mertens ran a theatrical company, the Galleries Saint Hubert and Mrs. Mertens was a famous character actress.

Fernand was taken to England and educated at St. Paul's school at Hammersmith. This was his father's alma mater and it was sentimentality and love for the old school that prompted Mr. Mertens to have his boy educated by the British.

He was too young to have a shot at the war. At that time he was running around in knee pants and Eton collars—if they wear Eton collars at Hammersmith. In 1917, though, he was chosen as a British Marine Cadet to study the sea on practical cruises on British merchant ships in preparation for war defense. He stayed at Westershire until 1919 and then went back to Brussels to help his father with the theater.

ABOUT this time, Mrs. Mertens decided to take her stock company on tour, so he went along. They toured through all the European countries and Fernand got a look at such places as Greece, Rumania and Turkey. Then they moved south into Egypt and jumped across the Atlantic to South America. Fernand didn't do much acting on this junket. He served as baggage master and transportation man and occasionally played bits. How a lad of 11 or 12 took care of a whole theatrical troupe's baggage is a little beyond us, but his biographers assure us that Fernand was born in 1908 and we'll have to take their word for it.

Well, the Mertens finally came back and young Gravet made his real stage debut. By a coincidence, he made his debut in "Romance" at the Theater Athene in Paris. His father began his stage career in the same play with Doris Keane, the American star.

As a juvenile—he had to be one in 1922—he did pretty well. But the Belgian Government, which has a habit of making its young men serve in the army, interrupted his career in 1924 by calling him to the colors. For a year he was in the cavalry. Then he became a first sergeant in the balloon corps, acting as an observer for artillery maneuvers. Having served the required two years, he returned to Paris to pick up the threads of his life and his career. He did right well picking them up, too and shortly he was married to Jane Renourdt, the golden-haired Parisian stage star. Undoubtedly the marriage was a love match, for they are still happily married. That romance even survived three years together on the stage, which is something.

We cannot set down the names of the plays in which Gravet appeared because his biographers have neglected to name them. So we will jump to the screen phase of his life.

—o-o—

IN Hollywood, right now, there is a tall Frenchman named Robert Florey. He was brought over here by Warner Bros., but has since moved to Paramount. It was Florey who directed Gravet's first picture for the UFA studios in Berlin. Gravet was not only an actor at U F A. He learned the film business thoroughly—was an assistant cameraman with Otto Kanterak and then a film cutter. They call them film editors over here.

He wanted to learn what happened to an actor's performance, after he appeared before the camera, and felt a few months study of photographic lighting, camera work and film editing would better fit him for assignments to come.

But Paris was in his blood so he signed with French-Paramount and made four pictures at the Joinville studios. One was a French version of "Honey" called "Cherie." Another "Marions Nous" was French for "Her Wedding Night." "L'Homme en Habit" was French for "Man in Evening Clothes" and "Coiffure Pur Dames" was the French version of "Ladies Hairdresser." This latter dealt with the life of Antoine, famous Parisian hairdresser.

In 1931 he went back to Berlin to star in English and French versions of "The Widow's Bed." Then he jumped to Paris and freelanced around in such epics as "Passionately," "Improvised Son" and "Unfortunate Father," (the French do go in for tricky titles), and "I Want to Be a Duchess." We do not believe that it was Mr. Gravet who wanted to be a duchess. In 1932 he was back in Berlin starring in a musical "The War of the Waltz," under the direction of Ludwig Berger. That picture was a great success. "Bittersweet," which followed, and which was made in London, wasn't so good and Gravet seldom talks about it. He prefers to forget it. Paris beckoned again and he returned to make a flock of other films, including a French version of "Variety."

According to his press agents Gravet actually had to work on a trapeze 60 feet above the ground and had to learn the acrobatic art before he made "Variety." On his first try, they tell us, he was knocked on the head by a flying trapeze and hurled into the net—without, thank goodness, any ill effects to either Gravet or the net.

We could go on naming French pictures for hours and we wouldn't mind, because the titles intrigue us. But after all, what interests us about Gravet is not his past but his present. So we will skip to that momentous occasion when LeRoy appeared on French soil and bagged a new star.

All motion picture executives who go to Europe like to bring something back with them. Darryl Zanuck usually comes home

by Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

YOU have helped others. I know you can help me. I travel out of the city and come in for week-ends. I make a good salary and my wife has everything; we have a lovely home, but she broke this up to be with her mother. We have a darling baby boy four months old.

My wife is a Catholic and I am a Lutheran. She had the baby christened in the Catholic Church when I was away. She asked all her family, but left out my mother and father. Her mother and father are causing lots of trouble and I asked her to go to housekeeping again, but she would not do it. We are the same age, 24 years old. What steps do you think I should take? I think the world of my wife and baby. I am very downhearted. Yours truly.

BILL S.

Perhaps your wife is just a little lonesome while you are gone and thinks she must have companionship every minute of the day. There are those who have this mistaken idea; not realizing that having time for thought and developing initiative, while living alone and dependent upon their own decisions, makes them better prepared for life.

After furnishing your own place and getting all the doodads she wanted she, perhaps, could not think of anything else to do (even though the baby should have kept her planning and working).

If she is of this disposition, the insistence and interference of her mother was all that was needed to upset your home. But when, in your absence, she had the baby (her baby, but your baby, too) christened she was inconsiderate. It was also rude of her not to include your family at this rite; but she may have thought they would disapprove and would be embarrassed about declining. You should not worry too much over this. Religious differences can be adjusted only through tolerance and affection. It is better to have one church in the family circle; but to bicker and fight over the differences makes baptism seem far from a Christian rite.

When your child is older, you or your minister can talk to him, explaining the differences and he can choose for himself—each individual must be responsible for his own soul.

Say that you are unhappy; that since you can provide for her and want your own home, she should be willing to make it for you and the baby. Ask her where she would like to live and insist that she do this or you must take separate paths, and her income will stop.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM A CAT LOVER and a cat owner and I feel called upon to defend these "pests" as a recent writer in the Post-Dispatch calls them, but which we more kindly-inclined people call "pets."

Whether this woman writes from fanatical perverseness or from ignorance, I can only guess; but from the perfectly neurotic intenseness of her hatred for these dumb creatures, she is blind to any good in them.

I have had cats about me all my life—good cats, bad cats, indifferent cats and those of pure breed and the "alley type." For years I have worked with an animal society; evidently she wouldn't have one near enough to know whether horse hair or scales cover its poor hated back. So writing about them in this way, is something like insulting a blind man because he cannot defend himself.

I feel that you are a cat-lover, Mrs. Carr, and I must say that in all my life I have met but three people who hated cats. A number prefer dogs, but do not speak abusively of cats. This woman says: "Being cats, they are sneaky, treacherous, etc., etc."

I say they are not. Some cats possess the traits she credits all cats with—so do some men. Is this reason to say of the men "being men, they are sneaky, etc., etc.?" She classes them as "furry, night-prowling parasites of venemous character." This is but the repulsive statement of a hate-crazed brain.

That cats kill birds is an argument which cannot be denied. They do! But so do little boys whose fond parents give them guns.

This writer warns against the "treacherous purr." A cat's purr is his song. He is happy. He is content. He is affectionate and appreciates your interest in him. Stroke a cat on the street—he rubs against you, he purrs; he is returning your caress. Why then is the purr "treacherous?"

N. E. H.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM A BOY 12 YEARS OLD and my sister is 10. My stepfather has been wanting to adopt me for some time; but he doesn't know where to go or how to go about it. If you or some of your readers can tell us what to do we will be much obliged. Thanking you in advance,

JUNIOR.

Your father should go to the Juvenile Court, where he will get all information and instructions necessary about the procedure.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

THE WOMAN WHO OFFERED the coat and shoes, so much needed by Mrs. W. in South Carolina, has sent them on and the old lady is so grateful. The donor was so gracious about it and said it gave her so much pleasure. Isn't it glorious to be the means through which so much real good is done. Your kindness in publishing my letter was a means by which that poor mountain woman, so desperately poor, obtained what she needed so much. She has written to "Mrs. K. P." thanking her.

All good wishes,

M. V.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I saw the request in your column asking what was used in celebrating the thirteenth wedding anniversary and your reply, that you had none listed. Will you please publish the list I have here:

First year, paper; second, cotton; third, leather; fourth, fruit and flowers; fifth, wooden; sixth, sugar; seventh, woolen; eighth, India rubber; ninth, willow; tenth, tin; eleventh, steel; twelfth, silk and fine linen; thirteenth, lace; fourteenth, ivory; fifteenth, crystal, twentieth, china; twenty-fifth, silver; thirtieth, pearl; thirty-fifth, coral; fortieth, ruby; forty-fifth, sapphire; fiftieth, gold; fifty-fifth, emerald; sixtieth, diamond; seventy-fifth, diamond.

H. I. B.

Although the list above, differing slightly from that published in the World Almanac, is the one generally accepted today; in England, half a century ago, the first was iron; thirtieth, cotton; thirty-fifth, linen; fortieth, woolen; forty-fifth, silk and the sixtieth, seventieth were, as well as the seventh-fifth, diamond.

"HERE COME THOSE HORRID PHOTOGRAPHERS—ER, DO I LOOK ALL RIGHT?"

A GIRL ABOUT TOWN By Dorothy Coleman

SIR JAMES BARRIE'S old lady who showed her medals has nothing on a St. Louis dowager of our acquaintance who goes in for patriotic societies in a big way, has been a state officer of one, and all that sort of thing. She's probably the ranking medalist of the town (though she won't say so), with a boxful of insignia and a handful of lineage charts back to 1096.

We got her to bring all the paraphernalia over the other day and spent an illuminating two hours straightening it out in our mind. Well, the 1096 date has something to do with the first crusade to the Holy Land to rescue it from the Saracens. Our friend knows, to a man, to which of these volunteers she's related—it's more than one, too. She thus has qualified as a member of the Order of the First Crusade. For that she has a small gold medal suspended on a vertically-striped black and white ribbon.

Then we come along with her up to 1215. Remember that date? Some English barons got old King John out in a field called Runnymede and made him sign the Magna Carta in 1215. There were 21 barons in all, she says, only 19 of whom were, or later became, fathers. But that was enough to start the ball rolling. Now there's a national society called "The Daughters of the Barons of Runnymede." Our friend belongs. On that insignia you are privileged to attach gold bars announcing that the forebear "you went in on" was a Knight of the Garter, or a Knight of the Bath, if he was a Knight of the Garter or a Knight of the Bath. Our friend could wear both, but doesn't.

THERE IS one other society to which she belongs which takes you back to the old country. It's the Order of the Crown. You gain admittance to that by proving that somewhere on a main branch of your family tree was a member of the British nobility. (But you have to be a member of the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America first!) The Order of the Crown is represented in her collection by a handsome blue and white enamel badge with a ribbon bow tie at the top. This is the only insignia that it's cricket to wear on a black velvet ribbon around your neck, or in the center on the corsage. All the others must be worn from the left shoulder.

The women usually pin them on a long black ribbon and just suspend that from the shoulder seam. It keeps your dresses from getting stuck full of pin holes. The distance down the left side which the ribbon extends is a pretty fair gauge of the excellence of one's lineage and the fervor of one's genealogical research. It lengthens every time you can dig up another qualifying ancestor.

A ringleader in the town's patriotic circles has 150 gold bars—one bar per ancestor—on one of her insignia. (In some societies these ancestral bars cost as much as $2.50 each.) They just about drip off the hem of her skirt. If you are a state or national officer in any of these clubs you're privileged to sport a broad ribbon, in the club's colors (reversed if you're an "ex"), katty-corner-wise across your front. The final effect is pretty dazzling, although the present tendency to substitute miniatures for the full-sized regalia is dimming it a little.

We asked if English royalty was aware that some of the daughters in this new country were laying claim to noble blood. "Well, the societies didn't get much notice abroad," we were told, "until they began to send over money for the restoration of historic landmarks."

OF COURSE, not everyone can check up on his forebears on the other side of the water. There are a good many more who can qualify for the National Society of the Daughters of the American Colonists, one of the niftier groups, according to our informer. Membership in this is tantamount to a pedigree that your ancestors came to America pretty early, anywhere from 1607 to 1776.

Our friend, who can be a little more specific about the matter, has also joined the First Families of Virginia Society, after establishing the fact that one of her forebears was an original Jamestown settler in 1607. That beats to a standstill those whose ancestors crossed in the Mayflower. Everyone knows it didn't reach Plymouth Rock until 1620.

Right along here in the historical calendar the societies begin to overlap, our pleasant informer admitted. In addition to the National Society of the Daughters of the American Colonists, there are the Colonial Daughters of the Seventeenth Century, the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America, and then a competitive society, called simply the Colonial Dames of America. The Colonial Dames of America filed a lawsuit not so many years ago to enjoin the National Society of Colonial Dames of America from using the title Colonial

"THEY SAY THE BABY LOOKS JUST LIKE ME! SO HOW DOES HE LOOK IN THIS BUGGY?"

The Value of Looking Unto Eternal Hills

Shining Heights of Faith, Purity and Honesty Rise Above Life.

By Elsie Robinson

LIGHTS blazed through the palace. Jewels glittered. Fountains splashed their iridescent spray. Across the splendid courtyard thronged soldiers in shining armor, courtiers in trailing velvet, slaves whose naked flesh was gleaming bronze. In the scented harem the women danced, and beyond the palace steps proud Israel swept by, insolent in her riches.

But King David sat alone, apart in a small upper room, sick at heart. What was it worth, all this pomp and play-acting? What did it mean to a discouraged soul?

It meant nothing. Whether one lived in a palace or in a mud hut, life at times became a desert—a gray desolation like that which he could glimpse beyond the city wall. Flat days, flat nights, and man, a weak, futile creature, plodding across the hopeless waste of ignorance and fear.

Weary, the old king looked across the waste of land, the waste of years.

—o—o—

SUDDENLY, on the far rim of the desert something burned for an instant like a torch. A ray of the setting sun touching one high peak—that was all. But, at that spark joy flared in David's heart.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help!"

(For there are hills! Life is not only desert, desolate, and sad sands of weariness, seared sands of sin. Above the sands there rise the shining heights of faith, purity, honesty, courage, love. These, too, are part of human life, and I will lift mine eyes to those free eternal heights when my weak feet seem sinking in the sand.)

"My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth!"

—o—o—

(I'M NOT FORSAKEN! I am not alone! The God who made me from the faulty dust placed in that dust a spark of His own flame. And so, though I am dirt, I, too, am God! He cannot fail me who am part of Him.)

"He will not suffer they foot to be moved."

(I slip, I fall; and yet I'm fixed as firmly in God's plan as any wheeling star. Each slip, each fall is but a part of life. The stars go wheeling around their central sun. My life revolves around the heart of God.)

"He that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper."

(I sleep, I falter; crumble like the earth from which I am made. But always, deep within me, something holds; some pride and purpose greater than my acts. The God within me does not slip nor sleep.)

"The Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day; nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil. He shall preserve thy soul."

—o—o—

(OFTEN I WONDER if it's all worth while—this muddled thing I call my human life. Why was I made, and whither do I go? What does it matter, this brief, yearning dream that seems to end so surely at the grave? Sometimes I ask these questions of myself, but find no answer in my narrow brain. Then, from the silence, the old answer comes. "Look all around you. See what God has made. Ten million years to shape one little flower. How many more to shape one human soul? Will God, who toiled for ages on one flower, let all His work be wasted on a soul? Be still and trust Him. He has brought you far. The God who made you will not fail you now.")

"The Lord shall preserve they going out and they coming in, from this time forth, and even forevermore."

(A going and a coming—that is life. What'er befalls me, whether shame or grief, I shall go on through endless happenings, learning and living, with His hand on mine.)

In the courtyards the bugles called. In the harems the women danced. Huzzahs echoed as King David left his room and walked by kneeling multitudes.

But now his eyes were neither eager, nor angry, nor afraid. He was at peace. It did not matter. None of these outer things mattered. Splendor could not bind him now. Desolation could not crush him.

He had lifted his eyes above all that, up to the high places—up to God.

Frock-Like Coat

The coat which buttons straight down the front, has very little collar and uses a brilliant scarf to decorate the neckline looks sufficiently like a frock that it could serve in that capacity. Sheer woolens also contribute to its resemblance to a shirtwaist frock, as do the addition of patch pockets. Many of these coats have four pockets, two on the blouse section and two on the skirt. A wide belt of leather or fabric adds to the dress illusion.

MOVING INTO AN Apartment

By Marjorie Hillis

I HAVE a friend who has decided that this spring she will move out of her fairly large house into a much smaller apartment, and who is behaving much as everybody else does in similar circumstances. The move is a purely voluntary one—she wants less responsibility, she says, and less to take care of. For months she has been talking about how much she looks forward to clearing out the clutter and accumulation of years which fills her house.

But now that the leases are signed and the need of picking and choosing what to clear out is not far away, practically everything she has has taken on a new and fancy value. And never before have her possessions seemed to her so charming.

She has, actually, some very nice furniture, but—as with most of us, not everything is a museum piece or even an irreplacable family heirloom. Some bits—to be honest, though rude—are out of date if not slightly ugly. She has too many pictures for even a large house and half of what she has would look better for new and modern framing.

Even if none of this were true, it makes very little sense to try to move the contents of a four-story house into a six-room apartment. The desire may be only human, but it accounts for a lot of clutter, dowdiness and unnecessary work for the housewife.

Our heartless advice to our friend, and anyone else who is contemplating a similar move come the first of May, is to furnish your new apartment mentally, with as much charm as your imagination can plan. This done, write down coldly and dispassionately two lists—one with all the things you used, the other with all those you didn't use. The next step is not to begin figuring out ways by which you might squeeze a few objects from the second listing. Instead, sell or give away (it usually amounts to the same thing, at this stage of the proceeding) as much as you can without actual pain, and when the parting becomes too poignant, park the rest in some relative's garage or attic.

THE other day I read an article in a current magazine, all about things of the moment that the author didn't or did like, the lists called "Thumbs Up" and "Thumbs Down," respectively. I agreed with scarcely any of them and sat right down to write my own list of a few things I'd gotten a kick out of lately—and here it is.

1—The setting for "Family Album," one of the Noel Coward plays, in which a Regency room is done in grays, black and white, and has color, spaciousness, and dignity, and the four women, in deep mourning, wear billowy dresses that give the scene the sharpness of an old silhouette—and a breath-taking loveliness.

2—New York at night, as one comes East from the theater district, when traffic is sparse and the streets are deep canyons—Fifth avenue, as elegant as a deserted drawing-room; the side streets quiet except where hotels and restaurants spill out well-dressed young people, perhaps the most attractive in the world; the elevated, a bar sinister reminding you of the other side of the city's life; and above your head, a skyline so dramatic that it can stir you 365 nights in the year.

3—"El Indio," the prize-winning Mexican novel by Gregorio Lopez y Fuentes, translated by Anita Brenner, written with a moving simplicity not unlike that of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," and painting an unforgettable picture of the Mexican Indian, childlike and dignified, tragic and bitterly oppressed.

4—The scene on the porch of the social hall at Kamp Kare-free, in "Having Wonderful Time," in which the Jewish boy and girl get acquainted by discussing Life with all the triteness of extreme youth of any race, and succeed in being both very funny and very pathetic.

Spring Is Off To Good Start In New York

Annual Flower Show at Grand Central Palace Marks New Season.

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, March 27.

WHATEVER the state of the weather, Spring always gets off to a spanking start among our limestone canyons, where a blade of grass hasn't been seen since 1894. The minute the vernal equinox checks in, so does our annual flower show at Grand Central Palace on Lexington avenue—and nature-hungry citizens wander gapingly among four and a half (count 'em) acres of gorgeous blooms. You can smell—but mustn't touch!

This is one local shennanigan where the hired help runs things. The rich folks step into the background, only emerging to clutch their blue ribbons, while their gardeners take full charge of judging the posies and the entire gardens laid out indoors. The fabulously wealthy Mrs. Payne Whitney has a formal garden in the show this year, designed and tended lovingly by Henning Michelsen, her devoted weeder. It features huge tulips, with a background of flowering dogwood and young birches. G. H. Gillies, who toils in the soil for the present Mrs. Marshall Field, has concentrated on a bed of tea-roses, ringed with yellow and pink azaleas.

These lads, and a dozen other big-shot gardeners, form the jury which passes out the prizes. The show fills no less than four big floors of the Palace with color and nice whiffs. Of course, there are the usual new varieties of roses on view. I like particularly a big "Queen Mary"—a pinkish beauty. But the thing that gives me the greatest kick in our posy exhibit is the fact that the boys who know their blooms and do the heavy work are the ones who pass on the flowers. This flower show is serious business—not for dilettantes!

WELL, FIFTH and Madison avenues are the customary shambles today, with the wild-eyed girls skittering from shop to shop lining up the last ducky touches for their perfect ensembles. And may the good old sun shine down on those new suits! . . . What do you want in the way of flowers? Are you a gardenia girl, or are you satisfied with nothing less than a cluster of decadent-looking orchids? I'm all for camellias, myself, though I don't presume to compete with Garbo. Prices here have been nicely boosted, and by tonight the florists will be yelling for more stock.

I JUST FINISHED James Hilton's new little thin novel, "We Are Not Alone," and found it quite in the sentimental tradition of his famous "Mr. Chips." The lad has lost caste with book critics lately, on the charge of too much goo. Rather surprised at his getting a Mexican divorce. Did Hollywood score another bust-up? Fatal spot!

—o—o—

OUR DOCTORS keep fighting the too-high maternity deathrate in this town, and today report they have knocked 10 per cent off the tragic total. Good work, boys! . . . Our big-league milliner, peppery Lily Dache, is going to open a four-floor salon in an old brownstone front next summer, and she tells me a cute stunt for her corner-stone laying. Into the tin box she will put a copy of what she remembers as the first hat she ever designed, and what she considers the best topper she's made in 1937! That'll be a novel cornerstone!

—o—o—

LOCAL WOMEN are anxiously awaiting the coming film, "Vogues of 1938!" which will deal with feminine frippery in a big way never yet seen in pictures. Lillian Fisher, former Harper's Bazaar editor in Paris, has charge of the clothes angle, and it was for this film that 30 of our loveliest mannequins, headed by the famed Betty Wyman, were recently shipped West. Should be hot!

—o—o—

ONWARD and upward with the Sex: For the first time in 43 years, Washington Square College of our New York University has picked a girl as chairman of the senior ball. She's a fetching 19-year-old named Rheta Benjamin, and is a shark at basketball and field hockey as well as hops. Ah there, Rheta! . . . Well, our 1939 world's fair looks like a sure-shot success now. The republic of Guatamala was the first nation to crash in with an acceptance of the bid to take part. Finland and France were hot on her heels!

I LIKE TO TALK to movie makeup men and women, who make Glamor Girls out of mere pretties. Dot Ponedel, who works on Dietrich and Lombard, gave me some good rules the other day: Apply your face under the same kind of light you expect to be under during your "date." Pluck your eyebrows under, not above the brow. And don't smear on lipstick too thickly for "sheen." Mix in a bit of vaseline instead!

MY OPINION

by Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

YOU have helped others. I know you can help me. I travel out of the city and come in for week-ends. I make a good salary and my wife has everything; we have a lovely home, but she broke this up to be with her mother. We have a darling baby boy four months old.

My wife is a Catholic and I am a Lutheran. She had the baby christened in the Catholic Church when I was away. She asked all her family, but left out my mother and father. Her mother and father are causing lots of trouble and I asked her to go to housekeeping again, but she would not do it. We are the same age, 24 years old. What steps do you think I should take? I think the world of my wife and baby. I am very downhearted. Yours truly. BILL S.

Perhaps your wife is just a little lonesome while you are gone and thinks she must have companionship every minute of the day. There are those who have this mistaken idea; not realizing that having time for thought and developing initiative, while living alone and dependent upon their own decisions, makes them better prepared for life.

After furnishing your own place and getting all the doodads she wanted she, perhaps, could not think of anything else to do (even though the baby should have kept her planning and working).

If she is of this disposition, the insistence and interference of her mother was all that was needed to upset your home. But when, in your absence, she had the baby (her baby, but your baby, too) christened she was inconsiderate. It was also rude of her not to include your family at this rite; but she may have thought they would disapprove and would be embarrassed about declining. You should not worry too much over this. Religious differences can be adjusted only through tolerance and affection. It is better to have one church in the family circle; but to bicker and fight over the differences makes baptism seem far from a Christian rite.

When your child is older, you or your minister can talk to him, explaining the differences and he can choose for himself—each individual must be responsible for his own soul.

Say that you are unhappy; that since you can provide for her and want your own home, she should be willing to make it for you and the baby. Ask her where she would like to live and insist that she do this or you must take separate paths, and her income will stop.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM A CAT LOVER and a cat owner and I feel called upon to defend these "pests" as a recent writer in the Post-Dispatch calls them, but which we more kindly-inclined people call "pets."

Whether this woman writes from fanatical perverseness or from ignorance, I can only guess; but from the perfectly neurotic intenseness of her hatred for these dumb creatures, she is blind to any good in them.

I have had cats about me all my life—good cats, bad cats, indifferent cats and those of pure breed and the "alley type." For years I have worked with an animal society; evidently she wouldn't have one near enough to know whether horse hair or scales cover its poor hated back. So writing about them in this way, is something like insulting a blind man because he cannot defend himself.

I feel that you are a cat-lover, Mrs. Carr, and I must say that in all my life I have met but three people who hated cats. A number prefer dogs, but do not speak abusively of cats. This woman says: "Being cats, they are sneaky, treacherous, etc., etc."

I say they are not. Some cats possess the traits she credits all cats with—so do some men. Is this reason to say of the men "being men, they are sneaky, etc., etc.?" She classes them as "furry, night-prowling parasites of venemous character." This is but the repulsive statement of a hate-crazed brain.

That cats kill birds is an argument which cannot be denied. They do! But so do little boys whose fond parents give them guns.

This writer warns against the "treacherous purr." A cat's purr is his song. He is happy. He is content. He is affectionate and appreciates your interest in him. Stroke a cat on the street—he rubs against you, he purrs; he is returning your caress. Why then is the purr "treacherous?" N. E. H.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● I AM A BOY 12 YEARS OLD and my sister is 10. My stepfather has been wanting to adopt me for some time; but he doesn't know where to go or how to go about it. If you or some of your readers can tell us what to do we will be much obliged. Thanking you in advance, JUNIOR.

Your father should go to the Juvenile Court, where he will get all information and instructions necessary about the procedure.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I saw the request in your column asking what was used in celebrating the thirteenth wedding anniversary and your reply, that you had none listed. Will you please publish the list I have here:

First year, paper; second, cotton; third, leather; fourth, fruit and flowers; fifth, wooden; sixth, sugar; seventh, woolen; eighth, India rubber; ninth, willow; tenth, tin; eleventh, steel; twelfth, silk and fine linen; thirteenth, lace; fourteenth, ivory; fifteenth, crystal, twentieth, china; twenty-fifth, silver; thirtieth, pearl; thirty-fifth, coral; fortieth, ruby; forty-fifth, sapphire; fiftieth, gold; fifty-fifth, emerald; sixtieth, diamond; seventy-fifth, diamond. H. I. B.

Although the list above, differing slightly from that published in the World Almanac, is the one generally accepted today; in England, half a century ago, the first was iron; thirtieth, cotton; thirty-fifth, linen; fortieth, woolen; forty-fifth, silk and the sixtieth, seventieth were, as well as the seventy-fifth, diamond.

A GIRL ABOUT TOWN By Dorothy Coleman

SIR JAMES BARRIE'S old lady who showed her medals has nothing on a St. Louis dowager of our acquaintance who goes in for patriotic societies in a big way, has been a state officer of one, and all that sort of thing. She's probably the ranking medalist of the town (though she won't say so), with a boxful of insignia and a handful of lineage charts back to 1096.

We got her to bring all the paraphernalia over the other day and spent an illuminating two hours straightening it out in our mind. Well, the 1096 date has something to do with the first crusade to the Holy Land to rescue it from the Saracens. Our friend knows, to a man, to which of these volunteers she's related—it's more than one, too. She thus has qualified as a member of the Order of the First Crusade. For that she has a small gold medal suspended on a vertically-striped black and white ribbon.

Then we come along with her up to 1215. Remember that date? Some English barons got old King John out in a field called Runnymede and made him sign the Magna Carta in 1215. There were 21 barons in all, she says, only 19 of whom were, or later became, fathers. But that was enough to start the ball rolling. Now there's a national society called "The Daughters of the Barons of Runnymede." Our friend belongs. On that insignia you are privileged to attach gold bars announcing that the forebear "you went in on" was a Knight of the Garter, or a Knight of the Bath, if he was a Knight of the Garter or a Knight of the Bath. Our friend could wear both, but doesn't.

THERE IS one other society to which she belongs which takes you back to the old country. It's the Order of the Crown. You gain admittance to that by proving that somewhere on a main branch of your family tree was a member of the British nobility. (But you have to be a member of the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America first!) The Order of the Crown is represented in her collection by a handsome blue and white enamel badge with a ribbon bow tie at the top. This is the only insignia that it's cricket to wear on a black velvet ribbon around your neck, or in the center on the corsage. All the others must be worn from the left shoulder.

The women usually pin them on a long black ribbon and just suspend that from the shoulder seam. It keeps your dresses from getting stuck full of pin holes. The distance down the left side which the ribbon extends is a pretty fair gauge of the excellence of one's lineage and the fervor of one's genealogical research. It lengthens every time you can dig up another qualifying ancestor.

A ringleader in the town's patriotic circles has 150 gold bars—one bar per ancestor—on one of her insignia. (In some societies these ancestral bars cost as much as $2.50 each.) They just about drip off the hem of her skirt. If you are a state or national officer in any of these clubs you're privileged to sport a broad ribbon, in the club's colors (reversed if you're an "ex"), katty-corner-wise across your front. The final effect is pretty dazzling, although the present tendency to substitute miniatures for the full-sized regalia is dimming it a little.

We asked if English royalty was aware that some of the daughters in this new country were laying claim to noble blood. "Well, the societies didn't get much notice abroad," we were told, "until they began to send over money for the restoration of historic landmarks."

OF COURSE, not everyone can check up on his forebears on the other side of the water. There are a good many more who can qualify for the National Society of the Daughters of the American Colonists, one of the niftier groups, according to our informer. Membership in this is tantamount to a pedigree that your ancestors came to America pretty early, anywhere from 1607 to 1776.

Our friend, who can be a little more specific about the matter, has also joined the First Families of Virginia Society, after establishing the fact that one of her forebears was an original Jamestown settler in 1607. That beats to a standstill those whose ancestors crossed in the Mayflower. Everyone knows it didn't reach Plymouth Rock until 1620.

Right along here in the historical calendar the societies begin to overlap, our pleasant informer admitted. In addition to the National Society of the Daughters of the American Colonists, there are the Colonial Daughters of the Seventeenth Century, the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the National Society of the Colonial Dames of America, and then a competitive society, called simply the Colonial Dames of America. The Colonial Dames of America filed a lawsuit not so many years ago to enjoin the National Society of Colonial Dames of America from using the title Colonial

The Value of Looking Unto Eternal Hills

By Elsie Robinson

LIGHTS blazed through the palace. Jewels glittered. Fountains splashed their iridescent spray. Across the splendid courtyard thronged soldiers in shining armor, courtiers in trailing velvet, slaves whose naked flesh was gleaming bronze. In the scented harem the women danced, and beyond the palace steps proud Israel swept by, insolent in her riches.

But King David sat alone, apart in a small upper room, sick at heart. What was it worth, all this pomp and play-acting? What did it mean to a discouraged soul?

It meant nothing. Whether one lived in a palace or in a mud hut, life at times became a desert—a gray desolation like that which he could glimpse beyond the city wall. Flat days, flat nights, and man, a weak, futile creature, plodding across the hopeless waste of ignorance and fear.

Weary, the old king looked across the waste of land, the waste of years.

—o—o—

SUDDENLY, on the far rim of the desert something burned for an instant like a torch. A ray of the setting sun touching one high peak—that was all. But, at that spark joy flared in David's heart.

"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills from whence cometh my help!"

(For there are hills! Life is not only desert, desolate, and sad sands of weariness, seared sands of sin. Above the sands there rise the shining heights of faith, purity, honesty, courage, love. These, too, are part of human life, and I will lift mine eyes to those free eternal heights when my weak feet seem sinking in the sand.)

"My help cometh from the Lord, which made heaven and earth!"

—o—o—

(I'M NOT FORSAKEN! I am not alone! The God who made me from the faulty dust placed in that dust a spark of His own flame. And so, though I am dirt, I, too, am God! He cannot fail me who am part of Him.)

"He will not suffer they foot to be moved."

(I slip, I fall; and yet I'm fixed as firmly in God's plan as any wheeling star. Each slip, each fall is but a part of life. The stars go wheeling around their central sun. My life revolves around the heart of God.)

"He that keepeth thee will not slumber. Behold, He that keepeth Israel shall neither slumber nor sleep. The Lord is thy keeper."

(I sleep, I falter; crumble like the earth from which I am made. But always, deep within me, something holds; some pride and purpose greater than my acts. The God within me does not slip nor sleep.)

"The Lord is thy shade upon thy right hand. The sun shall not smite thee by day; nor the moon by night. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil. He shall preserve thy soul."

—o—o—

(OFTEN I WONDER if it's all worth while—this muddled thing I call my human life. Why was I made, and whither do I go? What does it matter, this brief, yearning dream that seems to end so surely at the grave? Sometimes I ask these questions of myself, but find no answer in my narrow brain. Then, from the silence, the old answer comes. "Look all around you. See what God has made. Ten million years to shape one little flower. How many more to shape one human soul? Will God, who toiled for ages on one flower, let all His work be wasted on a soul? Be still and trust Him. He has brought you far. The God who made you will not fail you now.")

"The Lord shall preserve they going out and they coming in, from this time forth, and even forevermore."

(A going and a coming—that is life. What'er befalls me, whether shame or grief, I shall go on through endless happenings, learning and living, with His hand on mine.)

In the courtyards the bugles called. In the harems the women danced. Hurrahs echoed as King David left his room and walked by kneeling multitudes.

But now his eyes were neither eager, nor angry, nor afraid. He was at peace. It did not matter. None of these outer things mattered. Splendor could not bind him now. Desolation could not crush him.

He had lifted his eyes above all that, up to the high places—up to God.

Frock-Like Coat

The coat which buttons straight down the front, has very little collar and uses a brilliant scarf to decorate the neckline looks sufficiently like a frock that it could serve in that capacity. Sheer woolens also contribute to its resemblance to a shirtwaist frock, as do the addition of patch pockets. Many of these coats have four pockets, two on the blouse section and two on the skirt. A wide belt of leather or fabric adds to the dress illusion.

MOVING INTO AN Apartment

By Marjorie Hillis

I HAVE a friend who has decided that this spring she will move out of her fairly large house into a much smaller apartment, and who is behaving much as everybody else does in similar circumstances. The move is a purely voluntary one—she wants less responsibility, she says, and less to take care of. For months she has been talking about how much she looks forward to clearing out the clutter and accumulation of years which fills her house.

But now that the leases are signed and the need of picking and choosing what to clear out is not far away, practically everything she has has taken on a new and fancy value. And never before have her possessions seemed to her so charming.

She has, actually, some very nice furniture, but—as with most of us, not everything is a museum piece or even an irreplacable family heirloom. Some bits—to be honest, though rude—are out of date if not slightly ugly. She has too many pictures for even a large house and half of what she has would look better for new and modern framing.

Even if none of this were true, it makes very little sense to try to move the contents of a four-story house into a six-room apartment. The desire may be only human, but it accounts for a lot of clutter, dowdiness and unnecessary work for the housewife.

Our heartless advice to our friend, and anyone else who is contemplating a similar move come the first of May, is to furnish your new apartment mentally, with as much charm as your imagination can plan. This done, write down coldly and dispassionately two lists—one with all the things you used, the other with all those you didn't use. The next step is not to begin figuring out ways by which you might squeeze a few objects from the second listing. Instead, sell or give away (it usually amounts to the same thing, at this stage of the proceeding) as much as you can without actual pain, and when the parting becomes too poignant, park the rest in some relative's garage or attic.

THE other day I read an article in a current magazine, all about things of the moment that the author didn't or did like, the lists called "Thumbs Up" and "Thumbs Down," respectively. I agreed with scarcely any of them and sat right down to write my own list of a few things I'd gotten a kick out of lately—and here it is.

1—The setting for "Family Album," one of the Noel Coward plays, in which a Regency room is done in grays, black and white, and has color, spaciousness, and dignity, and the four women, in deep mourning, wear billowy dresses that give the scene the sharpness of an old silhouette—and a breath-taking loveliness.

2—New York at night, as one comes East from the theater district, when traffic is sparse and the streets are deep canyons—Fifth avenue, as elegant as a deserted drawing-room; the side streets quiet except where hotels and restaurants spill out well-dressed young people, perhaps the most attractive in the world; the elevated, a bar sinister reminding you of the other side of the city's life; and above your head, a skyline so dramatic that it can stir you 365 nights in the year.

3—"El Indio," the prize-winning Mexican novel by Gregorio Lopez y Fuentes, translated by Anita Brenner, written with a moving simplicity not unlike that of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," and painting an unforgettable picture of the Mexican Indian, childlike and dignified, tragic and bitterly oppressed.

4—The scene on the porch of the social hall at Kamp Kare-free, in "Having Wonderful Time," in which the Jewish boy and girl get acquainted by discussing Life with all the triteness of extreme youth of any race, and succeed in being both very funny and very pathetic.

Spring Is Off To Good Start In New York

Annual Flower Show at Grand Central Palace Marks New Season.

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, March 27.

WHATEVER the state of the weather, Spring always gets off to a spanking start among our limestone canyons, where a blade of grass hasn't been seen since 1894. The minute the vernal equinox checks in, so does our annual flower show at Grand Central Palace on Lexington avenue—and nature-hungry citizens wander gapingly among four and a half (count 'em) acres of gorgeous blooms. You can smell—but mustn't touch!

This is one local shennanigan where the hired help runs things. The rich folks step into the background, only emerging to clutch their blue ribbons, while their gardeners take full charge of judging the posies and the entire gardens laid out indoors. The fabulously wealthy Mrs. Payne Whitney has a formal garden in the show this year, designed and tended lovingly by Henning Michelsen, her devoted weeder. It features huge tulips, with a background of flowering dogwood and young birches. G. H. Gillies, who toils in the soil for the present Mrs. Marshall Field, has concentrated on a bed of tea-roses, ringed with yellow and pink azaleas.

These lads, and a dozen other big-shot gardeners, form the jury which passes out the prizes. The show fills no less than four big floors of the Palace with color and nice whiffs. Of course, there are the usual new varieties of roses on view. I like particularly a big "Queen Mary"—a pinkish beauty. But the thing that gives me the greatest kick in our posy exhibit is the fact that the boys who know their blooms and do the heavy work are the ones who pass on the flowers. This flower show is serious business—not for dilettantes!

WELL, FIFTH and Madison avenues are the customary shambles today, with the wild-eyed girls skittering from shop to shop lining up the last ducky touches for their perfect ensembles. And may the good old sun shine down on those new suits! . . . What do you want in the way of flowers? Are you a gardenia girl, or are you satisfied with nothing less than a cluster of decadent-looking orchids? I'm all for camellias, myself, though I don't presume to compete with Garbo. Prices here have been nicely boosted, and by tonight the florists will be yelling for more stock.

I JUST FINISHED James Hilton's new little thin novel, "We Are Not Alone," and found it quite in the sentimental tradition of his famous "Mr. Chips." The lad has lost caste with book critics lately, on the charge of too much goo. Rather surprised at his getting a Mexican divorce. Did Hollywood score another bust-up? Fatal spot!

—o—o—

OUR DOCTORS keep fighting the too-high maternity deathrate in this town, and today report they have knocked 10 per cent off the tragic total. Good work, boys! . . . Our big-league milliner, peppery Lily Dache, is going to open a four-floor salon in an old brownstone front next summer, and she tells me a cute stunt for her corner-stone laying. Into the tin box she will put a copy of what she remembers as the first hat she ever designed, and what she considers the best topper she's made in 1937! That'll be a novel cornerstone!

—o—o—

LOCAL WOMEN are anxiously awaiting the coming film, "Vogues of 1938!" which will deal with feminine frippery in a big way never yet seen in pictures. Lillian Fisher, former Harper's Bazaar editor in Paris, has charge of the clothes angle, and it was for this film that 30 of our loveliest mannequins, headed by the famed Betty Wyman, were recently shipped West. Should be hot!

—o—o—

ONWARD and upward with the Sex: For the first time in 43 years, Washington Square College of our New York University has picked a girl as chairman of the senior ball. She's a fetching 19-year-old named Rheta Benjamin, and is a shark at basketball and field hockey as well as hops. Ah there, Rheta! . . . Well, our 1939 world's fair looks like a sure-shot success now. The republic of Guatamala was the first nation to crash in with an acceptance of the bid to take part. Finland and France were hot on her heels!

I LIKE TO TALK to movie makeup men and women, who make Glamor Girls out of mere pretties. Dot Ponedel, who works on Dietrich and Lombard, gave me some good rules the other day. Apply your face under the same type of light you expect to be under during your "date." Pluck your eye brows under, not above the brow. And don't smear on lipstick too thickly for "sheen." Mix in a bit of vaseline instead!

CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

SPRING SILK FASHIONS

By Prunella Wood

THERE is no time of the year when pure silk dresses are in eclipse, but it is in the spring that this lovely fabric does the most for us, in gay frocks that transfer us from dreary weather to sunny days. There is just enough warmth in a nice print silk dress to meet the whims of the thermometer, and as for wear and tear, your silk dress really enjoys a trip to the cleaner and comes home as good as new.

EVERYONE is used to the full, shirred peasant skirt by now, and has decided for or against it for individual becomingness. The sleek-hipped but very full fan-pleated skirt is the latest full skirt to be popular.

BOTH THE PRINT FROCKS SKETCHED HERE TODAY ARE ALL SILK-TOPS IN FABRIC FOR SPRING WEAR.

Velvet Accessories With New Costumes

VELVET no longer can be considered a winter fabric. Sheer varieties and mousselines or marquesettes that are dotted with tiny velvet flowers are being employed for summer evening dresses while velvet accessories are accompanying spring and summer costumes.

The designers of velvets introduce their materials in very light weights and in pastel colorings so that they are suitable for elaborate ensembles including wedding gowns. To look at their gossamer qualities it is difficult to realize that the fabrics actually belong to the velvet family. Many of them are shown in pastel colorings.

Of interest among accessories are velvet ribbons which adorn millinery and waistlines, as well as being threaded through old-fashioned beading. Flowers, butterflies, parasols, scarfs and blouses are other interesting developments in the use of velvet materials.

Leather Accessories

Light-colored and bright-toned leathers as accessories for dark costumes are among the fashion highlights. The less daring display the leather in bags and belts while the more venturesome include shoes in their new accessory ensemble. Putty-colored beige is among the latest to arrive, while deep rust tones that border on the red continue to be liked.

Butterfly Buttons

Life-size butterflies that look so realistic you expect them to fly away take the place of buttons on a cleverly styled suit on display in St. Louis. The theme originated with the daring Schiaparelli who can start a new style merely by twisting fabric around her fingers or slinging a strap over her shoulder.

Opposite the butterflies on the other side of the front of the jacket are very wide buttonholes but no one would venture to coax the colorful buttons through these slits. By leaving the coat open a colorful and very handsome blouse is disclosed.

Evening Headdress

A visored jockey cap trimmed with black aigrets is among the newer evening headdresses being shown in Paris. Another up-to-the-minute headgear is a spray of royal blue aigrets shaped like a crown.

Many New Sweaters Are Being Crocheted

MANY of the newest sweaters are being crocheted rather than knitted, thanks to the revival of lace. The trend also shows indications of spreading to other hand-made items of apparel such as dresses for daytime and evening.

Every woman who knows how to ply her needles is ambitious to create a costume which has the appearance of exquisite old lace, so the crochet hooks are being called into service along with the knitting needles. Many of the sweaters look more like blouses because of their open patterns and their more formal method of styling. Overblouse types which fit snugly at the waistline are featured along with novel vestee effects to wear under knitted jackets.

Yarns are becoming more essential to the successful appearance of a hand-knitted or crocheted costume. Unusual color combinations are noted and for coats and suits especially there is increased interest in nubby effects. Capes have joined the list of popular hand-knit costumes and are being made of various styles and lengths.

Elaborate Hosiery

With the return of shorter evening skirts, more elaborate hosiery is returning to popularity. Lace and novelty clocked effects are shown in newest collections. Open back sandals also are influencing hosiery styles, especially the unique type which has lace heels.

Rainy-Day Togs Of Strip-Candy Color Patterns

Coats, Capes and Umbrellas Available in Oiled-Silk Material.

IF you see something resembling a life-size stick of peppermint candy walking down Olive street on a rainy spring day, don't conclude that a circus has come to town. It is merely a fashionable young woman attired in the latest type of rainy day togs.

Coats, capes and umbrellas are available in a specially treated oiled silk that appear in stick-candy patterns. The majority of the fabrics have a white or pale yellow background on which the stripes and plaids are presented in color. Diagonal designs are seen most frequently.

There also are attractive raincoats of checked and plaid flannels which have rubber or water-resisting gabardine backs as well as interesting tweed coats that serve a double purpose. In these lines as in the styles made of oiled silk brightness of color is a note of interest.

The balmacaan model is the preferred one, although there are many variations. Novelty buttons of compositon or wood that bring out one shade of the fabric, pockets which fasten with slide fasteners and are very large, collars made of cotton velvet or show the reversible feature of the lining, leather trimmings, and interestingly designed yokes are among the details which contribute to the attractiveness of the spring's collection of rainwear.

Dames, which didn't exactly improve the feeling between them.

IT WOULD PROBABLY be a little hard to found another society on the unique platform of the Knights of the Golden Horseshoe. This insignia was one of the fanciest in the collection we handled. The pin was attached to a dull gold helmet, highly plumed, beaver down. Below it was a striped ribbon from which dangled a tiny gold horseshoe. Back in 1716, or thereabouts, Gov. Spotswood of old Virginny took a platoon of his loyal men and a case or so of spirits up to a mountain top for no reason historically recorded but to drink to the health of the King of England. It was a good steep climb and hard on the horses' hoofs. The men just had to pitch in and reshoe them en route. When they got home several days later, the Governor presented each of them with a gold horseshoe in recognition of their hardihood and skill. If there's a gold horseshoe anywhere in your family, you might be able to qualify for this select society. It's co-educational.

And if you can cite records to prove that you had an ancestor who fought in the war of 1812 you are entitled to join the United States Daughters of 1812 and wear an insignia with an anchor and a blue star on it. Of course, just ancestry is not enough for any of these societies. You have to be invited to join, and the blackball system is in general practice.

ONE OF THE RAREST emblems which our friend cherishes is a red and green striped one, badge of the Guadelupe Club. Her grandfather was a Lieutenant-Colonel in the Mexican War and fought at the battle of Buena Vista. He won the friendship of monks in Mexico, who presented him with a silver rosary which hung from his shoulders to the ground, and he was six feet three in his stocking feet. His family clamored so for a bead each that he finally had the whole thing melted down and made into a dozen silver spoons, now in the possession of our friend.

The most recent insignia from the point of time, which she has added to her collection, are a small round button inscribed "National Society of World War Registrars"; and a medal struck off by the United States Treasury Department and awarded "for patriotic service in behalf of the liberty loans" during the World War. It's made, so it says on the obverse, from a captured German cannon.

Changing Styles

Every woman who prided herself last summer on the possession of a white organdie tunic blouse for wear over a dark slip will be cutting it off to bolero length or adding material to redingote length to be in style this year.

Embroidered organdie and other crisp, sheer fabric of white and pastel colorings are being used extensively again for informal evenings. One of the most striking frocks on display in the St. Louis stores has a full length redingote of embroidered organdie over a black taffeta slip. Competing for interest is a navy taffeta dress, the low-cut bodice of which is covered with a short-sleeved white organdie bolero.

Colorful Millinery

ITALIAN PLAYING CARDS IN COLORFUL ARRAY FURNISH AN INTERESTING PATTERN FOR THE PRINTED SILK BOW AND BANDEAU OF A BIG HAT OF ROYAL BLUE TOYO. THE SAME PRINT, INCIDENTALLY, IS USED FOR THE JACKET.

GYPSY THEME IN FAVOR FOR SPRING AND SUMMER

THE gypsy theme—represented by Roman stripes, colorful combinations, full skirts, wide girdles, bandana 'kerchiefs worn as hoods or carried knapsack fashion, and closely-fitted bodices—has won the approval of the designers of women's clothes for spring and summer.

While the idea would seem to be most appropriate for sports apparel it is used as extensively for formal evening ensemble. Its daytime interpretation is noted most in the accessory field where scarfs, blouses, bags and little knick-knacks follow the striped trend and are very gay in color. Especially noteworthy in sports wear is the bright scarf tied over the head and knotted under the chin—a novelty headgear which was worn extensively in the Southern resorts and promises to be a spring rage in St. Louis.

The gypsy trend in evening fashions appears so frequently that no girl can master the rhumba, it seems, unless she is wearing a Roman striped frock with a full skirt and a bright, contrasting belt. The trend is noticeable regardless of the type of material which is used for the frock or ensemble. Heavy taffetas and satins, sheer fabrics such an chiffon and mousseline and practically all of the cotton materials of the season lend themselves to the presentation of the striped theme.

Typical of the style as reflected in the evening dresses on display in St. Louis is a Roman striped chiffon which uses the striped vertically for low-cut V-necklined bodice and also for the full skirt, which has gathers at the waistline. A flounce effect is achieved at the hemline with the stripes arranged vertically. A wide beaded girdle picks out one shade of the chiffon, the others being used in the ornamentation.

Another evening frock that is made of striped linen is more youthful in its styling because of a scarf-like collar with fringed edges which covers the shoulders. The scarf is arranged as a double triangle and is knotted at the front. Incidentally, the wearer may remove it for wear over her head if she chooses. The bodice is simply cut with a rather low square neckline. Tiny buttons extend from the top of it to the bottom of the skirt both front and back to suggest full length fastening.

Evening Ensembles

ENSEMBLES of hat and bag, hat and gloves or hat and scarf are in vogue for evening as well as for daytime. One gay little set created for evening wear consists of a toque of navy grosgrain covered with blue cornflowers and a circular bag similarly adorned. Another is fashioned of dark red ribbon pleated to resemble a flower petal and matching gloves having petal-like ribbon cuffs.

Chiffons and printed crepes are used most in the creation of hat and bag ensembles, the draped toque being the accepted favorite among hat styles, although a few little sailors have chiffon scarfs that match chiffon 'kerchiefs. Ombre stripes are stressed in the presentation of a two-color theme.

Colorful Gilets

It takes a strong will to pass the neckwear counters without investing in a colorful gilet this season, especially if there is a last year's frock hanging in the closet, waiting for a few up-to-date adornments.

There's no better way to bring a frock to this spring's requirements than to invest in one of the inexpensive little false fronts that are made of printed fabrics, nets and laces. The gilets which are created of bordered scarfs look best with sports frocks while the little flower prints perform near-miracles with dark sheer dresses. Ruffled net or Valenciennes lace edging gathered on net foundations transforms a tailored dress into one equal to informal evening wear.

Linen Fashions To the Front This Summer

ALL of those flower-toned linen blouses which are appearing in the shops to complement spring suits are merely forerunners of more linen fashions which are coming during the next few months.

Style leaders are predicting great popularity for linen costumes for spring and summer, with various novel interpretations of the fabric to be employed in interesting ways. Daytime and evening frocks, separate coats, suits, bathing suits, millinery and accessories all are to be made of linen, much of which assumes such a different appearance that the casual onlooker has difficulty in determining that the costume is made of flax.

THE VOGUE of plaids will be reflected in plaid linen sportswear. Coats of short swagger type will be worn over solid colored linen frocks or dresses made of different materials. A plaid fitted jacket will be worn with a white or natural linen skirt. Plaid bathing suits and robes also will appear on the beaches. Next to plaids will be the peasant influence in novelty printed effects.

Embroidered linens are being talked about in fashion circles as an excellent choice for daytime frocks and redingotes of the "town" type as contrasted to those for sportswear. Tiny motifs of white or two tones will appear on navy, black and other very dark shades as well as the pastels. Jacquard linens and those which resemble very closely table damasks also are to be used for tailored and dressy daytime costumes.

For evening wear linen will again exert its fabric influence. Handkerchiefs weights that display striking prints, many of which are very scattered, already are appearing for evening dresses while there are many heavier striped and flower printed linens for complete ensembles—the jacket or coat often quilted.

The HOMEMAKER'S Page

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

WELL, the spring crop of brides is just around the corner and that always brings with it a flurry of apartment hunting and furniture buying. And, over and over again I am asked two questions by these young neophytes when they are about to set out on the all important furniture shopping expedition.

First, "with a limited budget, how can I buy things of good quality and still have enough money to obtain a finished effect in my home?" The second question is usually, "How do I know that I am getting full value in the pieces I buy?" Here are a few of the answers I give to these problems and, whether you are a bride or a seasoned householder, you may find a few helpful hints among them.

IN FURNITURE, as in practically everything else, remember above all that you "get what you pay for." Granted that occasionally you will run into a "good bargain"; by and large you will find that the price of an article is a pretty good index of its quality. Just as women have learned during these past "depression years" that, though two dresses may look identical, one will be skimped in the seams and hems, the material will not stand up under wear and cleaning and the whole dress will be cut scanty; just so it is with furniture. But, remember that you expect a piece of furniture to last a lot longer than you do a dress and that it will probably be given much harder wear.

So, buy the few pieces that you can afford to buy of excellent quality and fill in the bare spaces with ingenuity. Beware of buying pieces with the idea that you will discard them later; they have a way of hanging around and haunting you in time. Also, you will find that one really fine piece will dress up and "fill" up a room much more than two or three mediocre pieces, for people will be attracted to and notice a good piece and pay no attention to a commonplace one.

● IF YOUR BUDGET permits the buying of only a few good pieces but you need other things for comfort and a finished effect, fill in with the cheapest possible things you can find. And by that I mean such things as the unfinished furniture you will find in many stores. It is surprising how attractive you can make this furniture with a little stain or wax or painting, for many of these pieces are of good, simple line and well constructed. When people are limited in funds I always suggest, for instance, that they buy the best spring and mattress they can afford, set it up on little feet and have a head board made of a piece of material over a plain board, rather than buy an elaborate bed and cheap sleeping equipment. For a good spring and mattress are essential for comfort and lasting wear and a bed can always be added when the family exchequer permits.

BE GUIDED, to a certain extent, in your choice of styles by the amount of money you have to spend. Some periods and styles of furniture are just naturally more expensive than others because of the woods that are used in their construction, the amount of carving and detail, and the elaborateness of their hardware. Thus, it stands to reason that most of the French styles, if done correctly, with their delicate inlay, use of rare woods, and finely modelled hardware will prove more expensive than an equally good reproduction of an early American piece with its plain, sturdy lines, absence of carved detail and the use of such native and comparatively inexpensive woods as maple, cherry and pine.

Don't, of course, buy a style that doesn't appeal to you, merely because it is less expensive than another type that you would really prefer. After all, if you have the soul of a Pompadour, you will never feel happy and at home in a Betsy Ross interior. But, if you just naturally like one of the more expensive styles remember—stay simple and you will be sure to find some pieces, and good ones too, of that style that will fit into your budget. It may take a little more time and effort and a little more waiting for the pieces you want, but when you are finished you will have a place that suits your personality.

● AND NOW, a few words about the quality of a piece of furniture and how you can judge whether you are getting what you are paying for. First and foremost, buy from a reputable concern. They have a good reputation to maintain.

Then, look at the construction of the piece you are purchasing, especially at the places you are not normally supposed to look. If it is a good piece the salesman will not resent this and if it is a poor piece you will want to know about it. Look for signs of carelessness and slip-shod workmanship in the places not open to ordinary view for if a piece is slighted here it is very apt to be of poor construction.

Green tea is unfermented, whereas black tea is produced by allowing the plucked leaves to wither and ferment for a time.

FLOWERS That Bloom in DOUGH

Panful of Scraps Goes Into Oven and Comes Out Springtime Cookies

CONSIDER THE LILY—HOW IT IS CUT AND SHAPED LIKE THE SYMBOL OF THE SEASON.

By Mabel C. Mease

THERE is magic in your finger tips if you will let them play, along with your imagination and a lump of dough made from the recipe for cookies included in this article. You can pick posies out of the 'kitchen oven for yourself and, while you are about it and are altruistically inclined, you can pluck bouquets for all the friends you would love to delight with that "something different" fo Easter.

You can make a lily spray, symbol of the season, and you can twine a wreathe of roses that will do as much to pleasure the eye as the palate. For less than 50 cents you can turn out of the cooky pan as wide a variety of floral specimens as you have the creative ability and the will to fashion. And as you snip and cut and model, you will be fascinated to watch the flowers bud and blossom under your artful fingers.

After you have mixed your dough and before you roll it, assemble the tools you will need for your craft: First, an assortment of cooky cutters in various sizes and shapes—round, an oval that's scalloped, and a crescent. As a matter of fact it is well to have on hand a number of round cutters ranging from thimble-size to two or more inches in diameter. (Tops from little tin cans serve very well.) The scalloped oval you will use to cut out the foliage for your roses while to make the realistic straight-edged leaves of certain other flowers you will need the crescent to shape the outer edges or pieces already cut from the dough with a round cutter. Most certainly you can't get along without a pastry brush!

With the tools before you, place conveniently to hand all the decorative accessories to the dough—chopped nuts, (peanut and almond halves) strips of citron, tiny varicolored confetti candies, pink and green sugar (use granulated sugar and tint it yourself by adding a few drops of vegetable coloring to a saucer full).

The extra egg white mentioned in the recipe should be slightly beaten but not to a stiff froth. Its purpose in the plan is to make the decorations hold fast to the dough. Without the sticking qualities of the white of egg, the nuts and the strips of citron and the confetti candy would be sure to drop off.

When everything you can possibly need is within hand's reach you are ready to begin the sculpturing process. Roll your dough very thin and utilize every bit from the first rolling, cutting from the scraps that fall from the larger forms the smaller shapes that help to fashion the perfect leaf or stem or blossom. You will gain speed and skill as you go.

IF you have thought to provide yourself with a seed catalogue containing illustrations of practically every flower that grows, you have done well, and since this is the season of the lily the chances are that the lily is the blossom upon which your eye has come to rest. Very likely you have considered it from different angles, drooping or upright, and chosen your model. Following the outlines in the illustration, you'll notice that lily petals have much the same formation as leaves. So cut out the petals and arrange them to meet at the stem—in this instance a long thin strip of dough. Then with a sharp knife lightly trace out lines to simulate the veins that run through the center of every lily petal. Carve thin strips of dark green citron into pistils and stamens. When all is done you have a lily that will do you credit!

BEFORE YOU BEGIN TO COOK, BE SURE ALL YOUR ACCESSORIES ARE ON HAND.

If 'tis roses you prefer, let's make roses next, still taking our cue from the seed catalogue. Place five round pieces of dough, not larger than an inch in diameter, in a circle, but leaving an open center. Then arrange five other round bits within this outer circle, pressing them flat to meet in the center. Curl up or pinch with the finger tips, the outer edges of some of these "petals" to give them a natural appearance. Brush the center of the rose you have just fashioned with egg-white and add a few nut meats and confetti candies. Sprinkle the rose petals with white or pink sugar. Divide the sugar into three parts—leave the first part all white, but color the other two, tinting one a deeper rose pink than the other. Color contrast will make your floral effects far more interesting.

Now take in hand your crescent cutter and slice a piece of dough to the length and width you think right for a rose stem. Be sure to make one end slightly wider than the other and slice this wider end in half, spreading it open and slipping it under the petals a very little way.

So far, so good. Yet what would a rose upon its stem be without its leaves? Assuming these leaves are ready cut and waiting to be added it remains only to put them in place around the rose and on the stem—properly spacing them but allowing each leaf to touch. With the blunt edge of a silver knife slash a line through the center of every leaf and press in veins along each side. (It is best to do this while the leaves are still on the bread board.) Notch the stem with the point of the knife—these notches are the thorns that belong to the roses of course! If everything goes into the oven just as we have suggested, out of the oven will come pastry roses perfect in line and in detail.

BY the way, these cooky creations should be baked fairly quickly and watched extra carefully so they neither burn nor brown unduly.

Lilies and roses are only two of the season's floral favorites that you can copy. One idea will lead to another and the chances are you will find it great fun to experiment to see what other flowers you can sculpture from dough. Unless you are discouraged and quit after your first trial, the results of your efforts are apt to surprise you. The author suggests that you always bake a few extra stems, leaves and single flowers just in case you'd need them to elaborate on your original idea. And it may be advisable to make some plain shapes for the practical friends who can't bear to eat up the cookies that "look so beautiful."

Store your prize specimens in a flat tin box for special occasions.

If these descriptions cause you to decide to try your luck at making these good-to-eat blossoms, follow this formula. It will not fail you. The perfection of design rests with you.

PICTURE COOKIES

Six cups sifted pastry flour.
One and a half teaspoons baking powder.
One-half teaspoon salt.
One cup butter.
Two and a half cups sugar.
Two eggs.
One egg yolk.
One-half cup evaporated milk.
One teaspoon vanilla.

Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt together three times. Cream butter until soft. Add sugar gradually creaming until light and fluffy. Add eggs and egg yolk, beating until well mixed. Add milk. Blend well. Add vanilla. Blend in flour gradually working until a smooth dough is formed. Roll dough very thin on lightly floured board. Cut into shapes. Arrange on cooky sheet. Garnish as desired. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) until delicately browned. Cool slightly before removing from pans.

Easter Lilies Easily Raised By Gardeners

Seeds Will Grow Into Flowering Plants in From 16 to 18 Months.

By Harriet W. Chandler

OUT of the florists' windows have gone other potted plants to make way for Easter lilies. Emblems of Christian purity through the centuries these large chalice-like trumpets sound the end of the Lenten season as they become the flower of the hour.

Until the beginning of the twentieth century the Madonna lily of Southern Europe was used by American florists as the Easter lily. Always a temperamental beauty, uncertain in its time of blooming, this was hard to force to meet the demands of the Easter market, and when better varieties were introduced from Japan and Bermuda, the lovely Madonna was pushed out into the garden where it might bloom when it would. Now varieties of the longiflorum group are the acknowledged Easter lily of commerce. They are easy to force and with the cold storage of today can be brought into bloom at any time.

FEW PERSONS know how interesting it is to grow their own Easter lilies and few know how easily they can raise them from seed. The little flat seeds will grow into flowering plants in from 16 to 18 months, each carrying from four to eight of the lovely white trumpets. Get your seed in June from pollination made in the greenhouse at Easter and plant them in flats or pots in a window in October.

The Easter lily has the quickest action of any member of the genus, some of its strains having been flowered in from six to seven months, which is only a little longer than required to force the mature bulbs. But this feat is not for the amateur; for them the seed will begin to germinate in about 30 days in a cool window. After the plants are about three inches high they should be transferred to other flats where they can have more space, or might be put in two-inch pots to carry through the winter.

ABOUT this time in spring, while other Easter Lillies are in their glory, these little plants can be sunk in the cold-frame out of doors. Here they can be protected in bad weather, against heavy rains or sleet, but should have all the air possible on the good days. The Easter lily is much hardier than is generally supposed, for seedlings have been known to withstand a temperature of 15 degrees and yet to have recovered and bloomed in four months after being brought into the house.

Through the summer keep the seedlings sheltered from the hot sun and see that they do not dry out. In the fall plant them in good rich soil in the pots in which they are to bloom and set these in the window. They should bloom about Easter and the bulb will then increase to a group of five or six for use another year.

IT IS ADVANTAGEOUS to have your own bulbs, for so often you find it hard to get imported bulbs in time to force for the Easter season. A method employed by florists to keep the lilies white and free from pollen stain is to pinch out the little yellow anthers which stand out near the mouth of the trumpet. This prevents fertilization and makes the flowers last longer.

After the lilies have bloomed never let the bulb become quite dry. Bury it in a shady spot in your garden and it may surprise you with a late summer bloom.

Easter lilies raised in pots can be retarded or hurried by the variations of temperature where grown. When held back the plants can be used to sink in among ferns in a shady corner of the garden where their early bloom will give charming effect.

BY HER CHINA YOU SHALL KNOW THE BORN HOSTESS

By Elizabeth Boykin

CIRCUMSTANCES make some hostesses, others are born. One way to tell a born hostess is to watch her with her china. In the first place, she'll have the nicest china her means will allow and cut some other corners if necessary. She'll have a handsome china cupboard, too, if possible, and keep it shining.

We've been scouting for news about china lately for those who love to make beautiful ensembles for their tables.

The blues are important in both porcelain and pottery—delphinium, coronation, turquoise and peacock versions. (Peacock blue china and glass with gray linen, for instance!) Dusty pinks with burgundy are featured, too (Pink scenic plates on burgundy linen with crystal grapes for the centerpiece.) The yellows as usual bloom for spring (we liked, very much, a table set with white plates decorated with yellow sprays, a pale yellow organdy table cloth and a centerpiece of lilacs.) White plates with big pink pond lilies for their design were quite effective ensembled with a mirror plaque centerpiece and artificial lilies here and there on it.

Copper lusters are something to watch for in china, brass and copper are important table accessories, and gold lacquered porcelain is the grand dame of the table if you're feeling very affluent. Silver lusters are seen here and there.

On the subject of the metallics we must remind ourself that all plates aren't china or even porcelain. Some very smart monogrammed service plates are of a modern alloy that doesn't tarnish and has a soft beautiful radiance. The pieces shown in this metal stress line and form interestingly.

At the other end of the metal scale are the merrily casual pieces of spun aluminum, made for informal parties.

BETTER WATCH OUT how you talk about wall paper, or you'll give your age away as sure as fate!

There is a generation that remembers with horror the way flowered wall paper was done to death in the '90s and the first years of around—that's the wide part that this century. So if you shudder yet over flowered wall paper, you'll be dated accurately. And if in spite of all that you still just can't abide a paper blossom, you'd better have your own walls plain, with no explanations and take your friends' papered walls with no remarks.

Because women who grew up later in the plain wall era simply adore flowered wall paper. Even when it's not so practical to go in for entire walls papered in abundant florals, it's smart now to have accents of flowered paper here and there around the house.

One woman I know has just finished a darling dressing table made out of a table with an "apron" all comes down below the table top. She got herself a lovely wall paper border and pasted it around the apron, then painted the top of the dressing table in a glossy enamel pink to repeat the predominant tone in the border, and added a white organdy petticoat with pink taffeta ruffles around the bottom and up the middle of the front.

Another woman made her kitchen sit up and take notice of a hitherto neglected - looking breakfast nook. She papered the walls of the breakfast nook, ceiling and all, with a paper sprinkled all over with bright vegetables on a white background, then painted her benches and table garden green and made cloth and napkins out of fringed cotton in white with big red polka dots. What a pleasant surprise that was, opening off a very usual white kitchen! Where the paper of the breakfast nook joined the painted walls of the kitchen, she used a wall paper border in a molding design. Plaid paper would work in a place like a breakfast nook, too.

THE Tobacco HABIT

By Damon Runyon

NEW YORK, March

WE are proud to note that we assisted in the hanging of a new American record this month. The Bureau of Internal Revenue, in Washington, reports that the production of cigarettes in this country in February set a new all time high. A total of 12,328,2[illegible] cigarettes was turned out in this month, as against 10,766,369,0[illegible] in February, 1936. We must have been busy later than usual last month.

The February production of cigars this year was higher than the same month last year, but there was a falling off in the production of small cigars. However, we have no part in the cigar records. We are strictly a cigarette [illegible]. Sometimes when we wish to flatter ourself a business-man aspect we light up a big steamer, or cigar, but doubt that we fool any real cigar smoker.

WE HANDLE a cigar about as gracefully as a cub bear would handle a stove pipe. There is a certain skill, and finesse to cigar smoking that we never have been able to acquire.

In the first place, we inhale the cigar smoke from force of habit. That chokes us, and hurts our throat.

In the second place, we gnaw the end of the cigar as if it were a piece of rubber, a practice we fear is a throwback to the days when we enjoyed munching on what is known as chewing tobacco.

—o-o—

This is an enjoyment that [illegible] generally forego soon after getting matrimony. It seems that in this era, the women, in arranging their houses, make little or no provision for gobboons, or spittoons. A fellow who chews tobacco nowadays has to live near an open window, and in cold weather or when the mosquitoes are out this is apt to be inconvenient.

—o-o—

● ANYWAY, we do not like cigars. We do not like the taste or the odor of cigars. This is probably why we invariably draw a restaurant table next to a victim of a cigar smoker, with the wind in that direction.

But we admit to a certain envy of the fellow who knows how to smoke a cigar with grace and enjoyment. It makes him look important.

We never made much headway against a pipe. We can manage one in a pinch, but indifferently. We are not the pipe type. Our face does not fit a pipe. We lack the air of calm meditation that goes with a pipe.

A new pipe bites our tongue. An old pipe carries an aroma that makes us seasick. We are [illegible] knocking pipe smokers. We [illegible] them among the manliest of tobacco users. But we do think there should be a law requiring them to carry a deodorant and [illegible] with them.

—o-o—

WHEN WE started in on our first pack of Old Judges, cigarette smokers were referred to as "[illegible]ette fiends." The smoking of cigarettes was denounced as a [illegible] closely allied to downright sin. No one could then foresee that cigarette would one day be news on the radio, or that the [illegible] would come when a fellow would have to be mighty cute about using his cigarettes from mother or the girls.

—o-o—

The chap who smoked cigars in our Old Judge day was viewed with suspicion. We regret to say we grew up under suspicion. Cigarettes were called "coffin tacks" back in the period when you got pictures of actresses and baseball players with each pack. It was said that every cigarette you smoked was another tack in your own coffin. On that basis we fear our coffin would sink to Normandie.

—o-o—

● FOR A long time we "[illegible] our own," as the saying was, that form of cigarette smoking is extremely fashionable. We are about to change our cigarette smoking to conform to the fashion.

We acquired great dexterity in [illegible]ndling a bit of granulated tobacco and [illegible] into a cube of brown paper after the manner of the old time Western cow prodders.

We doubt that our cigarette smoking has contributed anything to our health. They used to say that it would stunt our growth and perhaps it did. Perhaps if we had never had smoked, we might be [illegible] feet high.

—o-o—

EVERY TIME a doctor looks over, he says that what ails us is cigarette smoking. Then we explain to him that it is the last few, simple little pleasures of this life, and the doctor says he understands how it is, and that [illegible] in a cigarette, and says he does not have much fun any more, either. We do not know just exactly what proportion of the new all-time record for cigarette production is entitled to claim credit for [illegible] ridge, however, from the [illegible] around our house, that it must be [illegible] many.

We hear much talk of ashes on rugs, and of people's carelessness in discarding cigarette [illegible] when we ask you, can a fellow [illegible] think of trifles when he is [illegible] a dash for a new record?

EVERY TIME a doctor looks us over, he says that what ails us is cigarette smoking. Then we explain to him that it is the last of our few, simple little pleasures in this life, and the doctor says he understands how it is, and joins us in a cigarette, and says he does not have much fun any more, either.

We do not know just exactly what proportion of the new all-time record for cigarette production we are entitled to claim credit for. We judge, however, from the beefs around our house, that it must be plenty.

We hear much talk of ashes on the rugs, and of people's carelessness in discarding cigarette butts, but we ask you, can a fellow pause to think of trifles when he is making a dash for a new record?

"BEAUTY IS THE VISIBLE SIGN OF AN INWARD AND SPIRITUAL GRACE," SAYS KATHARINE CORNELL.

WITH KATHARINE CORNELL

By ALICE WADE ROBINSON

NOTED BEAUTY NEWS AUTHORITY

. . . A CANON OF BEAUTY OPEN TO EVERYONE OF US.

"BEAUTY is the outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace," quotes Katharine Cornell, one of America's most distinguished actresses.

One reason why I was eager to bring you Miss Cornell's idea of feminine beauty is because of the theme of her latest play, "The Wingless Victory." It's the tale of a Salem sea captain who in 1800 brought back from the Celebes as his wife a strangely beautiful Malay Princess. She was ill-received by the rock-bound Salemites. The play ends in tragedy for the exiled Princess, her children and the sea captain husband.

Yet what life did not win, death made come true. Never again would those Salemites be able to push out of memory the sharp pain which true beauty of spirit—to say nothing of physical perfection—leaves as an unforgettable memory. The days might pass monotonously or swiftly, as days do. But on many of those days there would come to trouble smug Salem's peace the piercing remembrance of an exquisite face, an indomitable spirit which Salem's cruelty could not destroy.

But about that "outward and visible sign of an inward and spiritual grace" which to Miss Cornell is beauty. "Outward and visible," that seems plain enough—something we actually can see. But then as to "inward and spiritual grace"—that is more difficult. Grace which comes from within is made up of several qualities which one has made one's own; kindness, forbearance, trust, plus the doing of the right thing without show. Those are four of its ingredients. But the power to dismiss the second-rate comes into it, too—to possess inward grace we must have trained ourselves in discrimination. That orderly training presupposes good judgment and the exercise of choice. All these qualities, and humor. Blessed humor that tips with gaiety one's outlook on life lest one become too owl-eyed and solemn. The possessor of inward grace is rather given to laughing at himself. It keeps one young, flexible in spirit.

The person who bears the outward and visible sign of inward and spiritual grace is beautiful to Miss Cornell. You will notice that age has nothing to do with it. Nor has nationality. Nor has color of skin or hair or eyes. It is a canon of beauty open to everyone of us—whether we be 6, 16 or 60. It offers a hope that by virtue of the inner light which comes from pure goodness, our faces and bodies will show the kinds of thoughts upon which we feed. This inward grace induces us to hold up our heads, to throw back our shoulders, to lift our feet lightly and to face life gently as we can, but always bravely, always believing, and forever with an understanding heart.

We feel much more like facing our world, if our skin is fresh-looking, our eyes bright, our figures trim. It's fashionable nowadays to look healthy, to give the appearance of vitality, energy, enthusiasm. Ordinarily, a healthy person has a healthy skin. One's the outgrowth of the other. Unless you're ill, doctors tell me that cleanliness within and without gives that clear skin, those bright eyes we admire so much.

A daily bath—that goes without saying—Americans live by the tub. So I shan't go into that except to remind you that a good scrubbing with a bath brush is excellent for everyone. As for cleanliness within—watch your digestion and elimination. Try not to bolt your meals, and do not ruin your appetite by too many snacks between meals. Remember that ripe, raw fruits, fruit and vegetable juices, baked apples, stewed figs and prunes—even though simple foods—are nourishing and have an aperient value. Keep clean without and within too.

WATCH your hair if your face is sometimes given to blemishes. Keep it spotless. Be careful, too, not to allow the soiled soapsuds from your hair to fall on face and neck. Dermatologists say those suds may be bacteria bearers, may spread a pimply infection to trouble skin. Another thing—get out into the sunlight as much as you can. The ultra-violet rays of good old Sol—taken in moderation—are healing, stimulating, conducive to skin health. Breathe deeply as you walk. Get as much oxygen as you can into those lungs of yours. Those deep breaths of good air are insurance for health. Get the blood pounding through your veins. It helps clear the body of impurities, is another excellent means of promoting the sort of complexion which looks healthy because it is healthy.

GAGES of GRACES

NATURALNESS: Be the way you are—even if it isn't as charming as you'd like to become. Do the becoming gradually so that even your best friend will scarcely be aware of the change.

—o-o—

GESTURE: Let any movement of your hands or head grow naturally out of what you say. Better be wooden than pointedly to display your brand-new manicure.

—o-o—

POISE: Nothing banishes shyness so much as the knowledge that you are looking your best. Immaculateness of person primarily and forgetfullness of it secondly, lend an outward ease. They're a superb camouflage for the timid.

—o-o—

ANIMATION: Be interested—even in a bore—if you get stuck with one. If you do your gentle best, the chances are that an unboring person will rescue you, as one much too nice to be missed.

—o-o—

POSTURE: Hold yourself proudly—better obviously, even arrogantly in the beginning rather than to give the illusion that you are apologetically or abjectly inhabiting the earth.

—o-o—

MANNERS: Remember them. The elementary "Excuse me," "May I help you?" "Won't you have one?"—on which you were brought up. Grace of movement grows naturally out of consideration for two persons: yourself and your neighbor.

CALLING ALL DOGS

By Albert Payson Terhune

FOR many years I knew at a glance the breed of every pure-bred dog I saw at a show or on the street. Now, at shows, I find myself staring in dull wonder at breed after breed I never heard of and whose specimens are unfamiliar to me. The American Kennel Club is accepting more and more new varieties of dogs for inclusion among the "recognized breeds."

I am old enough to remember when I saw my first Airedale and first Boston terrier and first Doberman pinscher and first Norwegian elkhound on the benches of A. K. C. shows. Yet now all these are long-established and are known to everybody. And along have come a new throng of purebreds. I am going to glance over a recent issue of the A. K. C. monthly Stud Book Register, and jot down the names of a few of these breeds. How many of them can you identify, especially if you are not a professional breeder or a dogshow addict?

Affenpinschers, Afghan Hounds, Boxers, Keeshonden, Lakeland Terriers, Straffordshire Terriers, Welsh Corgis, Bouviers de Flanders, Kuvasz.

Yet one day, some of these may be as familiar to you and to everyone as are now the pointer and collie and bulldog.

—o-o—

A PROTEST has been voiced against "streamline dogs." It has been made to the British National Veterinary Medical Association's Conference by Dr. H. R. Hewetson, a recognized expert.

Solemnly Dr. Hewetson warned the conference and the public at large that the past 12 years has marked a vast increase in "nervousness and hysteria" among purebred canines. He declares—with supposed statistics to back his assertion—that breeders are seeking to produce a "streamline type of dog," sacrificing strength and stamina and calmness to mere standardized beauty of line and of curve and of angle.

He claims that dogs should be allowed to revert to the good old normal type—broad skulls and massive bone-structure, etc.—in order to save their nervous systems from wreck.

Long ago, Davenport deplored the tendency—a tendency I have fought and sought urgently to correct—to give the honest collie a long and thin muzzle and narrower backskull, and to give him a streamline gracefulness at sacrifice of strength. Davenport said: "They are breeding the collie's brains out through his nose!" And now, according to the British expert, the nerves of many another purebred are on the road to ruin. Do you suppose it's true?

Getting Most Out of Your Spring Baths

"They Do Much More Than Achieve Mere Physical Cleanliness.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

ALONG about the end of March our grandmothers used to rip their husbands and children out of their winter underwear and have a grand orgy of spring bathing. I am not sure but that staying in the clothes all winter was a good idea.

For some time I have been advising people who have sensitive and itchy skins, especially elderly people, not to bathe so much in the winter. Now that spring is here, however, you can plan for baths a little more frequently, even with my approval.

There are several kinds of baths, and they do much more than achieve mere cleanliness. The ancient Roman and the modern Japanese spent a good deal of time in a steaming hot bath, especially before the evening meal. They made a social event of it, and bathed with their friends and discussed the topics of the day. A bath is a stimulant and circulatory tonic, as well as a tonic to the skin and nervous system.

THE MORNING BATH is for a hectic day ahead. We should take the kind of a morning bath that removes every ounce of sluggishness. For this reason, and also because few of us can dally in the morning, the bath should be a quick one, using moderately hot water so that the soap will lather generously. Follow the washing with a fast, cool splash and dry briskly. Your circulation will be speeded up, your body will tingle, and you will be ready to face the day's problems with vigor.

A cold bath is all right for the fellow who intends to spend the rest of the day boasting about it. If a cold bath does not produce a glowing sensation of well being, you had better leave it alone.

The pre-dinner bath, which is one of the best of all, should be hot. Not a shower, but tub. Slow lathering and a long soaking period of rest until the body is relaxed, as well as clean—this should be the ritual for the weary. There are very few things that a hot bath won't cure.

THIS REST BATH should be as unhurried as possible, especially if nervous fatigue is to be overcome. If there is time to lie down for a half-hour before dressing for dinner, it will be much more effective.

The bedtime bath should be neither hot nor cold; either extreme is likely to be weakening rather than soothing. The water should be about skin temperature or a little warmer. A tub bath is better than a shower at bed time. Remove the accumulation of grime, oil and perspiration, dead cells and bacteria on your skin, but do not take a strenuous rub-down after such a bath. Blot up the moisture in a leisurely fashion, and so to bed between clean sheets.

"Don't Center Child's Mind Upon Himself"

"When He Is Ill, Keep Him Thinking Away From His Troubles."

By Angelo Patri

IF YOU have a child who is forever whining about this and that, he is either too hot or too cold, too feeble to work, afraid of the wind and shunning the sunshine, take time to think over his ways. How did he get that way? Why isn't he happy-go-lucky, ready for anything, like the husky youngster down the road?

"Oh, he had so many childish illnesses. First he had whooping cough and he nearly died of it; then he had measles, and just as he was getting over them he got the chicken-pox, and then he had to have his tonsils out—always something. We just had to watch every movement he made. Such a delicate child."

That was truly unfortunate, but did you try always to keep him thinking away from his troubles toward something brighter and healthier? Did you keep him thinking about how fine it was going to be for him to be well and strong and out playing with the other boys? Or did you keep saying, "Now, remember, your stomach can't stand too much. Don't eat that apple. Don't eat that extra potato. No, no, wait until I fix that banana for you to eat."

DID YOU SAY, "No, you'd better not go out to play with those children. They're very rough, and you've been sick such a lot that you can't do so much. Better lie down on the couch and I'll read to you." Did you say, "It's too bad, but I can't let you go to Aunt Lily for the holidays. You wouldn't get your cereal cooked the way I cook it. And Aunt Lily doesn't know how to measure your spinach. You have to be SO careful about your food, you know. You don't want to be sick."

That treatment centers the child's mind upon himself. What he eats, what he does, what other people do for him are of the first importance. The life of the household, and that of the community, as far as it can be controlled, moves about him.

HIS FEET must be kept dry, his stomach must be coddled, his temperature must be considered, before anybody or anything else. The result is that we have an unhappy, whining, selfish child. No fault of his, but certainly the fault of those who kept calling his attention to his deficiencies, to his weaknesses, and overlooking his strength and his hope completely.

When a child is ill he must have attention and care. But there is a way to give that care and attention without making him feel permanently helpless. We can keep holding out the promise of health, play, fun, hearty living even as we administer the medicine that is going to help him arrive at the promised place. We can keep encouraging him to do what he can as well as he is able even while he is incapacitated for doing many things. We can keep him hoping.

If we hold out perfect health to the ailing child, as a reward for effort made toward it, if we keep showing him how to get the better of his condition, to keep him struggling to get out of it, instead of fastening it upon him, we will do more for him than we do when we accent his weaknesses and his temporary needs. We need not cultivate invalidism.

Delicious Meat Loaf

A MEAT loaf can be the delicious foundation of an appetizing meal, providing that it is properly prepared. Here is a successful recipe: One and a half pounds of ground beef, one-half pound ground pork and one-half pound ground veal. Mix these thoroughly with a dozen crackers ground fine, a half a cup of diced celery, one beaten egg, salt, pepper and sufficient milk to moisten well.

The "dry" taste of many meat loaves is due to insufficient milk. Brown first and bake in a moderate oven for about an hour. One-half cup of water and a can of seasoned strained tomatoes may be added as sauce if desired.

Color in Table Linens

The most popular color alliance of the month in table linens is the patriotic theme of red, white and blue. The fact that February is the month of notable birthdays has something to do with the trend but the coronation in England has an equal, if not greater, influence upon the color alliance. Flags of the nations are being used as motifs in the trimming on bridge and luncheon sets, and although the design is not duplicated accurately, the British theme most often is presented. White linens are used as the background, with the designs combining red and blue.

On Cooking Oatmeal

If the family likes old-fashioned oatmeal but everyone complains about its lack of flavor, the chances are that the housewife has failed to follow the simple rules for cooking this cereal. The water in the double-boiler should be salted and boiling briskly before the meal is added. Stirring is necessary only while the cereal is being poured into the container. Then the less stirring the better the finished product.

Tea Hour Brownies

Nothing tastes quite so good as brownies for the afternoon tea hour. Here is a recipe worth trying: Five eggs, four quarts of unsweetened chocolate melted in a cup of butter, two cups sugar, one cup flour, one-half teaspoon baking powder and one cup of nut meats. Bake in a slow oven for half an hour.

To use left-over mashed potatoes make them into potato puffs. To one-half cup of the mashed potatoes add two cups of flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one cup of milk and two eggs. Beat all of these ingredients together and drop from teaspoon into hot, deep fat and fry until brown.

Plaid Decorations.

Plaids are so popular in fashions this spring that they fit into the scheme of home decoration as they do into the scheme of the wardrobe. Gingham is one of the best fabrics to select in exploiting the plaid theme in your home. Kitchen curtains in a fresh color scheme of blue and yellow are most attractive while a pattern combining bright red with blue is not too striking to be pleasing. The sunroom, the playroom and the attic room are others which will become gayer by the addition of plaid accessories.

Orchids for Table

Orchids, either real or artificial, are being used for table decorations. Which is chosen, usually depends upon the budget problem. An arrangement created especially for a white room calls for a lyre of white wire upon which are fastened at intervals, little glass containers large enough to hold one orchid each. The entire frame supports six or 12—the size depending upon the length of the table upon which the floral display is to be used.

Chairs for Hallway.

Is your hallway one of those prim little rooms which has no place for a chair? Many halls in small homes are like that, and you only need to overhear the whispered comments of friends struggling to remove galoshes while standing to determine to add at least one chair. There are small, attractive chairs which take up little space and are especially appropriate for the tiny hallway—the room which is supposed to mean so much in the welcoming spirit of your home.

with enough animal heads to keep taxidermists busy all winter. LeRoy does his hunting in the theaters and book shops. On his honeymoon trip around the world, for instance, he noticed that all the passengers were reading "Anthony Adverse" so he came home and talked his studio into buying the book. Another time he brought a French tennis player home with him but this wasn't so successful. The tennis shark finally went back to Paris unhonored and unsung.

But the Gravet affair is another story. He was a real star in Europe. He spoke English. He could sing and dance. He knew pictures backwards. He had much of the charm of Chevalier and none of Chevalier's lip or accent. So signing him on the dotted line was a stroke of genius—we use the word idly, in the Hollywood fashion—on LeRoy's part.

Other producers had been after Gravet. He had had, it would seem, ten offers to come to Hollywood. But he spurned them all until LeRoy came along with a hatful of money and the promise that only LeRoy would direct Gravet. That seemed to appeal to him.

Gravet didn't know until he reached America last fall, what his first picture was going to be. He had relied on LeRoy's story judgment and, it would seem, he was wise. We've seen "The King and the Chorus Girl" and we can tell you honestly that no better film could have been chosen to launch Gravet's American career.

Gravet was well like around the Warner lot when he was making the picture. He has a great deal of charm, as we said before, and is a very appealing fellow. He stands five feet 11 inches tall and weighs 145 pounds, and, as the lady fans will notice, he has fine, broad shoulders. He has a nice smile and coal black hair, and, again, according to his publicity men, his light brown eyes change color with his moods. We cannot vouch for the truth of this statement because we have never seen his eyes change color. Perhaps that was because Gravet was always in the same mood when we talked to him.

Gravet is something of an athlete. He rides a good deal and plays a bit of tennis and a dash of cricket. His hobby, as we mentioned, is making toy soldiers. He has more than 20,000 soldiers of all European nations in his Paris home. Says there are about 20 men in the world with the same hobby and that they trade miniatures from time to time.

Don't get the idea from this that he is childish. He is a very manly, intelligent fellow—one of the most intelligent and manly young gentlemen who have come this way, in recent years. This toy soldier business grew out of his two years in the army. And it is a good deal better—and much more profitable—than collecting empty whisky bottles, old willow canes or match cases.

New Accessories

If your sports bracelet resembles a dog collar and is matched by a novelty belt, then your accessories are in keeping with the latest trend of style.

Gold colored metal is being allied with natural calfskin to fashion the newest bracelets and belts. The metal takes the form of heavy gold beads that are flanked by leather bands. Braided leather is combined with gold links in the designing of other bracelets and belts. Besides the natural calfskin, blue and red leathers are assembled with metal. Long bar pins to be worn on the breast pocket of a jacket or at the neckline of a tailored blouse are shown in matching colors and designs.

Beverage Glasses.

Designers of beverage glasses continue to improve on their theory that the person who asks for refills soon has difficulty in identifying his own glass. The latest invention, taking the place of numbers, color varieties and other means of identification, is the glass which has a frosted strip upon which each guest's name is to be written. The writing is easily erased so each guest list gets the same special service and attention.

Bright Tie-Backs.

Instead of using the ruffled tie-backs which come with ruffled curtains, many home decorators are substituting tie-backs of colored cord or of ruffled chintz. The substitution is made most often when the curtains are used without accompanying draperies as the bright tie-backs provide a pleasing color accent.

Never A Dull Moment

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD, March 27.

NEVER a dull moment, riding about this town. You don't need a map to tell you this is Hollywood; the commercial signs do that.

The movies, overlord of local industries and indirectly responsible for many, lay their ballyhooing fingers on the signboards of business enterprise. From real estate to sandwiches, the movie touch creeps in.

You too can be beautiful. You too can learn to act. You too can dance like Fred Astaire. You too can make your fortune on the air. Why not be a writer? Why not design sets for pictures? Design clothes? Acting—and implied stardom—taught reasonably. You too can write song hits—and have hair as slick as Raft's, curly as Temple's, blonde as West's.

—o-o—

MAKE YOU OWN voice tests. . . Let us photograph you as the stars are photographed. . . . Learn the stars' make-up secrets. . . . The drink of the stars! . . . The food of the stars! . . . Spiritualists, swamis, seers. . . . "Rev. Violet Greener, the Ghost of Hollywood." . . . Little theaters. . . . Voice coaches. . . . Beauty shops, salons, shoppes. . . . Ah, the shoppes! . . . And a pawn shop, one lonely pawn shop, on a side street of beauty-drunk, success-drunk, movie-drunk Hollywood.

—o-o—

"Personal Guides to the Movie Stars' Homes." . . . Buy your piece of the Good Earth. . . . (Bob Whitworth, a loquacious, learned realtor, had lined the valley roads with that invitation long before the film came out.) . . . The Toluca Lake subdivision, home of W. C. Fields, Mary Brian, Mary Astor, Bing Crosby et al., challenges the passerby thus: "If you can't hitch your wagon to a star, live near one!"

—o-o—

● AND REAL ESTATE goes in for screen credit with this one: "La Cienega Professional Building. . . . an original idea by Claude Binyon." . . . Binyon's a screen writer, which explains that. . . . Wilshire boulevard is the "Fifth Avenue of the West." . . . And Hollywood boulevard the "style center of the world" . . . where women shoppers in slacks, and hair done up in curlers as likely as not, promenade their pet pooches. . . . Dog and cat hospital. . . . Was there ever a town with so many? . . .

You are invited to meet and eat with the stars, to dine and dance with the stars, to "rendezvous with the stars" at cocktail time. . . . And (page the ghost of Ziegfeld!) a new open-air barbecue heralded itself as "glorifying the American sandwich." . . .

This one has nothing to do with pictures but I like it anyway: a laundry proclaiming "we wash everything but the baby" . . . (and probably leaving that to the Hays office) . . . One of the most noted signs about town is that of Read & Wright (realtors, not producers). . .

Put 'em all together and they don't make sense . . . but they do make Hollywood.

—o-o—

Except that the basic idea is the same, you won't recognize "Swing High, Swing Low" as a new version of the old stage hit, "Burlesque."

When the late Hal Skelly did it on stage and screen (they retitled it "The Dance of Life"), he played a shiftless hoofer inspired to success by his love of Bonnie, the girl. She left him and he succumbed to his natural urge to bumhood until she returned for the regeneration act.

—o-o—

● THE NEW TREATMENT makes Fred MacMurray the same amiable, shiftless character, his talent trumpet tooting instead of hoofing. Carole Lombard is the girl (retitled Maggie) and she is the same loyal, straight-shooting fellow Bonnie was. But the setting is the Canal Zone instead of the burleycue halls, and Maggie sends her man to New York fame from a honky-tonk. Dorothy Lamour is the seductress.

Brightness of dialogue and situation, plus a jazz-symphonic musical score of distinction, plus Charlie Butterworth and Jean Dixon, make it all entertaining. Carole carols a couple of times, but don't mind that—her acting, and MacMurray's, too, is better. And Mitchell Leisen gives his direction that certain swing.

GARBO HAVING LOVED Robert Taylor in "Camille," she resigned that duty to Jean Harlow, who takes over in "Personal Property." This is another remake, which you'll have no difficulty in spotting as "The Man in Possession," one of Robert Montgomery's early talkies. This is drawing room stuff, occasionally rowdy, about the debt-ridden American girl engaged, for his money, to the stuffy Englishman marrying her for hers. Taylor is the scapegrace kid brother who steps in and saves the girl for himself.

Good for scattered laughs, "Personal Property" leans toward the thin side but it gives Harlow fans a chance to hold their heads up in the presence of Garbo, Crawford and Stanwyck addicts. She can notch her lipstick in token of having loved Robert Taylor, too.

You can't overlook Reginald Owen, Una O'Connor, E. E. Clive, Cora Witherspoon, or Maria Shelton, the new vamp.

BELLE OF BURLESQUE

Gypsy Rose Lee—From Minsky's to Follies to the Movies

By Virginia Irwin

GYPSY ROSE LEE.

WHEN Gypsy Rose Lee, the belle of burlesque, signed a contract with the Messrs. Shubert to appear in the Ziegfeld Follies of 1937 at one-third the money she was pulling down at the Irving Place Burlesque palace in New York, her friends suspected her of losing her mind.

"Look, Gypsy," they pleaded, "you're nuts. You give benefit performances for unemployed school teachers. You're a mark for anybody who wants you to give a show to raise money for a fund to give newsboys a vacation in New Zealand. In the name of sweet charity you donate your services to the Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Cannibals. You're a sucker for charity and it's swell, but the Ziegfeld Follies isn't a charitable institution."

To all of which the georgous Gypsy replied, "Yeah? Well, think of the prestige," and hied herself off to rehearsals.

"I'd have carried a spear in the back line, or led the orchestra or emptied the garbage if they'd asked me to," Gypsy laughed over a double Manhattan during a midnight interview in her hotel apartment.

And Gypsy meant it. She's no lamebrain when it comes to figuring angles, as witness the fact that her fling at the Follies has already netted her a three-picture contract with Twentieth Century-Fox. And after the three talkies are made, Gypsy will probably do another Follies.

In the Follies of 1937 the patrons will be treated to a glimpse of Gypsy in 10 different get-ups. In the beginning, when she deserted burlesque for the more fashionable Follies, she hadn't expected to do much besides her own number, but by the time the programs were printed, she was also doing nine sketches.

"That's what I get for being a smart-aleck," Gypsy apologized. "I feel rather badly about it sometimes because I think maybe I'm keeping somebody else out of work, but when we were rehearsing the show and somebody scheduled for a part in a sketch failed to show up, I'd offer to pinch hit for them and the first thing you know I was playing Fannie Brice's mother in the 'Baby Snooks' number and the nurse in 'The Doctor's Dilemma' sketch—and, well anyway, before long I had 10 appearances in all."

GYPSY'S flair for comedy was something of a surprise to the big boys of the theater, who had always supposed that her talents were suitable only for burlesque. Until she tied up with the Shuberts she could never convince anybody that she could handle a speaking part, and until her Follies debut, the only words she ever uttered on a stage—outside of slightly risque songs—consisted of "Aw, nuts," which magnificent speech she was permitted to make in a "Scandals" show.

Gypsy's climb to the Follies sounds like a movie script writer's nightmare. It is one of those it-at-first-you-don't-succeed-etc., stories. Her real name is Rose Louise Hovick and she has been on the stage practically since she quit taking her milk out of a bottle and started drinking it out of a teacup. She was born in Seattle and started trouping at the age of four in a vaudeville act run by her mother. The act was built around Gypsy's baby sister, June, and little June was the star of the piece, while nobody paid much attention to big sister Gypsy. There were bookings aplenty and the Hovicks did right well, thank you, for quite a few years. Then June, the darling of the family, celebrated her thirteenth birthday by marrying a doddering old tap dancer of 22. Mama Hovick tore her hair when the news leaked out and treated June with a sound spanking, so June and her new spouse left the State and the act was without a star. And then, just to make matters worse, Mrs. Hovick, who always carried the family bankroll with her because she had no faith in banks, went off and left the entire Hovick fortune on the lunch counter of a hamburger stand.

"We finally borrowed enough to get back to Seattle, where mama promptly went about building up a new act," Gypsy sighed. "And this time I was the star. The act was called 'Rose Louise and her Newsboy Songsters,' and it was lousy. Next we tried barnstorming with a thing called 'Rose Louise and Her Hollywood Blondes,' and we played towns that weren't even on the map. We even got down into Old Mexico a couple of times, but we never managed to arrive when they weren't having a revolution. The last time we hit one of those Mexican revolutions, mama gave up and we all went to Miami, where we discovered that we were once more out of bookings and out of cash."

In Miami the Hovick troupe managed to snare a couple of meals by working in a night club and there Mrs. Hovick signed a contract with the manager of a Kansas City theater, but when the gang arrived in Kansas City ready for work, she took one look at the sign outside the theater and promptly came down with a case of the vapors.

"Burlesque!" she snorted. "We don't go on until that sign comes down."

"Lady," replied the proprietor, "you can do as you please. The sign stays."

Mrs. Hovick was about to argue the matter further when she remembered that her troupe had been eating somewhat irregularly of late, so she gave in and daughter Rose Louise was introduced to burlesque. At the end of the first month she was a star, drawing down $350 a week, and from then on Gypsy was worrying about income tax instead of whether she could afford a hot dog.

"Everything was going along smoothly," Gypsy went on. "I was making big dough but then I quit burlesque to go into the chorus of Ziegfeld's Hot-Cha. The salary was pin money compared to what I had been getting, but fortunately the show didn't last long. When it closed I went back to burlesque in New York."

—o-o—

WITH the barons of burlesque, the Brothers Minsky, Gypsy climbed back to a big salary and bought herself a home on Long Island. And incidentally, it was the Messrs. Minsky who tagged her "Gypsy Rose Lee" and started her on the road to a national reputation. But just when Gypsy was getting back on her financial feet, she took a notion to have another fling at the legitimate stage and ended up broke once more.

"I've quit burlesque three times for the legitimate theater," says Gypsy, "but I've always gone back and each time I've had to go back for less money and work up again. When I quit the Minskys the first time, I lost my house and had to hock my diamonds, but I love the gamble. I think that's the trouble with most people; they're afraid to take a chance. I never was."

After her second sad experience with the legit, Gypsy went back to Minskys and from there to a 52-weeks schedule at the Irving place at a salary of $1000 a week—sometimes more, never less, depending on extra shows. And it was while she was playing at the Irving Place that Gypsy became the darling of smart society. It was discovered that the belle of burlesque, although her finishing school days were spent entertaining the yahoos of the tank towns, had plenty above the ears besides a good head of dark brown hair. She knew her music and her art and her literature and she could handle a fork at the swankiest dinner table in New York.

Some of the dough that Gypsy made while pulling down the thousand-per salary at the Irving Place is invested in a big, rambling old house on the Hudson River, to which she will retire at the age of 30, unless she can convince some theatrical producer in the meantime to consider her as serious actress.

"Maybe I'll be another Duse, some day," Gypsy laughed. "You never can tell, but as far as my act goes, I'm through with that at 30."

Since the day Gypsy Rose Lee started in burlesque back in Kansas City, she has played all over the United States. St. Louis burlesque fans have seen her at the Garrick and now the American customers will see her in the Follies. When Gypsy signed with the Follies, she didn't expect to be taken out of New York. She doesn't like getting too far away from the big old house on the Hudson River where she keeps her dachshunds, a cat, a monkey, a marmoset and her flock of Plymouth Rock chickens.

"I love the old place," says Gypsy. "It has a library with a fireplace that really draws and while the house itself is no beauty—sort of a combination adobe-Georgian-Tudor-what-not affair—the view is grand. I can see 13 miles from my bedroom window and the altitude is higher than the Harriman's. I can at least be snooty on that point."

When Gypsy talks of her possessions—her big home and her elegant collection of diamonds, all bought with the money she has made in burlesque—she remembers the first stage director who ever suggested she might look better on the stage in a few less pieces of clothing. The man who made the suggestion was Earl Carroll and Gypsy was just 16 at the time. Outraged at Carroll's effrontery, Gypsy quit the "Vanities," after telling Carroll just what she thought of him and went back to her mother's vaudeville act.

GYPSY'S name has been linked with practically every unmarried man in New York. Diplomat, dishwasher or desk slave, all a man has to do to get himself cited by the columnists is to hold her coat or open a door for her and he is reported shopping for a solitaire. But Gypsy insists that it will be a long time before she goes in for a tulle veil and orange blossoms.

"I don't know where some of the stuff comes from they print about me," she laughed. "In one story I was supposed to have said that my ambition was to get married and have quintuplets like Mrs. Dionne. I think the idea is swell, but I never said I wanted five kids. Some day I want to marry and raise a family, but right now I'm much too occupied with a career."

As for the three talkies she will make in Hollywood this summer, Gypsy says she still can't believe that she is to be in the movies. But things have happened fast in the last few years. The little girl who once played fourth rate towns in a third rate vaudeville act has grown up to be the toast of Broadway and the sweetheart of smart society. She has a country home, an apartment in town, a maid, a chauffeur, a cook, and a safe full of diamonds, but she hasn't grown high hat with success. She admits that the Follies has given her a certain prestige, but she still loves burlesque. And she's too modest to admit that her personality has anything to do with the fact that she's practically a riot in the Follies. She insists, that the reason the boiled-shirt crowd buy up the seats is because she is still a curiosity outside of burlesque.

Ways to Help Remove Lines From Forehead

Regular, Vigorous Massage Treatments Are Most Effective.

By Helen Jameson

BANGS and curly fringes are a blessing to the woman with the furrowed brow. They are silky valances that give her the youthful flair, curtain the cutaneous seams. Of course, she should never have permitted herself to get crinkles in her face. The feminine countenance is no place for accordion pleats. They come on the forehead because she does the surprise act and lifts her eyebrows. Or because she shows irritation and vexation—maybe gets mad as a hornet—and pulls her eyebrows together, producing twin irrigation ditches between her eyes.

Let us say the damage has been done, and goodness knows she feels bad enough about it. We'll urge her to fare forth and purchase a jar of massage cream. It's no good relying upon her favorite cold cream, which is of such light consistency that it cannot put up resistance so that the fingers will burrow down into underlying tissues and tone them.

ALL MASSAGE treatments begin with a clean skin surface. The warm soapy tubbing is best. The rinsing must be with warm water. A warm skin has a zestful appetite for oil.

Don't be sparing with the cream. If you work long enough you'll get rid of it all. The doctors say there's no such thing as a skin food, but nevertheless the flesh seems to feed upon it. You can put on slathers of oil at night and in the morning it is gone. What has become of it?

Here's a grand movement that treats vertical lines between the eyes and horizontal ones above them:

Place the second finger of each hand at the top of the nose between the eyes, finger-tips touching. Smooth the flesh upward. When you reach a crosswise crease, go trekking along that onto the temples, where you must do two or three quick little circles and jump back to the starting point.

This is the favorite movement of many a facial operator. Let the first half dozen strokes be fairly deep, the next six lighter.

WHEN FROWNS are deep, hold the flesh flat with the fingers of the left hand, do rotary motions with the second finger of the right hand, following with a gentle crosswise movement with both second fingers, one going east when the other one scoots west.

Don't overlook the beneficial effects of cold applications. Wrap an ice cube in two thicknesses of gauze. Rub the cube up and down. While you're at it, go over the cheeks, chin and neck even if there are no lines apparent. They may be on the way, one never knows. Ice makes the blood streams hop, skip and jump. Busy blood streams give the complexion a good color, build for fine texture.

"Sleek Little Caps"

BRIMMED hats are meeting with competition from those sleek little caps which defy March winds, no matter how hard they may blow. To be extremely chic, the cap should fit as snugly on the head as comfort will permit and be pushed well back from the forehead. Any type of novel trimming adds to its attractiveness, whether this be a bright flower posed at the center front, a feather stuck crosswise at the top or a cluster of tassels dangling at one side.

Tomatoes and mushrooms may seem like an odd combination but the alliance is a tasty one. Fill unpeeled tomato shells with creamed mushrooms and bake until tender, adding seasoning such as salt, butter and sugar according to your taste.

Highest-Priced Star Doesn't Know Salary

But Gracie Fields Takes in Something Around a Million a Year, Her Manager Says.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 27. GRACIE FIELDS, English actress, has no idea how much she earns, how much she spends or how much she has.

So she says.

The biggest player's salary in Hollywood (probably Mae West's; roughly $300,000 a year), is dwarfed by that of Miss Fields, according to her producer-director-manager, Monty Banks, who says she averages between $800,000 and $1,000,000 a year. Her position in the theaters of the British empire is unapproached and unchallenged by any other stars of any other country, Banks said.

Miss Fields came to Hollywood several days ago for her debut in an American-made picture. She lolled on the beach—a public beach—at Santa Monica and talked, somewhat shyly, about the amazing Gracie Fields.

She said she is 37 years old, the daughter of "ordinary folk" in the Lancashire mill section, and that she went into the theater, as a child, without much enthusiasm. "I didn't want to go to work in the mills," she said. "Not that I'd have minded that, in itself. But I'd have had to be up every morning at 4 o'clock and that seemed a bit too much. So I went on the stage."

Her surprising career developed slowly, she said. As a matter of fact, the flood-tide of it began only five years ago, when she was 32—long after the average American actress makes a start.

"As for the money part of it, I really don't know anything about it. My mother and my lawyer do everything. I get a little spending money for myself, and I have some charge accounts at the stores in London.

"But I've never seen any of my checks. I don't know how much I earn or how much my income tax is, or anything of the sort. It doesn't matter, does it, as long as one has enough to do with?"

That, she said, was about all there was to say about herself.

Monty Banks, once well-known on the American screen as a comedian, said there was a great deal more. He said she owns not a single piece of jewelry, but has a fur coat which she wears only when photographers are likely to be around. As a testimonial, an English city gave her a resplendent limousine.

"She scratched her name off, auctioned the car, and gave the money to charity," Banks said.

Most of her spare time and much of her money, he continued, is turned over to charity.

"And she told you about her pocket-money, did she? Did she say how much it is? She gets $25 a week to go on."

He said that when she makes a personal appearance tour, every seat is booked weeks before she starts.

Banks said that when he told her she was going to the United States, joining 20th Century-Fox Studios, and told her the staggering salary in her contract, she replied: "It's much too much. Suppose the Americans don't like me, then what? It isn't fair!"

THE ZIEGFELD FOLLIES OF 1937

BOBBY CLARK, AS HE APPEARS IN PERSON AT THE AMERICAN.

'Follies' Brings Brice, Clark And Big Company to American

1937 Edition, Which Began in 1936, Arrives Tonight

AFTER the greater part of a year in New York, 12 weeks in Chicago and scattered engagements in other cities, the "Ziegfeld Follies of 1937" comes to the American Theater tonight. The top stars are Fannie Brice, comedienne of long experience in the "Follies," and Bobby Clark, of the one-time team of Clark and McCullough.

Billed with these two are Jane Pickens of the radio, Gypsy Rose Lee of the burlesque halls, Ruth Harrison and Alex Fisher, Cherry and June Preisser, Stan Kavanagh, Cass Daley, Hugh Cameron, Marvin Lawler, James Farrell and Ben Yost's Varsity Eight, some of whom were in the last "Follies," at the Auditorium Opera House in the autumn of 1934.

Like its latest predecessor, this edition is work of the Shuberts, under sponsorship of Billie Burke Ziegfeld, widow of the great impresario. It boasts of a total company of more than 125 persons, 23 settings by Vincente Minnelli, songs by Vernon Duke and Ira Gershwin, sketches by a variety of authors. John Murray Anderson takes credit for staging the entire production.

Miss Brice, somewhat of a "Follies" cornerstone by virtue of her appearances in editions of 1911, 1916, 1917, 1920, 1923 and 1934, comes back with a repertory that includes a new "Baby Snooks"; a satire on the dance art, under title of "Modernistic Moe," and a new song with the devoted refrain of "It's a Rat I Adore." Renewing a stage acquaintance with Bobby Clark that goes back to the "Music Box Revue" of 1925, she is paired with him in several sketches.

Clark, without his late vaudeville partner for the first time in 30 years, also teams up with Gypsy Rose Lee, whose "strip-tease" act is not her only ability, and with Hugh Cameron. Far from the usual habit of revues in presenting dramatized smoking room jokes, the current "Follies" adds a number of ambitious burlesques of current stage hits and satires on political affairs. One of Clark's top numbers, for instance, is that in which he represents a Harry Hopkins lieutenant in Washington.

The cast here is one that played on Broadway up to the Christmas holidays but is not, in all respects, the one that was present at the opening on Jan. 30, 1936. Josephine Baker, Bob Hope, Gertrude Niesen, Hugh O'Connell and Harriet Hoctor are some of those who, for one reason and another, are no longer with the revue and have been replaced.

Next after the "Follies" at the American is the Theater Guild play, "Idiot's Delight," on which Robert E. Sherwood won last year's Pulitzer Prize. Alfred Lunt, Lynn Fontanne and their entire original cast will be seen for one week beginning Monday night, April 5.

With 300 performances to its credit and still ranking among the top commodities on Broadway when it was withdrawn, "Idiot's Delight" was started on a coast-to-coast tour at the height of its success. The Lunts and the Theater Guild have long been firm believers in a policy of developing the road demand and left New York mainly for that reason. The play has been sold to a motion picture studio, but production plans are set far ahead.

The theme deals with the imminence of another European war, between Italy and France. At a mountain hotel in the path of the conflict is an odd group of characters, an American vaudeville performer (Lunt) who is barnstorming Europe with a troupe of blondes; a pseudo-Russian Princess (Miss Fontanne), a wild-eyed worker for world peace, a German scientist, two English honeymooners, a rich munitions maker, a group of officers. And, of course, the blonde darlings themselves.

"Idiot's Delight" will be followed on April 12 by "Reflected Glory," starring Tallulah Bankhead, a backstage comedy by George Kelly that burst forth in San Francisco originally, moved to Los Angeles and went on to New York for four months. Clay Clements, Ann Andrews and Philip Reed are supporting players.

On April 19, and two days thereafter, Ruth Draper presents her internationally famous character sketches. Then comes the Frank Capra picture, "Lost Horizon," and perhaps the end of the season. At least, Katharine Cornell again is traveling no nearer than Chicago.

JANE PICKENS, OF PICKENS SISTERS, WELL-KNOWN ON THE AIR.

'Maytime' Mixes With The Opera Career Plot

By Colvin McPherson.

A SENTIMENTAL journey through the repertory of opera is taken at Loew's this week, under the billing of "Maytime." Most welcome as a musical program for Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, shining reproduction of the gay life of the last century, distinguished by John Barrymore's performance, it still isn't the "Maytime" of fond recollection. So let all whose expectations run in that direction be warned.

Although the screen credits say plainly that this is based on the play by Rida Johnson Young, "Maytime" no longer considers the three or four generation love of Otillie Van Zandt and Richard Wayne, those smitten New Yorkers who buried verses under the old apple tree. Rather this "Maytime" recollects the romance of an opera singer whose handsome young lover was shot to death in his prime, leaving only a song, "Will You Remember?" This story owes its paternity more to "Bitter Sweet," "Smilin' Through" or any of the other operettas in which two adoring ghosts go walking away through the garden at the finish. It has been great stuff, theatrically, for years. Too many years, I am afraid.

For vocal repertory, "Maytime", this one, has hardly been surpassed among screen musicals. To its theme song, "Will You Remember?" by a fellow named Romberg, are added lengthy excerpts from Meyerbeer's "Les Huguenots", a Herbert Stothart opus based on Tschaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, Italian folk songs such as "Santa Lucia", "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny", Delibes' "Les Filles de Cadiz" and in jest or seriousness, scrambled bits from nearly all the standard operatic works of the French or Italian schools. These song selections are "Maytime's" reasons for being. Miss MacDonald's voice has been recorded with great clarity and seems less shrill than on several former occasions. Eddy is about what he was at the Auditorium Opera House last month, with even longer golden locks. John Barrymore, as the artistic Svengali who trains Miss MacDonald and puts a bullet into Mr. Eddy, infuses strength in a role that might easily have fallen to pieces.

Settings of the Court of Louis Napoleon, where Miss MacDonald first sings, opera houses of the candlelight days, garrets of the Latin Quarter, suites in plush hotels all make for expensive entertainment and a great many sights. Several sequences, in the month of May, are pinked up with a film dye to intensify the atmosphere of spring, granting that spring is pink. And even the picket fences are covered with petals as the mating season comes 'round again.

Simplicity and delicacy are, therefore, not among the picture's charms. And hearty comedy, such as there was in "Naughty Marietta", is not woven in, either. But any production that can bring about the net result of inducing Lynne Carver to give up an operatic career for Tom Brown must be accounted strong enough, in every way. And "Maytime", this time, does that.

Quality Street.

THE combination of Katharine Hepburn, Director George Stevens (they worked together on "Alice Adams") and Sir James M. Barrie gives the Ambassador a tinkling, pretty comedy for Easter week. And an entirely trustworthy movie transcription, too, for few liberties have been taken with the Barrie manuscript. Miss Phoebe and Miss Susan Throssel, and their flat-footed old maid friends, live in their odd little community and spy on each other's visitors. The handsome Valentine Brown comes to woo Miss Phoebe but goes away to the wars and does not return for 10 years. Miss Phoebe engages in her deceptive flirtation with him and the same solution that Barrie came to is reached again, even to the kiss for Susan.

Katharine Hepburn, anybody knows, simply loves to do this kind of thing, where she can have tears in her eyes more than half the time, toss her head about coquettishly and chatter away in the manner that makes her such an easy mark for the impersonators. (The gal on Thursday's Rudy Vallee program did a swell job of it, didn't she, by the way?) But the total performance is much more than that. Miss Hepburn's Phoebe Throssel may be ranked with her portrayals in "Little Women" or "Morning Glory" or "Bill of Divorcement."

Fay Bainter, Los Angeles-born stage actress, has returned to her home town in glory as Miss Susan. Those who see "Quality Street" this week and "The Soldier and the Lady" next will be treated to widely separated examples of her ability. In the two of them she seems to be already one of the screen sensations of 1937.

Under Stevens' sensitive direction, all the biddies of "Quality Street" appear natural and human. Even Franchot Tone as Dr. Brown, will be liked more than usually. A few variations from the play, in that the Misses Throssel don't lose their money and Franchot doesn't lose an arm, are not begrudged and the added ballroom dancing is indeed fit elaboration.

"Head Over Heels in Love," the Jessie Matthews picture on the same program, inventories her accomplishments in singing, dancing, clowning and romancing, but is definitely less amusing than her previous films. Sonnie Hale, who directed, might well have been in his usual place in front of the camera, instead of behind it, for the hysterical comedy he has contributed to his wife's previous pictures is missed, and missed badly.

The main interest is in two new foreign actors. Robert Flemyng, suggesting Buster Keaton but taller, gets the girl and probably has, or will get, a Hollywood contract. Louis Borell, the loser in "Head Over Heels in Love," is already in Hollywood.

Seventh Heaven.

THAT hallowed Gaynor-Farrell experience of the late Twenties, in which the World War was made spiritual and spirituality whimsical, is back with us, at the Fox. James Stewart as Chico, the French sewer man, Simone Simon as the darling picked up on the street. Even the well-remembered theme song, "Diane," without which "Seventh Heaven" wouldn't somehow be the same, is threaded into the musical score. Whether the public will like "Seventh Heaven" now or not, I couldn't say. Some didn't like it awfully well before, and certainly the passage of time, depression and drouth has stilled some of the interest in it. Paris looks the same, but Paris always does.

As Chico, atheist who became believer in both God and woman, Stewart does good work. It is his first starring role and will not be his last. Yet I don't think he has any comprehension of the Chico of real life. Buddy Ebsen, Stuart Erwin or half a dozen others would have given the same interpretation. Chico, as Stewart plays him, simply isn't French, isn't even slum type. He's typical Hoosier and from first to last there's not much to be done about it.

The lanky James has aroused some excitement on the Hollywood boulevards, they tell us, for "Seventh Heaven" and if that be true, he deserves it. But even delighting in him, audiences will know that he's only doing an artful job of pretending, that he's really a very keen fellow who happens to look gawky.

Simone Simon, as Diane, loses all her spitfire and man-nabbing characteristics, to become a soulful and occasionally radiant child bride. For one of her volatility, she, too, is miscast.

"Girl Overboard," the Fox's bargain film, demonstrates again that the way to get ahead in this life is to make the right connections. With a murder charge hanging over her blonde head, Gloria Stuart has the luck to rescue the District Attorney's little boy from fire on an ocean liner, and is already at first base before the pitcher winds up. The liner, ("S. S. Paradise") burns up again in "Sea Devils" at the Missouri, so one takes his chances at either place.

Sea Devils.

THE Missouri's main feature, with more of marine excitement, introduces the Coast Guard to the taxpayers, and if Victor McLaglen's, and Preston Foster's, duties are for the service generally, those who foot the bill may be well satisfied. For it is nothing to McLaglen and Foster to save the passengers of a burning boat, blow up icebergs that threaten ships or bring in the passengers and crew of a hurricane-stricken yacht.

Victor and Preston don't get along together, however, and that's the fun of "Sea Devils." For its rough humor is good humor, its brawls bloody and its fighting all in good spirit. Ida Lupino, McLaglen's daughter and Foster's ideal, is the girl and cause of the trouble.

Seconding "Sea Devils" is "Park Avenue Logger," wherein George O'Brien leaves Park avenue for the lumber camps of the Northwest. More muscle-work. "The March of Time," newest issue, deals with the progress of ratification of the child labor amendment, the voodoo societies in Harlem and the souvenir trade for the English Coronation.

The St. Louis Theater stage show, accompanying the second-run film, "Love Is News," has little to offer in the way of novelty other than one of the Roxyettes' numbers, in which nine ladies of the ensemble balance themselves on top of huge spheres and maneuver about. Until one falls off, it's great sport for the audience and gets much applause.

Thyrsus Production

Philip Barry's play, "Spring Dance," will be presented on Wednesday and Thursday evenings in Brown Auditorium, Washington University, by Thyrsus, the university dramatic society. The plot centers about the efforts of a group of girls to win for one of their number a young man who thinks he ought to give up romance, and go to great adventures in Russia. Principal players are Dorothy Dittman, Joe Schertz, Dolores Pitts, Gene Beare and Jack Weaver.

SYDNEY BUSCH, IN THE LITTLE THEATER'S "CELESTIAL HOLIDAY."

Little Theater's 'Celestial Holiday' Tomorrow Night

THE Little Theater's prize play of 1936, "Celestial Holiday," will have its premiere performance at the Union boulevard playhouse tomorrow evening, initiating a two weeks' run. The author, Arthur Sherwood of New York, who received a $250 prize in the competition, will be unable to attend the opening but will be present on Friday and Saturday evenings of this week.

"Celestial Holiday" combines the satirical and imaginative, fantastically placing a modern political upheaval in a South American city of 1500 B. C. Sherwood's description of the play is that of a "romantic comedy that will be good, I hope, for at least a chuckle or two; it aspires no higher."

"But running through it and supplying its climax," Sherwood adds, "is a sincere attempt to limn the evils of temporal power and to show what can happen when an individual or clique gets too much of it." Production at a time when the Supreme Court controversy is at its height gives the play, according to the author, a "timeliness far beyond my expectations when I wrote it in 1935."

For purposes of plot, a young goddess, Thea, leaves her heavenly realm to spend a brief time on earth. She meets and falls in love with a young political leader, Ramnes, but finds an earth maiden, Nakahna, is not going to give him up without a fight. When Thea's aid to Ramnes has brought up an amazing number of complications, Thea is called back to the heavens and human affairs go on in their own way.

Sydney Busch takes the role of Thea, William Wahlert is Ramnes and Harriet Foote, Nakahna. Bruce MacFarlane, Mary Alice Hart, John Dawson, Kent Adams and Stanley Schirmer are other leading players. F. Cowles Strickland directed, Gordon Carter created the single exterior set and Margaret Bishop Breen designed the costumes.

Sherwood, who submitted "Celestial Holiday" under the name of Whitney Crozier, is a brother of Robert E. Sherwood, whose Pulitzer prize play, "Idiot's Delight," comes to the American a week from tomorrow night. Arthur Sherwood has been associate editor of Life and motion picture editor of the Outlook, and has written articles, criticism and verse for other magazines and newspapers.

Negro Singers to Give "Elijah" on April 16

Four leading Negro singers and a chorus of 200 voices will be heard in a presentation of Handel's "Elijah" at the Auditorium Opera House Friday, April 16, under the direction of C. Spencer Tocus, director of music at Vashon High School and of the Celestial Choristers.

The soloists are Todd Duncan, baritone, and Anne Wiggins Brown, soprano, who took the leads in George Gershwin's folk-opera, "Porgy and Bess," on Broadway last season; Alexander Gatewood, tenor, and Louise Burge, contralto. Duncan, who is professor of voice and head of the public school music department of Howard University, has sung with the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra and many times on the concert stage. Miss Brown, a graduate of the Juilliard Graduate School of Music, has been heard on radio programs and in concert. Gatewood is a graduate of Kansas University and a scholarship winner at the Juilliard School, Miss Burge a graduate of Howard and a student at Juilliard.

The local chorus is being built around the Celestial Choristers and leading Negro singing organizations in St. Louis and East St. Louis. An orchestra made up of leading players in the St. Louis Symphony will assist in presentation of the oratorio, which is sponsored by the Cosmopolitan Fine Arts Association.

Symphony to South On Two-Weeks' Tour

The St. Louis Symphony Orchestra departs tonight on its third and final tour of the season, through 13 cities of the South. The entire organization of 90 players, with Conductor Vladimir Golschmann and Manager Arthur J. Gaines, is making the trip.

Beginning with a concert at Memphis, Tenn., tomorrow night, the schedule of the trip is: Tuesday, Birmingham, Ala.; Wednesday, two concerts at Atlanta, Ga.; Thursday, Savannah; Friday, Montgomery, Ala.; Saturday, Columbus, Miss.; Monday, April 5, New Orleans, two concerts; April 6, Houston, Tex.; April 7, San Antonio, two concerts; April 8, Waco; April 9, Dallas; April 10, Denton, Tex. The final appearance is at Fort Worth on Sunday, April 11.

Brahms' First Symphony and the Tschaikowsky Fourth are the major works to be played, with Bach's Toccata in D Minor, Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's "Schwanda," Prelude to Wagner's "Lohengrin," Overture to Wagner's "Tannhauser," Overture to Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla," excerpts from Stravinsky's "The Fire-Bird," three dances from De Falla's ballet "The Three-Cornered Hat," Tschaikowsky's Overture-Fantasia, "Romeo and Juliet," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," and Strauss' Tone Poem "Till Eulenspiegel."

Albert Spalding, violinist, will be soloist at Atlanta and Savannah. Children's programs will be given at the matinees in New Orleans and San Antonio, and a part of the evening program at San Antonio will be devoted to choral works.

High School Spelling Bee On Station KSD

Teams From St. Louis Schools to Compete on Saturdays for Cup.

BEGINNING April 3, for six Saturday afternoons, a spelling bee contest for teams representing the seven white high schools of St. Louis will be held in the studios of KSD and will be broadcast. The schools represented will be Beaumont, Blewett, Central, Cleevland, McKinley, Roosevelt and Soldan. A silver cup will be presented to the winning team. Next Saturday and April 10 the contest will be broadcast by KSD at 11:05 a. m. Thereafter the broadcasts will come at 2 p. m.

Each school will be represented by a team of 15 pupils and three alternates chosen in an elimination contest in the school.

The contest will be conducted according to the rules of the NBC spelling bees which have been broadcast by KSD for the past three months and have caused much favorable comment. In the first round of three Saturday afternoon contests, six of the school teams wil compete, two each week. The seventh team will draw a bye. In the second round, this seventh teams will compete, two each week, of the first round. From the second round, two winners will come to compete in the finals.

Because of the belief that such spelling bees are of educational merit, the contest on KSD is being planned with the permission and co-operation of the Superintendent of Instruction of the St. Louis Public Schools. The entire series will be conducted by a spelling master, who will be selected by the competing schools.

The two teams which will compete in the first broadcast of the series next Saturday afternoon will be announced as soon as the drawing has been made.

W9XPD Regularly Received in Germany

"IT IS possible to receive your high frequency station, W9XPD (31.6 megacycles) quite regularly here in Berlin," Hurst Hewell, an engineer, of Berlin, Germany, writes to KSD.

He enclosed a log of his reception of W9XPD, showing regular reception. He also wrote that W9XPD could be received from 8 a. m. St. Louis time as long as daylight covered the air route from this city to Germany. He has been receiving other United States ultra short-wave stations on ultra short waves up to 41.0 meg, but has gotten his best reception from W9XPD.

He uses a special short wave converter with a superheterodyne set which has an ignition noise suppressor.

His aerial, erected for television reception, is a 2.5-meter inverted cone with an artificial ground net mounted on a five-meter bamboo pole on the roof of his house, its height above ground being 25 meters. It functions as a vertical aerial.

Ray Noble to Lead Orchestra When Burns and Allen Go on KSD April 12—Ray Chandler Program to Shift to KSD April 10—Gladys Swarthout Will Change to Sunday on KSD April 4.

By J. L. S.

RAY NOBLE, who will be featured with his orchestra with Burns and Allen, when the comedians switch their program to KSD April 12 for a run at 7 o'clock Monday nights, came to this country in 1934 after winning recognition as Great Britain's leading song writer and "popular" orchestra director. He won a distinct success in network broadcasts. For some months, he and his orchestra have been doing movie work and making recordings and tours, broadcasting only occasionally. Although Noble is a graduate of Cambridge University and the son of a noted British surgeon, he has filed papers for citizenship in this country.

Beginning April 4, Gladys Swarthout's concerts, now scheduled Wednesday nights, will be broadcast on KSD from 9 to 9:30 o'clock Sunday nights. To make this possible, KFUO, which usually broadcasts from 9:15 to 10:15 Sunday nights, has contributed the 9:15-9:30 period, and will go on the air from 9:30 to 10:30 o'clock.

Ray Chandler's Rhythym programs, now on the CBS chain, will be shifted to KSD on April 10, and will be broadcast by KSD and the WEAF network Monday nights thereafter.

Opera Audition Finals on KSD This Afternoon

KSD'S Metropolitan Opera Auditions will be concluded at 2 o'clock this afternoon by the finals of the competition, which began 26 weeks ago and has presented 57 singers, chosen from more than 800 aspirants for careers at the "Met." Two of today's winners will be given contracts to sing at the Metropolitan Opera.

The finals contestants have been selected by the Opera Auditioning Committee—Edward Johnson, general manager of the "Met"; John Erskine, chairman of the Management Committee; Earle R. Lewis, treasurer; Edward Ziegler, assistant general manager, and Wilfred Pelletier, conductor. Last year's auditions winners, Arthur Carron and Anna Kaskas, have sung with success in Metropolitan Opera performances this season.

Chopin Music Drama.

FROM 1 to 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, a dramatic and musical production based on the life of Chopin, the composer, will be carried by the WEAF, WJZ nets and KSD. Written by Wilfred Rooke-Ley and Christopher Martin, it will trace Chopin's career from his birth near Warsaw Feb. 22, 1810, through his triumphs in Paris, Vienna and Munich to his tragic death in Paris at the age of 39 years. The program will replace Walter Damrosch's Music Hour.

Opera on KSD.

THE Metropolitan Opera Company's performance of "Das Rheingold" at Boston will be broadcast on KSD from 1 to 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon. The cast will include Freidrich Schoor, Rene Maison, Eduard Habich, Hans Clemens, Doris Doe, Karin Branzell, Emanuel List, Julius Huehn and Norman Condon. The conductor will be Arthur Bodanzky.

Rudy Vallee will act as master of ceremonies for a broadcast at 10:30 Saturday night on KSD of the annual program of the "Forty and Eight," of the American Legion.

RADIO GOSSIP

sumed Sept. 12 . . . The CBS network will send a crew of engineers and announcers with short wave apparatus to a place 225 miles north of Lima, Peru, to cover the eclipse of the sun on June 8 . . .

The Husbands and Wives program will be switched April 6 to 7 p. m. Tuesdays, an hour and a half earlier than now . . . Edgar Guest's last Welcome Valley program will be this week, but he will start a new "It Can Be Done" series at the same time the following Tuesday, April 6 . . . John R. King will be the announcer for Babe Ruth's twice-a-week series on the CBS net, starting April 14.

Reports are that Don Ameche of KSD's First Nighter, will head a show that will replace "Do You Want to Be An Actor" series some time this spring.

Airplane trips to the national parks—Yellowstone and Teton, Rocky Mountain and Estes, Zion and Bryce canyons, the Grand Canyon, Yosemite and Mount Ranier—will be the basis of a series at 2 p. m. Sundays on the WEAF net, starting April 25 . . .

ILLINOIS DEATHS IN JANUARY 8519, THE MOST SINCE 1929

Toll Increased by Influenza and Pneumonia, Health Director Jirka Says.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 27.—Public Health Director Frank J. Jirka said today influenza and pneumonia increased Illinois' January death toll to the highest figure for that month since 1929. Deaths in January totaled 8519, compared with 8116 in 1936 and 10,435 in 1929.

The report listed heart disease, whooping cough, tuberculosis, poliomyelitis and motor traffic accidents as other chief causes of death. The 152 deaths from motor vehicle accidents were below the five-year January average of 163, but above the 140 figure for 1936.

CHICAGO GREAT WESTERN AWARD AGREEMENT APPROVED

Company to Pay About $50,000 to Workers, Who Were Upheld by Adjustment Board.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Federal Judge Charles E. Woodward approved today a settlement between the trustees of the Chicago Great Western Railroad and representatives of five railway brotherhoods whereby the company agreed to pay about $50,000 to some of its employes.

The settlement was the result of an award made by the National Railway Adjustment Board and upheld by an emergency board set up by President Roosevelt.

Leo J. Hassenauer, attorney for the brotherhoods, said the settlement also provided that the trustees must comply with various provisions of the work contract.

Judge Woodward, before whom the board is being reorganized under section 77B of the amended bankruptcy law, recently instructed the road not to pay the award. Brotherhood officers threatened to call a strike and were in turn threatened with being held in contempt of court. Arbitration by the emergency board followed.

DEAN M'CLAIN MAKES PLEA FOR CHILD LABOR RESOLUTION

Says Failure to Ratify Will Give Social Reform Advocates Argument Against Amendments.

Failure to obtain ratification of the Child Labor Amendment by the necessary 36 states in the near future would give advocates of social reform by Congressional action additional argument against procedure by amendment, Dean J. A. McClain Jr. of the Washington University Law School said yesterday in urging ratification by the Missouri Legislature.

Such failure, Dean McClain said, "would give strength to the conviction held by many that the amending process is not a satisfactory method of obtaining enactment of legislation which the majority of people believe desirable."

The resolution for ratification of the amendment has been made a special order of business in the House of Representatives for 2 o'clock next Tuesday afternon.

20 TROOPS RESERVE TIME AT IRONDALE

Prepare for Two Weeks in Camp—Others to Go to Lion's Den.

More than 20 troops have made reservations for a two-week period of camping at Camp Irondale, operated throughout the summer by the St. Louis Council, Boy Scouts of America. Six other troops have signed for a six-day short term of camping at Lion's Den Camp.

The Council this year has rearranged its plans for the camps to allow more boys to avail themselves of the facilities. If troops so desire, they may rent cabins, tents, or ground space and furnish their own food and equipment. The new method is cheaper than the complete lodging and dining hall service, only type provided in the past.

No more applications will be taken after 5 p. m. Friday for the Campers' Savings Club of 1937, J. Lee Johnson, chairman of the camp committee, has announced. The savings club provides facilities for scouts to save money week by week for camp expenses.

Ten district commissioners, members of the district organization committees, and special representatives of Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant religions will meet next Saturday and Sunday at Lion's Den Camp to discuss methods of extending scout training to boys hitherto denied such instruction.

St. Louis scouts who go to Washington in June for the national jamboree to be held there will visit the Smithsonian Institution to see Col. Lindbergh's airplane, "The Spirit of St. Louis" in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of Lindbergh's flight to Paris.

Troop Notes.

Troop 38, which meets in the Bryan-Mullanphy School, 4221 Shaw boulevard, will celebrate its twentieth birthday this week. Alumni of the troop have been invited to all activities of the commemoration which includes a dinner Thursday at Hotel Saum, a regular troop meeting Friday, and an overnight hike Saturday and Sunday.

Boy scouts of 21 troops in Maplewood, Brentwood, Richmond Heights and Webster Groves have been invited to enter a bird house building contest sponsored by Oak Hill Cemetery and intended to provide bird houses for the cemetery. Prizes of $25, $10 and $5 will be awarded the winners next Sunday.

The Officers Club of Troop 116 will sponsor a prize masquerade dance to be held April 9 at 8 p. m. at the Pershing School, Bartmer and Ferguson avenues, University City.

Troop 305, Webster Groves Presbyterian Church, will go on a week-end hike Saturday and Sunday at Lion's Den Camp.

Courts of honor were held recently by Troop 17, First United Presbyterian Church; Troop 150, Scullen School; Troop 175; Troop 321, Kirkwood Junior High School; and Troop 272, Bethlehem Evangelical Lutheran Church.

T. F. Corpening is adult adviser of an explorer patrol recently organized by Troop 306, Lockwood School, Webster Groves. Scout Wilfed Winters is leader.

Girl Scouts.

Thirty-two former girl scouts interested in aquatic activities have been organized as the first Girl Scout Mariner Ship and are meeting each Wednesday at the First Congregational Church, Webster Groves.

At the meetings the girls study the tests necessary to qualify them as mariners. They must have ability to tie knots, knowledge of water crafts, and knowledge of a history of the troop ship. No name has as yet been selected for this first mariner group, but scout leaders have indicated it probably will be one of the old Mississippi River steamboats.

Mariners will practice canoeing and boating this summer in Forest Park. They will go to the Lake of the Ozarks for boating and sailing.

The initial venture of girl scouts with the marine field is being directed by Mrs. Carl Peters, formerly connected with girl scout work in Kalamazoo, Mich., and Miss Estelle Demeke, a member of the St. Louis staff.

The Trail Blazers, composed of former girl scouts who camped at the girl scout camp at Pevely will hold a reunion Saturday and Sunday at another camp known as the Riverledge and situated on the Mississippi River.

ROBERT FROST TO GET MEDAL FOR HIS POETRY TOMORROW

Presentation by Mark Twain Society Will Be at Luncheon at Sunset Hill Club.

Robert Frost of Amherst, Mass., will receive a gold medal for his contribution to American poetry at a luncheon at 1 p. m. tomorrow at Sunset Hills Country Club. The award, by the Mark Twain Society, will be presented by Cyril Clemens, president.

On one side of the medal will be a relief figure of Mark Twain, on the other an inscription, "Robert Frost, the American Horace." Last year Edgar Lee Masters received a similar award from the society.

Frost's first book of poems, "A Boy's Will," appeared in 1913. Last year he published "A Further Range." He writes verse mostly about country subjects, particularly New England life.

J. Hutton Hynd to Speak.

J. Hutton Hynd, leader of the Ethical Society of St. Louis, will speak on "The Modern Dilemma of Nations—Extermination or Assimilation" at the society's regular meeting at Sheldon Memorial, 3648 Washington boulevard, at 11 a. m. today.

Why Experiment

WITH Semi-Automatic HEATING EQUIPMENT
When You Can Heat ECONOMICALLY WITH GAS
The ONLY Completely Automatic Heat!

THERE is no reason to have just "half a job". There is no reason to install expensive heating equipment, storage bins, and the like, only to be forced to "push it along" to get uniform heat. There is no reason why you should be satisfied with anything less than every advantage, every benefit, every comfort without the necessity of manual attention or thought. GAS is the only truly automatic heat that gives you the whole job of heat control without the need of attention or effort.

Check these points and ask yourself if you can get these advantages from any other fuel:

GAS is always at hand without the necessity of storing a fuel supply, or ordering in advance or paying before you use it.

GAS heat requires no large investment in equipment. You can rent a burner if you so desire.

GAS incurs less mechanical repairs and depreciation with their resultant expense.

GAS has no interruption of service through mechanical failures.

GAS requires no firing nor attention nor loading up of hoppers or bins.

GAS leaves no residue nor ashes with concurrent ash hauling and cleaning expense.

GAS is clean, efficient, reliable and maintains uniform temperature without attention.

GAS is the cleanest fuel you can use.

Throw out guesswork! Base your decision on facts alone. Let us send a heating representative to study your home and give you dependable information. Naturally there is no charge or obligation on your part.

MANY parties for post-Lenten brides will be given during the next 10 days. Miss Natalie Moffitt, daughter of Mrs. Nathaniel L. Moffitt, 48 Kingsbury place, who will become the bride of Dustin Hadley Griffin Wednesday, April 7, will be honored at a series of social affairs.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D'Oench of 415 Clark avenue, Kirkwood, will give a dinner Friday night for the wedding party, and the following night members of the bridal party will give a supper dance at the Park Plaza for Miss Moffitt and Mr. Griffin. Sunday afternoon, April 4, Mr. and Mrs. George McDonald Parker, 6835 Waterman avenue, will be host and hostess at a cocktail party. Miss Judith Griffin, sister of the prospective bridegroom, will give a buffet supper at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Griffin, 39 Kingsbury place, Monday night, April 5, for members of the wedding party. The rehearsal will be held at the home of Mrs. Moffitt Tuesday, April 6, after which Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reeve and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Holliday, Kansas City, will give a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Reeve, 5322 Savoy court.

The ceremony will take place at the Moffitt home at 8 o'clock in the evening, with the Rev. Dr. Loren M. Edwards of Grace Methodist Church officiating.

The wedding of Miss Dorcas Carr Taylor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Lackland Taylor, 4607 Maryland avenue, and Charles Edward Gay III of Savannah, Ga., which

Cheatham-Bright Wedding in Florida

MIAMI, Fla., March 27.

SEVERAL hundred guests attended the wedding tonight at 8:30 o'clock of Miss Martha Tinsley Bright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Harris Bright, formerly of St. Louis, and John Hubbard Cheatham Jr. at Trinity Methodist Church here. The Rev. R. Z. Tyler performed the ceremony before an altar banked with palms and standards of Easter lilies, and lighted by candles.

A double male quartet, accompanied by Miss Annie Laurie Lee, organist, sang several numbers before the wedding and during the processional. "Liebestraum" was played during the ceremony and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" provided the recessional.

The bride proceeded down the aisle on the arm of her father. She was gowned in white slipper satin made with a fitted bodice and square neckline. The long sleeves, draped to the elbow, fell in points over the wrist and were finished with tiny buttons. Her tulle veil extending the length of her train fell from a cap of rosepoint lace, caught with sprays of lilies of the valley. The same flower was used in her bouquet.

Her attendants wore white gowns of the same material. The gown of the maid of honor, Miss Leola Peters, was similar to the bride's with a draped bodice and shoulder line, and a long train. With it she wore a hooded veil, which fell capelike over the shoulders, and was caught by a pearl clasp. She carried Easter lilies.

The bridesmaids were: Miss Betty Roney, Miss Catherine Cheatham, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Frances Byrne of St. Louis; Mrs. A. W. Boswell Johnson Jr., Memphis, Tenn.; Mrs. Richard E. Cotton, Deland, Fla., and Mrs. Richards D. Maxwell Jr. They wore identical gowns, made on the lines of evening attire, with a short train and brief sleeves, draped from the shoulder. Self-covered buttons extended from the low V neckline in back to the waistline. Their circular tulle veils, which fell over the face and to the waist in back were caught to the head with coronets of twisted tulle, finished with two lilies. Their bouquets were also Easter lilies.

The bridegroom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hubbard Cheatham, had his brother, Joseph Cheatham of Troy, N. Y., for his best man. The ushers were: Dr. Nelson Pearson, cousin of the bride; Richards D. Maxwell Jr., Lewis W. Robinson Jr., James Moore, Berryman Goodrum and Raymond Edwards.

A reception followed at the home of the bride's parents, which was

Jane Miller Engaged to E. Neil Gray

Announcement Made at Cocktail Party at Home of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence F. Miller—Wedding Planned for Autumn.

MISS JANE CLYDE MILLER, a debutante of the season just ended, and E. Neil Gray, an Englishman who has lived in St. Louis for the past year and a half, told friends of their engagement yesterday afternoon at a cocktail party at Miss Miller's home. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Flandreau Miller, 4448 Maryland avenue.

About 50 guests, who called from 5 to 7 o'clock, were greeted on the porch steps by newsboys (Miss Miller's brother, Clyde and Karl Morgan Block Jr.) shouting the latest edition of the "Saturday Express," a tabloid newspaper, in which scare headlines proclaimed "Jane Miller Engaged to Englishman" and "Sensational New Alliance Between England the United States."

Miss Miller is a graduate of Villa Duchesne. Last fall, after serving as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball, she made her debut at a luncheon given at the St. Louis Woman's Club. She and her family came to St. Louis from Pittsburgh about 10 years ago.

Mr. Gray is the son of Mrs. George Alfred Gray of Henley on the Thames, near London. He is a graduate of the Reading School and attended London University.

The wedding is planned for next fall following Mr. Gray's return from a business trip to England.

Elaborate Plans For Coronation Ball At Woman's Club

JUNIORS of the St. Louis Woman's Club are refurbishing plumes left over from other parties, painting the arms of the House of Windsor on cardboard shields and wondering where to find jeweled orbs and scepters for the coronation ball to be held Saturday night, April 10, at the clubhouse, 4600 Lindell boulevard. The function will be a burlesque on the lavish ceremonies scheduled for May 12 in London.

For days committee members in charge of decorating and costuming have concerned themselves with robes for an archbishop, crowns for peers, "five rows of miniver" for peeresses and flags for the adaptation of Westminster Abbey in the second floor ballroom.

The party is to be arranged night club style and will be preceded by a dinner to be served at small tables filling all available floor space in the ball and card rooms except for an aisle down the center to the stage. Not only the principals and choruses, but the audience will be in costume, and already old trunks and dime stores are being searched for pearl beads and rhinestone ornaments with which to adorn velvet-clad princesses and duchesses.

Jerome Schotten is to preside as the Archbishop of Canterbury; Mrs. Arthur H. Feuerbacher Jr. will impersonate Mrs. Wallis Simpson; Mrs. William Glasgow O'Fallon will be Queen Mary; Jerome F. Kircher, King George; Mrs. Hugh Bowen, Queen Elizabeth, and Charles Swingley, the Duke of Windsor. The parts of Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose will be played by Miss Eleanor and Miss Ruth Babler, and Frederick Armistead is to be a Knight of the Garter—one of four members of the order present—whose dubious duties are still under discussion.

Entertainment, between and after dinner courses, is to begin with a tap dance by the pages carrying bannered trumpets with which to proclaim the entrance of the royal family. The coronation, second on the program, is to be followed by the Simpson chorus, the changing of the guard and the grand march for costume prizes.

Pages will include Miss Annie Lane Bailey, Mrs. E. G. Rolwing, Mrs. Joseph W. Folk, Mrs. Ira Fischer, Mrs. Walter Muckerman, Mrs. Frederick Armistead, Miss Aurelia Gerhard and Miss Betty Hulburd—eight instead of the 15 prescribed since the sixteenth trumpet was lost centuries ago.

The six women in the Simpson chorus, garbed in black satin, will be Mrs. Robert A. Black Jr., Mrs. Henry Hale Rand, Mrs. Arthur G. Drefs, Mrs. Roy Wilcox Jordan, Miss Harriet Hulburd and Mrs. Theodore F. Schroth.

Fantastically garbed guards of Buckingham Palace will include Miss Mary Josephine Wagner, Mrs. Frances Woods Kauffman, Miss Lola Stinde, Miss Dorothy Waltke, Mrs. Louis Dennig, Miss Judith Griffin, Miss Jeanne Blythe, Mrs.

Russian Carnival To Aid Children

A BALAGAN, or Russian Carnival, with swift moving folk dances, native costumes and merry-making in the Russian style, will be given Friday night at the Norwood Hills Country Club by the Russian Refugee Children's Society. Proceeds will be devoted to orphans and needy children supported by the organization.

Vodka and caviar will be served at the bar, Russian toys and artcraft will be offered in the bazaar, and a floor show of diversified acts will be presented. A swing band will play the music for dancing.

The committee on reservations, V. P. Netchvolodoff, Mrs. Georgette Study and Miss Preston Settle, has requested guests to wear carnival costume or formal dress.

Patrons and patronesses will be Miss Eugenie Berthold, Mrs. J. William Caldwell, Mrs. Fred Carpenter, Mrs. Percy Cobb, Miss Alma Cueny, Mrs. C. M. Forster, Mr. and Mrs. Francis L. Gross, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Hagist, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Hail, Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Koerber, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lazier, Miss Martha Love, Mr. and Mrs. Wilder Lucas, Mr. and Mrs. Vion Papin, Mrs. Everett W. Pattison, Dr. and Mrs. Charles W. Rodewald, Miss Harriette Ryan, Mrs. Charles Scarritt and Mrs. Eugene T. Senseney.

Livingstone-Wright Wedding in Georgia

A MARRIAGE of interest to St. Louisans was that of Miss Betty Ann Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Graham Wright of "White Oaks" on Summerville road, Rome, Ga., and Donald Richard Livingstone of Savannah, Ga. The ceremony was performed March 20 at noon at the Wright home by Dr. John W. Melton. Only members of the two families were present. Mrs. Benjamin L. Van Cleave, aunt of the bride, and her son, James Watson Van Cleave, 10 North Kingshighway, and another uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Edwin Ward of New York, were among the wedding guests.

The bride, who visited Mrs. Van Cleave here last year, attended the Spence School in New York and traveled abroad later with her grandmother, Mrs. Charles Wesley Tucker of New York.

Mr. Wright, the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Kilpatrick Livingstone of Savannah, prepared at Georgia Military Academy and attended Lawrenceville Preparatory School, Lawrenceville, N. J. He was graduated from Princeton University in 1931. His brothers, John Kilpatrick Livingstone Jr. and L. Stacey Livingstone, were present at the wedding.

After a motor trip through the South, Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone will make their home in Savannah, where Mr. Wright is associated with the Savannah cotton factories.

decorated with Easter lilies. The gardens were specially lighted. Mrs. Bright's gown of rose petal pink lace over satin was worn with a bolero jacket, orchid corsage and a halo of orchids in her hair. Mrs. Cheatham chose blue chantilly lace with orchids for her costume.

Assisting at the reception were: Mrs. William R. Robins, Mrs. Donald Elliott, Mrs. Frank Smathers Jr., Mrs. Howard S. Kittel, Miss Virginia Smathers, Miss Josephine Glass, Mrs. George S. Swanson, Miss Alice Estill, Miss Dorothy Jean Ryan, Mrs. Raymond Edwards, Miss Evelyn Philpitt, Miss Evelyn Rodman, Mrs. Robert H. Fite Jr., Mrs. Gilbert Paul.

Mr. and Mrs. Cheatham will leave tomorrow morning by plane for a honeymoon at Nassau. For traveling the bride will wear a suit of gray with a short swagger coat and a blue blouse. Her corsage will be of orchids. After the middle of April the young pair will make their home here at 221 S. W. Twenty-eighth road.

St. Louisans at the wedding in addition to Miss Byrne were: Mrs. Charles Bright, 409 Westgate avenue, and her daughter, Miss Medora. The bride's aunt, Mrs. John A. Pearson of Louisiana, Mo., also attended.

The bride, who has visited in St. Louis annually since moving here, was graduated from the Ogontz School in Philadelphia and is a member of the Junior League. Her husband attended the Augusta Military Academy at Fort Defiance, Va.; Swavely School, Manassas, Va., and Washington and Lee University, where he became a member of Phi Delta Theta and Phi Alpha fraternities and the Cotillion Club.

That night Dr. and Mrs. Ellsworth S. Smith will give a dinner at the St. Louis Country Club for Mr. and Mrs. Gay. Saturday, the day of the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Baldwin, 34 Westmoreland place, will give a luncheon for Mr. and Mrs. Gay and other out-of-town guests.

The bridegroom-elect, accompanied by Hunter Clay of Savannah, Ga., will arrive Wednesday and Mr. Gay's uncle, Wilkinson Stark of Detroit, Mich., who will be best man, will arrive Thursday. Mr. Gay's parents will arrive Friday and will be guests at the Park Plaza.

The wedding will take place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, the Rev. Sylvester Tucker of the St. Louis Cathedral officiating. Guests for the wedding and the reception following will include the immediate families and a few close friends.

R. A. Reichardt to Wed Miss Phyllis Kooker

MR. AND MRS W. EARL KOOKER of Des Moines, Ia., announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Phyllis Ann, and Robert Alan Reichardt at a luncheon yesterday in Des Moines. The prospective bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar G. Reichardt, 3232 Longfellow boulevard.

Miss Kooker attended Drake University, where she became affiliated with Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, and was formerly instructor of dancing at the Ann Bullitt Brewer School in Louisville.

Mr. Reickardt, who, with his mother and Mrs. Cecil Williamson of 5079 Waterman avenue, motored to Des Moines Friday for the party, is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reichardt and of W. Ridgely Young. He attended Country Day School.

Twenty-two guests attended the luncheon, given in the private dining room of a downtown tearoom in honor of one of Miss Kooker's close friends. Cards on which the announcement was written were attached to small nosegays of sweetpeas which marked the places.

The wedding will take place in Des Moines June 5.

Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Smith Go East for Wedding

DR. AND MRS. ALFRED FRANKLIN SMITH of Nashville, Tenn., formerly of St. Louis, who have been guests at Hotel Coronado, are in New York to attend the wedding of their son-in-law, Amos Mansfield Kidder Jr., and Mrs. Sophea Black Pierrong. The ceremony will take place quietly today in the chapel of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, with the Rev. Dr. Howard Black, Mrs. Pierrong's cousin, officiating. Dr. and Mrs. Smith were joined here last week by their grandson, Amos Mansfield Kidder III, who is on his spring vacation from the Hill School, Pottstown, Pa. He accompanied them East for his father's wedding. Dr. and Mrs. Smith will be guests at Burn Croft, the Kidder family's ancestral home on Long Island, until Mr. Kidder and his bride return from their wedding trip.

Mr. Kidder's daughter, Miss Lucy was much entertained here last year when she visited. St. Louis with her grandparents. During her visit she presented flags to the American Legion Women's Post at a ceremony at Jefferson Memorial in memory of her mother, Lucy Hortense Smith Kidder, and her aunt, Mildred King Smith Loud.

Easter Picnic At Curran Farm

EASTER will be celebrated in the Con P. Curran Jr. family at an all-day picnic given today by Mr. and Mrs. Curran, Kent and Clayton roads, for their daughters, Miss Clare, Miss Dial and Miss Peggy, at the farm of their grandfather, the late Con P. Curran, at Pacific, Mo.

An Easter egg hunt will start the day's festivities at 11 o'clock, and prizes will be given for the largest number found. After this guests will divide themselves between the baseball diamond and the ping pong tables, while additional out-of-door games will find their share of players. A picnic lunch will temporarily interrupt the games, when guests will be served barbecued hamburgers and other outdoor food.

The 250 guests to be entertained are mainly school friends of the three guests of honor at Villa Duchesne.

Another group of Villa Duchesne classmates was entertained at luncheon yesterday by Miss Betsy Lamy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Oscar Lamy, 1 Forest Ridge. Afterward they attended the dog show at the Arena.

Mrs. Marcelette G. Hunt Is Bride of C. B. Davis

THE wedding of Mrs. Marcelette Grant Hunt, daughter of Mrs. Russell Lee Grant, 20 North Kingshighway, and Courtney B. Davis, Wichita, Kan., son of Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Davis of Houston, Tex., will take place quietly this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Second Baptist Church, the Rev. George H. Tolley officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. David Bradley of Wichita will be the only attendants. Mrs. Hunt will be married in a traveling suit, an ensemble of beige trimmed with beige fox fur. She will wear a small taffeta hat of a violet shade and a corsage of orchids. A small reception at the home of Mrs. Grant will be held after the ceremony. Mr. Davis and his bride will spend a month in Mexico, D. F., and later will go to South America. They will make their home in Wichita.

Mrs. Hunt and her mother, formerly of Tulsa, Ok., recently returned from a visit in Miami Beach, Fla. They have made their home in St. Louis since October. The bride is a graduate of the University of Oklahoma and a member of Pi Beta Phi sorority.

The prospective bride and bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Bradley and a few close friends were entertained at dinner last night by A. Taylor Stickney of the St. Regis Apartments.

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, March 27.

ALL roads for flower lovers and herbalists lead to Mount St. Alban these days, where the annual Spring Herb Show of All Hallows Guild, the garden guild of Washington Cathedral, is in progress at the Cottage Herb Garden. Hundreds of herbs, plants and old-fashioned flowers are on display in the cottage herb garden located near the Norman Gate entrance to the Bishop's garden.

Since the inauguration of the cottage herb garden by All Hallows Guild about three years ago, great interest has been developed among Washingtonians and Cathedral pilgrims in these herbs and plants. Members of All Hallows Guild and the cottage herb garden committee take turns in caring for the place and in telling the visitors about herbs on display.

Members of the cottage herb garden committee include: Chairman, Miss Elisabeth Ellicott; vice-chairman, Mrs. Raymond L. Woven, and Mrs. Robert Love Bacon, Miss Lucy Adee, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, Mrs. Philip M. Rhinelander, Mrs. Anson Phelps Stokes, Mrs. Albert H. Lucas, Mrs. Frank Frick, Mrs. James Henderson, Mrs. George Barnett, Miss Phyllis Snyder, Miss Roberta Grant, Mrs. William T. Hildrupp Jr., Mrs. Maynard Barnes, Mrs. Gerald B. O'Grady, Miss Georgianna Todd, Mrs. Vylla Poe Wilson, Mrs. Edwin N. Lewis, Miss Margaret P. Hart, Mrs. Benjamin Lindsley, Mrs. J. A. Saltsman and Mrs. William Earl Clark.

Herbs from the garden have traveled far and wide. Some of them are at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City in the new cloisters of the department of medieval art, others in the garden of the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington. They flourish in the gardens at Wakefield, the birthplace of George Washington, and this spring, through the gift of an interested friend, herbs from the garden are to be planted at Kenmore, the home of Betty Washington Lewis, sister of George Washington in Fredericksburg, Va.

THERE is one legislator on Capitol Hill who is hoping that protracted sessions due to Supreme Court and other legislation will not unduly delay his annual vacation at Mooseheart, Ind. This is Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania, prominent in the Order of the Moose.

Miss Nancy Letitia Peery, daughter of the Governor of Virginia and Mrs. George C. Peery, has been elected president of the Hollins College Student Government Association.

Miss Peery often has been a guest in Washington at debutante affairs since she was introduced to society at a ball in the Governor's Mansion in Richmond in December, 1935.

After enjoying debutante parties for some time she decided to continue her studies and enrolled at Hollins College at Roanoke, Va.

Miss Gertrude Cohen To Be Wed April 11

MISS GERTRUDE COHEN, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David H. Cohen, 4605 Lindell boulevard, has chosen Sunday, April 11, as the date for her marriage to Dr. Max S. Franklin, son of M. N. Franklin of the Gatesworth Hotel. The ceremony will take place at noon at the Westwood Country Club with Rabbi Samuel Thurman and Rabbi Julian Miller officiating. Miss Cohen will be attended by her sister, Mrs. Wilton H. Waldman, and Dr. Max Werner of New York will be Dr. Franklin's best man. Wilton H. Waldman and Joseph B. Franklin will be ushers.

Following the wedding a breakfast will be served to members of the families.

Night and Day Camp Open House Friday

WITH Mrs. George Castleman Mackay, 3893 Lindell boulevard, in charge, an open house will be held Friday at the Night and Day Camp for children at 9500 South Broadway. Members of about 150 women's organizations have been invited for the occasion, which will officially inaugurate the Tuberculosis Society's annual Early Diagnosis Campaign.

Begining at 3 o'clock, activities have been planned which will demonstrate the facilities available for care of children at the preventorium. A brief tour of the institution will include the dormitories, dining room and kitchen, playrooms, livingroom, lockers and schoolrooms.

Among the organizations that have been invited to send representatives are Federation of Women's Clubs, American Legion and Elks auxiliaries, Parent-Teacher and Mother clubs, church groups, literary circles, sororities and child study groups.

Fairy Tale to Be Given By Children's Theater

THE ever-popular fairy tale, "Hansel and Gretel," will be presented Saturday and Sunday afternoons, April 3 and 4, at 2:30 o'clock by the Children's Theater Guild at the Wednesday Club Auditorium. A double cast has been chosen to play the principal roles, one group performing Saturday, and the second on Sunday. Gordon Sommers will direct the play, and Miss Jane Fox is now training the ballets for the performance.

Those in the cast are: Fred Ochs, Glen Maxwell, Peggy Murphy, Jane Studt, Mary Ann Miller, Geraldine Sakowsky, Barry and Roger Hyndman, Billie Lou Watt and Jean Mitchrich.

Children appearing in the ballet will be: Doris Ochs, Myrna Mae Mowman, Shirley Ann Bertels, Joan Sylva Halpin, Joanne Johnson, Carroll Sears, Rosa May Tevis, Celeste Marie Burroughs, Elizabeth Ann Burroughs, Merrill Rodin, Graham Tevis, Thomas Stephens, Carl Johnson, Betty Ann Herse, Helen Jane Murphy, Marie Virginia Thole, Katheryn Ware, Audrey Maxwell and Evelyn Moore.

St. Louis County Group To Give Annual Tea

THE Women's Chamber of Commerce of St. Louis County will give its annual friendship tea Tuesday afternoon, March 30 at 2 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Jasper Blackburn, 457 Hawthorne boulevard, Webster Park. Mrs. Margaret L. LeGear, general chairman, will be assisted by Mrs. Francis Weaver, daughter of the hostess.

The program, of pipe organ, piano and voice selections and readings, will be given by Mrs. Dan Smith, Mrs. C. P. Strouther, Mrs. Harris Symon, Mrs. Charles Howe, Mrs. Helen Madison, Mrs. Adele Menges, Mrs. James E. Carroll and Mrs. Blackburn.

The following officers of the organization will be in the receiving line: Mrs. James E. Crossman, Mrs. F. H. Littlefield, Mrs. James Hutchinson and Mrs. Charles Wetmore. The reception committee at the door will consist of Mrs. Mitchell Hutchinson, Mrs. Arthur Montgomery, Mrs. Charles Fullgraf, Mrs. Thomas Leonard and Mrs. Henry Eves. Mrs. George W. Taylor, Mrs. Harry Castlen, Mrs. Walter Freeman and Mrs. H. L. Moreland will be in charge of the tea table. Assisting the general chairman as hostesses will be Mrs. Lillian Wilkinson, Mrs. Paul Ebbs, Mrs. William Springett, Mrs. W. C. Kalbfleisch, Mrs. A. M. Goessling, Mrs. Frank Burgess and Mrs. Henry Morris.

Parties for Author At Artists' Guild

ARTHUR SHERWOOD, author of the comedy, "Celestial Holiday," will be guest of honor at several parties when he comes to St. Louis this week for a two-day visit during the production of his play, to open tomorrow night in the Little Theater of the Artists' Guild.

Members of the guild board will give a cocktail party for Mr. Sherwood late Saturday afternoon, after which dinner will be served in the crypt for guild members and their guests. Hosts for the cocktail party will be J. Scott MacNutt, guild president; Walston Chubb, Percy Ramsay, Charles F. Galt, Dr. Arthur Proetz, Miss Agnes Lodwick, Angelo Corrubio, Martin Kaiser and Oscar Thalinger.

Thursday night after the performance, The Players, of which Herbert Cost is president and Mrs. Walter J. Knight vice-president, will give a supper party in the crypt.

Mrs. Festus J. Wade Jr. and her committee will be in charge of tables from which coffee will be served in the galleries between the acts at each performance. The current gallery exhibition is by St. Louis artists.

With the exception of Sunday night, the play will be presented nightly for two weeks. The opening performance tomorrow is for patrons and directors of the Little Theater.

Dorman-Pershall Engagement Announced

THE engagement of Miss Roberta Pershall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Pershall of Granite City, Ill., and William Dorman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar W. Dorman of Freeport, Ill., was announced yesterday at a luncheon held at 1 o'clock at the Missouri Athletic Association.

Forty guests were seated at a large table, on which the centerpiece was composed of four miniature fireplaces, with andirons, and mantels with small clocks on top. These were mahogany replicas of the one in the Pershall home before which the young pair will be married in June. Two small brides and bridegrooms stood in front of each fireplace, and a small gold candlestick and candle stood by the side of each pair. Sweet Heart roses spilled from the hollow formed by the fireplaces, and large bouquets of the roses were placed on either end of the table. Places were marked by a white nut dish topped by a bride's head in a cellophane veil or by that of a bridegroom in silk hat. In the nut dishes were small cards telling of the engagement.

Out-of-town guests present at the luncheon were: Mrs. Dorman, the prospective bridegroom's mother; Mrs. Newcomb Diehl, his sister; Miss Marian Jane Rich, Mrs. R. A. Ruhling, a sister of Miss Pershall; Mrs. John Day and Mrs. Hugh Ray of Chicago; Miss Catherine Wheat and Miss Virginia Rech of Freeport, Ill., and Miss Imogene Sturgeon of Springfield, Ill.

Miss Pershall is a graduate of the former Hosmer Hall and attended the University of Illinois, where she was a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Mr. Dorman is a graduate of the University of Illinois and a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

Every head of hair is acid, alkaline or neutral . . . . . which is yours?
SUNGLO WAVE
Is a "prescribed" permanent based on a scientific analysis of your hair.

First, we find out if your hair is acid, alkaline or neutral. Then we give the proper wave for your hair. Our operators are skillfully trained to determine which your hair needs. We give you a test—no guess work, then the sachets are dipped in pure oil. Some hair waves better on the machine, others by the machineless method. We give you the wave best for your hair.

KIRKWOOD

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES O. Eames of South Geyer road will entertain 50 children at their annual Easter egg hunt for their young daughter, Lucia, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. In case of rain the hunt will be held in a nearby camp house which has been decorated for the occasion. Afterward Mr. and Mrs. Eames will be at home to a large group of their own friends.

John Chomeau, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Chomeau, will be honored this morning at an egg hunt by his grandmother, Mrs. J. K. Broderick, 360 North Woodlawn avenue. This afternoon at 3 o'clock Mrs. John Jordan's Sunday School Class of Grace Episcopal Church will give a benefit hunt at her home, 440 East Argonne drive.

Miss Kate D'Arcy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John D'Arcy, 203 Woodlawn avenue, will entertain next Saturday at her home in honor of Miss Jane Barnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Barnes of Big Bend and Sappington roads, whose marriage to Allen Harper, son of Mrs. Lon Harper, 25 Plant avenue, Webster Groves, will be solemnized May 1 at 5 o'clock in the afternoon at the First Congregational Church of Webster Groves. She shared honors with Miss Mary Catherine Trueblood at a luncheon last Saturday given by Mrs. Carrie C. Barrere and her daughter, Miss Carolyn Barrere, of Ferguson. Miss Trueblood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alva Cooper Trueblood of Webster Groves, will be wed to David Le Count Evans of Colorado April 5.

Mrs. Herbert L. Haas, 429 Way avenue, will leave tomorrow for Ithaca, N. Y., where she will meet Miss Renee Luers, who recently returned from a several years' stay abroad. Together they will go to New York City and Quantico, Va., to visit Mrs. Charles Richardson Luers. Mrs. Haas will return in a month.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Burkhart, 7 Schultz road, and their daughters, Miss Harriett and Miss Louise, are expected to return this week-end from Hot Springs, Ark., where they have been vacationing for two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Carroll E. Gunnin, 205 Peeke avenue, will go to Minneapolis Thursday to visit Mrs. Gunnin's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Skinner, for a few days.

Mrs. Harlan A. Gould of South Geyer road had as her guest last week-end her sister, Miss Margaret Pollard of Boulder, Colo., who had been spending her spring vacation from the University of Colorado in Chicago.

Mrs. Z. Lyle Brown and her baby son left recently for Phoenix, Ariz., to join Mrs. James R. Kearney Jr. of Clayton, formerly of Kirkwood, who, with her young daughter, Jane Evans, and son, James Robert III, have been spending several months there. They will all return at the end of the week.

The following group gave a surprise party last evening for H. Edmund Mack Jr., 532 West Jewell avenue, at his home in honor of his birthday. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Mack the following were present at the buffet supper: Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Hedges, Mr. and Mrs. Willard Guest, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Simon, Mr. and Mrs. Crombie Buckner, Mr. and Mrs. J. How Unwritten Checks Operate to Restrain British Parliament

No Court Passes on Legislative Acts but Governments Must Stand or Fall on Them.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, March 27.

THE current discussion of what would happen in America if the Supreme Court check upon unrestricted legislation was removed or weakened, makes apposite the question of what happens in Great Britain, where no such check exists. Under the famous unwritten British constitution there is no legal restriction upon the freedom of Parliament to pass any piece of legislation it sees fit, with a full knowledge that it cannot be invalidated by the courts.

Despite this freedom from judicial control, Great Britain is noted for her legislative conservatism (using that word in the nonpartisan sense). This is due partly to the difference in set-up and relationship of the legislative and executive branches of the Government here.

The British Prime Minister is the equivalent, in position, of the President of the United States. But he, and the members of his cabinet, are, by the force of custom, compelled to win a parliamentary seat and to sit in the House of Commons. In theory, there is nothing to prevent the Prime Minister from being a member of the House of Lords. But, in practice, such a situation is avoided as being too undemocratic and because it removes the head of the government from the dominant branch of Parliament.

All Government Bills.

So the Prime Minister is not only leader of his party (the governing party) but he is also leader of the House of Commons. Furthermore, he and his Cabinet, assisted by experts of the respective government departments concerned, draft all of the legislation submitted to Parliament for passage, and he and the Cabinet Ministers concerned pilot the measures through the House.

Every measure passed by Parliament is a Government bill and the Government and its party must stand or fall, in the eyes of the electorate, on their legislative program. It is true that a number of what are called "private members bills" are introduced in the House at every session. But they seldom receive more than a courtesy, undebated "first reading." The writer can not recall from memory any instance of such a bill being passed by Parliament during 18 years of residence in London. The Government accomplishes this negative form of defeating such bills by refusing to allow the necessary time for debate.

This means that there is much less nonpartisanship and much less independence among members of Parliament than there is in Congress. Party discipline is strict and the occasions on which members of any party, Government or opposition, vote against the party whip are extremely rare. One reason, probably, why the Government has so little difficulty in maintaining such party discipline is the fact that, if and when the Government is defeated, it much call a general election or resign in favor of the opposition. Supporters of the Government, knowing this, are, therefore, not so inclined to vote against it, particularly if its majority is not large, when they might then have to face the trouble, risk and expense of a political campaign.

Although this factor of the specter of an election enables the Government to keep down parliamentary insurgency, it also serves to keep the Government responsive to public sentiment. It tends to serve as a check upon the Government's legislative ambitions. In the United States the President might be willing to force a piece of legislation through Congress which would be against public opinion because he would know that his position was safe until the end of his four-year term, while the Congressmen and Senators who supported him are equally protected by a definite tenure of office.

Subject to Questioning.

Another check upon the Government in the British system is the fact that the Prime Minister and his Cabinet sit in the House of Commons and are subjected not only to ordinary attack in debate but to interrogation by members of the opposition parties at "question" time every afternoon. It is true that Prime Ministers and Cabinet members do not always tell the whole truth on these occasions, and the skilled parliamentary hands have developed an artful technique of evasion which is often employed. But, on the other hand, they do not tell downright

WASHINGTON, March 27.

ACTIVITY in the field of labor organization and labor demands has now reached a peak of intensity and a breadth of scope unequaled in our history. Still more important, perhaps, is the fact that the fundamental character of the American labor movement appears to be undergoing a profound change. Out of the union idea is developing an economic and political movement of mass proportions.

Newspaper readers are familiar with the more dramatic occurrences of recent months —the emergence of the leadership of John L. Lewis, development of the sit-down strike as an effective tactic to compel collective bargaining, and the successful union drives against the open-shop strongholds of steel and automobiles. All that has been, and still is, front page history. But the attention of future historians may be more engaged by the significant transformation in the nature of the movement. In its new form it is full of portents of change in the structure of American society, and this is the stuff of which history is made.

Salient Characteristics of New Labor Movement.

What are the salient characteristics of the present movement? One is the spectacular eruption of strikes, spreading to every section of the country, and affecting countless and diverse fields of labor. To be sure, the United States has experienced strike waves in the past, including sit-downs. Widespread labor unrest is a familiar symptom of business revivals, due to the fact that living costs increase faster than wages.

What distinguishes the present strikes is the fact that most of them were called primarily to compel recognition of unions and the initiation of collective bargaining. Here, in other words, is a widespread impulse among workers to engage in mass action to exercise a right which is decreed by Federal statute and is now generally recognized, but not yet recognized by all employers.

No less significant is the political character of the movement. Believing that the reelection of President Roosevelt was indispensable to the success of their plan to organize the mass production industries, Lewis and the labor leaders associated with him participated vigorously in the last campaign. That they are now making the most of an impression that labor has a friend in the White House, is hardly open to question. Of equal moral help to them, and more practical assistance, has been the friendly attitude of the Governors of two industrial states—Murphy of Michigan and Earle of Pennsylvania.

In their efforts to obtain union recognition and collective bargaining, labor organizers and leaders have had the National Labor Relations Board with them, and, which may be more to the point, they have not had the State police of Michigan and Pennsylvania against them. Both factors have been important.

However, the political implications of the

LEWIS

Lewis Comments on Movement And the Sit-Down Strike Tactic

IN the hour preceding his departure from Washington for Lansing on Friday to participate in the negotiations with Chrysler, Lewis commented for the Post-Dispatch on the great labor movement which he galvanized into action, and which he is now leading. He said:

"No thoughtful person has any cause to be surprised over the growth and force of this movement. What we have here is a reservoir of human hopes and aspirations which has broken through the dam with a momentum made irresistible by the length of time it has been pent up. It represents the resentment and determination of 25,000,000 Americans who have been denied an opportunity to participate collectively in fixing their own economic status.

"These 25,000,000 workers, together with their dependents, represent two-thirds of the population of the United States, and anyone who believes that this river of sentiment can any longer be dammed or impounded is either a madman or a fool. Mrs. Partington, striving to sweep back the tide with her broom, did not present a more pathetic or futile spectacle than those who would oppose these natural social and economic forces.

"Within a year, the united front which industry presented to labor has been broken. Our advance has been so rapid that the greatest problem now is to consolidate our gains. Moreover, we are deluged with appeals from the unorganized who wish to organize. They come from every region of the country, and from every class of workers.

"Under these circumstances, labor cannot avoid making some mistakes. Inexperienced leaders are directing forces which they do not fully understand. Some foolish things will be said and done. We purpose to limit them as much as possible, and correct them as speedily as we may. At the worst we can give assurance that labor will not duplicate the errors committed in the past by management. Labor is actuated by more enlightened motives."

Asked to comment on the use of the sit-down, he complied, in guarded language.

"The sit-down strike," he said "is nothing but the adaption to modern industry of the ancient tactic of passive resistance. There is nothing new in the principle. It is as old as the human race, as old as animal instinct. Even a cat will crouch before the rush of a savage dog.

"It is recorded on the papyrus of the Pharaohs that on two occasions during the construction of the pyramids at Luxor, the workers dropped their tools and demanded more coins. Passive resistance was both preached and practiced by the early Christians. Gandhi advocated it in India under the name of 'non-co-operation.'

"In most of these contemporary instances, workers have used the sit-down as their only practical reply to the refusal of employers to obey the Wagner Act, which requires them to bargain collectively. When the authorities failed to enforce the act, the workers took steps to protect themselves. It is what usually happens in a community when constituted authority fails to function.

"Critics of the sit-down have conjured up nightmares of cooks sitting down in kitchens, and preventing employers and their families from eating. A man's home is his castle. His rights there are not on the same basis as his property rights in a vast industrial plant, the operation of which involves the question of whether thousands of other men's families will eat.

"It is a question how far a man can assert his property rights for an anti-social purpose, especially when that assertion contravenes the statutory law of the land.

"Does a property right include a privilege to violate the legal right of thousands of citizens to bargain collectively?

"Show me the man who says it does, and I will show you a relic of industrial barbarism!"

STRIKES and MORE STRIKES

WASHINGTON, March 27.

FOLLOWING is a comparative table prepared by Bureau of Labor Statistics of Department of Labor showing number of strikes and number of workers involved in them, for the months of January and February, in the years 1929, 1936 and 1937.

January, 1929: 75 strikes, involving 16,800 workers.

February, 1929: 74 strikes, involving 32,700 workers.

January, 1936: 251 strikes, involving 59,000 workers.

February, 1936: 250 strikes, involving 59,000 workers.

January, 1937: 260 strikes, involving 210,000 workers.

February, 1937: 340 strikes, involving 225,000 workers.

(Figures for February, 1937, are tentative, and in process of confirmation, those for March not yet available.)

IT is strikingly characteristic of the present rash of strikes that they are breaking out in every section of the country, and in almost every known field of labor. The widespread and general character of the movement is shown by a partial list of 30 cities in which strikes were reported in progress during the last week, and the classifications of labor involved.

CLASSIFICATION of workers on strike during last week: Automobile workers, taxicab drivers, hosiery workers, powerhouse workers, hospital attaches, chain store clerks, W P A workers, laundry workers, shipping clerks, drug clerks, shoe workers, leather workers, rubber workers, electrical and radio workers, cigar makers, machinists, teamsters, trucksters, bus drivers, newspaper editorial workers, iron and steel workers, sugar refinery workers, quarrymen, garbage collectors, glass workers, textile workers, match workers, public service employes, tobacco workers, metal workers, aluminum workers, building trades, soft drink workers, locksmiths, printers, furniture workers, garment workers, cleaners and dyers, department store clerks, oil field and refinery workers.

Mexico's Experiment With Co-operative Farming System

30,000 Peasant Families in La Laguna Own Expropriated Land They Work — Bank Finances Them.

By DOUGLAS JACOBS.

MEXICO, D. F., February.

TWO hundred miles south of the American border, in the north central portion of Mexico, lies the area of La Laguna comprising more than 2,500,000 acres. There, approximately 150,000 peasants are working cotton and wheat lands in the largest single experiment in collective ownership outside Soviet Russia.

What is happening in La Laguna is the first serious attempt to put into action a land reform program upon which Mexico's peasants have placed their hopes since the revolution of 1910.

"For hundreds of years," President Cardenas told the writer in an interview in Mexico, D. F., "our agricultural lands have been divided into large estates and the peasants driven by the landlords into the cities and the unproductive mountains. There can be no prosperity for Mexico until the peasants have been given back their land!"

Center of Disturbance.

Why was La Laguna the first large area selected by the Cardenas administration for the purpose of putting its agrarian policies into effect? The answer lies in a 40-year history of the region during which the peasants and the landowners engaged in bitter and often bloody struggles.

The earlier days of guerrilla warfare, during which such agrarian revolutionists as Pancho Villa and Gen. Rodriguez Triana operated in the district, had given place in recent years to a series of widespread agricultural strikes involving interpretations of Mexico's labor laws, and culminating in demands for the distribution of the large haciendas among the peasants. The fact that most of these lands were owned by foreign companies further complicated the struggle. By 1936 matters had reached such a state that had the Government not stepped in, it is doubtful that the landowners could have found sufficient labor to work their holdings had they been permitted.

The Government did step in. Last October 6, President Cardenas issued a decree ordering the expropriation of the land in La Laguna and its distribution among the peasants. Shortly afterwards he himself went to the region and spent a month there organizing the work.

Following the presidential decree, the Agrarian Department began surveying the large estates and transferring the land from private to government ownership. This work was done under already existing laws according to which each landholder or company was allowed to retain 150 hectares of the original holdings. (A hectare is 2.47 acres.) The land to be retained could be chosen by the owners and could contain dwelling houses and farm buildings. At the present time such remnants of the big estates are the only agricultural lands in La Laguna still worked privately.

Irrigation System.

La Laguna is a natural desert, about 3000 feet above sea level and ringed in by the SierraMadre. Part of it is in the State of Durango, part in Coahuila. In the character of its soil, climate and appearance it is similar to the Mohave desert of California, needing only water to make it suitable for the growing of cotton, wheat and alfalfa.

Until the end of the last century the principal activities had been mining and cattle raising, but about 40 years ago large British and Spanish interests began turning their attention to agricultural products. Irrigation ditches and wells were dug, water brought in and an ancient system of dry farming which had existed among the natives was revived and modernized. Cotton and wheat were planted and large fortunes made. In the course of time all of the available agricultural land was divided among a few British, Spanish and Mexican companies. For example, at the time when the Government took over the land the predominantly British-owned Mexican Estates Ltd., operating at Tlahualilo on the northern edge of the region, owned 120,000 acres, the Mexican-owned Larrea & Co. held about 85,000 acres, and another British concern, William Purcell & Co., had a total of more than 60,000 acres.

Government officials now working in the region point out that a system of absentee ownership such as prevailed there, and which still exists in other sections of Mexico, resulted in draining the natural wealth from

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

What the Kaiser Taught Mussolini.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I READ with great interest your editorial concerning the recent proclamation issued by Italo Balbo that Italy is now a "Mohammedan Power," a proclamation that was accompanied by pledges of religious tolerance and recognition of Islamic laws among Italy's Moslem subjects.

However, with reference to your statement that "the Fascist nations are teaching their rivals tricks of the propaganda trade never before dreamed of," I present the quotation given below. My history teacher assigned me the topic, "Germany and Turkey—their relations before 1914," and in one of the source books, "The Nations at War," I ran across the following:

"In 1898, the Kaiser made a spectacular pilgrimage to Jerusalem. In all save the very modern fact that its details were arranged by the tourist agency of Cook, the journey aped a true medieval pilgrimage. The Kaiser and his entourage were garbed in flowing Oriental robes, rode on camels, slept at night on piles of Oriental rugs under the tents of the clansmen of the desert and left nothing undone to make the Arab sheiks and kalifas regard them as true Mussulmans. The region was under the suzerainty of the Sultan, but the loyalty of the local chieftains was of the slenderest.

"The astute Kaiser, having won the potentate at Yildiz Palace, was not above employing the arts of diplomacy to ingratiate himself also with the half-independent chieftains of the desert. His portraits, taken in full Turkish costume, brandishing a scimitar, were widely distributed among them and the story was told that he and the entire German nation had become converts to Islam and, in conjunction with his brother, the Sultan, would presently wage a holy war for the establishment of the true faith of Mohammed throughout the world, and for the eternal confusion of the Christian dogs. The immediate effect of these blandishments was the concession for the Bagdad railway extending from the Dardanelles to the Persian Gulf."

The above might be a slight exaggeration, but no doubt the German nation before 1914 knew more about diplomacy than the other European nations, and certainly Mussolini learned much from the "traveling Kaiser."

The President's Ambitions.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN your recent attacks upon the President's plan, you have not used the Queensberry rules, and I don't like below-the-belt punches when a man who is obviously working for the greater good of the whole is being attacked.

Let truth and reason be your weapons always. Stating motives for a man's actions is akin to clairvoyance.

The people knew the President's ambitions for them when they voted for him. He is trying to give them what they asked for. He is using weapons granted by the law. M. E. J.

Why He Can't Vote for Dickmann.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MAYBE Barney Dickmann is a good fellow, but there are a dozen reasons why I cannot vote for him. They are:

1. Gully Owen.
2. Beverly Brown.
3. Robert E. Hannegan.
4. Judge Joynt.
5. The Padbergs.
6. Walter A. Kelly.
7. Dewey Godfrey.

10. Joe Mestres.
11. Alderman Hoeflinger.
12. Marriage License Clerk George M. Murphy.

CLARENCE S. WELLS.

A Challenge to Women.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I SEE that the House has passed the 2 per cent sales tax bill by a vote of 105 to 27. It is now up to the Senate to put its rubber stamp on it. All of those who indorse this bill brand themselves as tax maniacs. Remember this, people, the next time these men come up for public office!

Now is the time for women's clubs to show their excuse for existence. Where is the militant spirit of the sex who fought for woman suffrage? Can it be that they are satisfied with the fraudulent elections, with the pushed-over riverfront memorial, with the lopsided safety campaign and with the ever-mounting taxes? MABEL HOMER.

Lincoln on the Court.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE following is quoted from Abraham Lincon's first inaugural address:

"I do not forget the position assumed by some that constitutional questions are to be decided by the Supreme Court.

"At the same time, the candid citizen must confess that if the policy of the Government upon vital questions affecting the whole people is to be irrevocably fixed by decisions of the Supreme Court—the people will have ceased to be their own rulers, having to that extent practically resigned their Government into the hands of that eminent tribunal.

"... or is there in this view any assault upon the court or the Judges."

WARSON ROAD.

TWO HALF-RIGHT BITS OF ADVICE.

Says Marriner S. Eccles, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board:

> I am in favor of increasing taxes on incomes and profits if necessary to sustain the volume of relief and at the same time bring the budget into balance and permit the paying down of public debt as private debt expands.

Says Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee:

> So far as I am concerned, I can say now there will be no increase of the tax burdens during this session of Congress. . . . All the sentiment in Congress is to balance the budget by curtailing expenditures, not by raising taxes.

Both these gentlemen are right, but only half-right. Mr. Eccles sounds a needed warning against present practices tending toward inflation, but when he urges higher taxes without mention of reduced spending, he gives only half of the required remedy. Mr. Harrison also falls 50 per cent short when he takes note of the sentiment for curtailed expenditures but takes a stand against tax increases.

They, and most of the public, agree on the necessity of balancing the budget. The deficit for the current fiscal year is more than two billion dollars. The public debt has risen from 16 billions in 1930 to 34 billions today. Certainly, with signs of recovery, even prosperity, on every side, the time for trimming sail has arrived.

There are, however, few signs of moderation. Despite the sentiment Mr. Harrison says he detects, the spending philosophy still prevails. Figures compiled by the United States News show that the Government is spending at the rate of $593,310,000 a month in 1937, as against $552,040,000 a month last year and $532,850,000 in 1934. And this at a time when the unemployed are fewer, private business is advancing and the depression emergency, by presidential declaration, is over!

But reduction in spending is unpopular at Washington, so accustomed has officialdom become to dealing in billions, and so firm has become the hold of pressure groups on the Treasury. Taxing, moreover, is unpopular as well. Speaker Bankhead expressed the representative feeling among legislators when he said: "That's a short and simple word that folks don't like—t-a-x." Lawmakers may lose votes and influence by taking a stand for tax increases, but that does not remove the need for them in certain categories.

Certainly, the income tax structure could do with some revision, at both ends. Attempts to increase the levy in the higher brackets are always met with a storm of opposition, but nevertheless, the need exists for increasing these taxes, both for revenue and to serve the socially useful purpose of preventing unduly large accumulations.

At the same time, the need exists for a broadening of the tax base, to bring in millions of citizens who pay no income levy and thus have no personal concern in seeking to control the course of Federal spending. This would enable repeal of some of the indirect Federal taxes which steal away the citizen's substance without his being aware.

This large group in particular is hard hit by the sky-rocketing price level of which Mr. Eccles speaks. Commodity prices have risen from an index figure of 64.8 in 1932 to 87.2 this month, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, and the end is not yet. In one week this month, the index advanced more than a point. Fiscal inflation may be a remote danger, but price inflation is with us.

How can higher pay benefit the workers if the price level continues to leap ahead of the wage level? And what shall it profit business and industry, in the long run, if prices are advanced with one hand to a larger extent than wages are increased with the other? All this is tending to produce another boom-and-bust such as the nation has said must never occur again.

The Government can do much to check these dangerous tendencies. It can set its own house in order by adopting each of the two remedies proposed respectively by Messrs. Eccles and Harrison, namely, by raising certain taxes and reducing spending.

According to "Believe It or Not" Ripley, a Canadian strong man lifted 545 pounds with one finger. A handy man to have around at housecleaning time.

WHAT BECAME OF IT?

Some time ago, a bill to give women the right to serve on juries in Missouri was prepared by Representative Gladys Stewart of Douglas County. Nothing more has been heard of it. Perhaps word got around that the criminal-lawyer clique in the Legislature would oppose it if the measure were presented. Whatever the reason, it is not too late to revive interest in this long-overdue change. Only this week, the New York Senate passed a bill extending jury service to women. Since the lower branch of its Legislature has already approved a similar measure, New York appears certain to join the ranks of states which have removed this outmoded discrimination against women. In Illinois, bills devoted to the same end have been introduced by Representative Shannon and Senator Ward, with favorable action in prospect. What has happened to Representative Stewart's bill?

The diary of Dr. Samuel Johnson, missing for 150 years, has been found in a castle in Ireland. So don't be discouraged. That Hannegan letter may turn up yet.

A CALIFORNIA LIPOGRAMMATIST.

The Los Angeles author who achieved the remarkable feat of writing a 50,110-word novel without use of the letter "e" is being hailed as a man who has wrought something new under the sun. His acclaimers are sadly in error. The Greeks had a word for such an ingenious craftsman—"lipogrammatist," from "lipo" (lacking) and "gramma" (letter). There was, for instance, one Tryphiodorus, who some 2500 years ago produced an Odyssey without a single alpha in the first book, without a beta in the second, and so on through the Greek alphabet.

Even the current wisecrack evoked by the labors of the California writer, Ernest Vincent Wright, goes back to the 1400s. A Persian poet read to the scholar Jami a sonnet composed without use of the letter aliff. Jami listened, then delivered the squelcher: "You can do a better thing yet; take away all the letters from every word you have written."

There were plenty of other lipogrammatists. Pindar (522-448 B. C.) composed an ode without the letter "s." Fulgentius, a Latin writer of the fifth century, wrote a work of 23 chapters, each omitting one letter of the alphabet. Lope de Vega (1562-1635) wrote five novels, each lacking one of the vowels. For all this information, and much more, we are indebted to "Curiosities of Literature," by Isaac D'Israeli, who tells "these sublime triflers that extreme exactness is the sublime of fools," and quotes Dryden: "Pangs without birth, and fruitless industry." D'Israeli's fascinating work, by the way, is an example of tireless labors that really produced something unique. Beaconsfield's father could never be classified as a literary tree-sitter.

IN REBUTTAL—NO. 3.

A statement frequently made by supporters of the President's judiciary bill is that the Supreme Court has been packed before.

In the outline of the case for Mr. Roosevelt's plan which we set out last Friday this appears as proposition No. 3.

As a matter of fact, the apologists for the President do not generally describe his bill as a proposal to pack the court. Although some of them have characterized it as a device for "unpacking" the bench, the usual thing is to deny that Mr. Roosevelt has any intention of obtaining a Supreme Court which would do his bidding in deciding the constitutionality of vital administration measures.

But while this is the profession, these proponents of the plan usually go on to say that were packing the intention, there would be ample precedent for it. By loose references to the administrations of Jefferson, Jackson, Lincoln, Grant and Theodore Roosevelt, they seek to give the impression that all down through American history distinguished Presidents have resorted to packing.

The simple facts about these Supreme Court-presidency episodes were set forth in a detailed historical review which the Post-Dispatch printed a week ago today. They showed that while Presidents in the past have differed with the court, and have, upon occasion, given evidence of seeking men for the bench who would render opinions in accord with the executive policy of the moment (as in the case of the appointment of Oliver Wendell Holmes by Theodore Roosevelt), none proposed a wholesale remaking of the court. All the Presidents cited appointed Justices to fill seats vacated in the natural course of events—by the death or resignation of sitting members—or created to provide court members for new western circuits established as states were taken into the Union. Lincoln, for example, appointed three to succeed Justices who died, one to succeed a Justice who resigned and one to preside over the circuit created upon the admission of California and Oregon.

Dean Masterson of the University of Missouri School of Law, in his recent article in the Post-Dispatch on the President's scheme, pointed to a vital difference between the so-called "packing" instances of the past and what is proposed by Mr. Roosevelt. Those cases "had their birth in partisan politics"; dangerous though they were in their implications, they did not represent an effort to validate an entirely new philosophy of Federal governmental powers.

> The President's demand (writes Dean Masterson) is particularly dangerous at this time, since it is strategy that he would employ to overcome a deadlock between the New Deal and the Constitution as interpreted by the Supreme Court. It is a plan to alter the personnel of that court as a means of meeting a situation that already exists. It is to enable the President to triumph over the court in the matter of interpreting the Constitution, the supreme law. It is a demand for power that would enable the executive to destroy the independence of that high tribunal as an institution and to subordinate its judgments to his will. Do the American people wish to place him in a position to achieve this triumph? That is the issue.

That, manifestly, is the issue. Mr. Roosevelt proposes, by a wholesale and wrenching change in the membership of the court, to bend it to the executive will. Nowhere in American history is there precedent for such an effort.

Law is not what it once was in Michigan. That's the State where they used to send them to prison for life for selling a pint of whisky.

"THE CASE AGAINST PACKING THE SUPREME COURT."

Many readers of newspapers during the last two months must have wished for a boiling down of the vast amount of news report, interpretation and comment on the President's plan to reorganize the Federal judiciary—for the publication of the essential facts in convenient form for ready reference.

Just such an undertaking has been completed by the Post-Dispatch. The result is a special 24-page rotogravure supplement to be issued with the regular editions of Tuesday, March 30. Called "The Constitution, the Supreme Court and President Roosevelt," the section is sub-titled, "The Case Against Packing the Supreme Court."

Beginning with a special article, dated Oct. 17, 1936, which revealed Mr. Roosevelt's personal conception of the Constitution with respect to Federal powers, the supplement reports progressively the growing conflict between his philosophy of our political system and that of the Supreme Court. The "elements of the Roosevelt defense" are set out by Attorney-General Cummings, while its weaknesses, in turn, are exposed and analyzed in a review of the judgments of the court. Accompanying this exposition is a convenient table of the decisions.

So that each reader may take the measure of the President's plan in terms of the Constitution itself, the text of that charter of our liberties is printed in full. Altogether there are six interpretive articles, 11 editorials, five cartoons and four news-column facsimiles. All the contents are reprinted from the Post-Dispatch with the exception of the text of the Constitution and the final page, which consists of a most significant quotation from the late Viscount James Bryce, noted English political scientist and long-time Ambassador at Washington.

"What prevents such assaults on the fundamental law—assaults which, however immoral in substance, would be perfectly legal in form?" asked this distinguished observer of American life and institutions. And then he went on to provide the answer—an answer for which Americans, a half century after the publication of "The American Commonwealth," may be profoundly grateful:

"Not the mechanism of government, for all its checks have been evaded. Not the conscience of the legislature and the President, for heated combatants seldom shrink from justifying the means by the end. Nothing but the fear of the people, whose broad good sense and attachment to the great principles of the Constitution may generally be relied on to condemn such a perversion of its forms."

WHY OUR SALES TAX IS DOUBLING.

An Explanation of British Foreign Policy

England has wiggled and wobbled in diplomatic field, but this country would behave similarly if it were so near Europe's danger zones, American writer says; policy of "stalling along" is necessary because Britain is not ready to fight and does not want to fight; predicts firmer stand when rearmament program is completed.

Elmer Davis in Harper's Magazine.

BRITISH foreign policy's wigglings and wobblings are susceptible of a fairly simple explanation. If England were as far from the Continent as we are, "Get out of Europe and stay out" would be as popular a slogan there as it is here. But England is only 20 miles from Europe; it is not yet ready to fight and does not want to fight at all; consequently, the Foreign Office, for the moment, has to stall along as well as it can.

A small but not uninfluential group in England feels that Germany is the strongest and most energetic nation in Europe and that the only sensible thing is to come to terms with her; but it is a little hard to discover any terms that might suit the incalculable Hitler, and even Englishmen who talk about the cession of colonies are likely to dilate on the advantages to Germany of getting Portuguese colonies, Belgian colonies, even French colonies, rather than the former German colonies now held under mandate by England and the dominions.

This faction amounts to much more than the British Fascists, who as yet are only a trivial annoyance; but the Simpson episode has probably weakened it and there is no prospect of its getting anywhere just now—especially as the colonies Hitler wants to recover are precisely those that the English do not want to let go.

More numerous are the admirers or sympathisers with Communism, or rather with Russia as a factor in European (but not British) politics; but far outnumbering both are the people who do not want to get into the religious war (Communism vs. Fascism) on either side. The famous peace ballot of 1935 showed that at that time many of them thought that you could make righteousness prevail simply by taking a high moral attitude; but Abyssinia must have taught most of these people something, as Manchuria taught the same sort of people in America.

Just at the moment, righteousness seems less passionately desired than safety, and why not? More than any other great Power in Europe, England is exposed to devastation from the air; nobody wants to take that risk without some powerful reason.

Unfortunately, these are times when it is harder to stay out of trouble than to get into it, especially when a good many of your fellow citizens are actively taking sides in the religious war. The devotees, on both sides, are contemptuous of the Government's non-intervention policy in Spain; the Labor Daily Herald, for instance, called it "the diplomacy of a rabbit, obsessed by the one idea of getting into its burrow as fast as its legs will take it," overlooking the fact that this is a highly intelligent foreign policy for a rabbit.

The Non-Intervention Committee, including representatives of governments which actually are intervening, is a false front, ludicrous or disgusting, according to your taste; but so long as that committee sits—I hope it will still be sitting when you read this—German or Italian or Russian intervention in Spain remains clandestine, not open of official. Once formally admit your intervention, and the war would no longer stay shut up in Spain. This technic of disposing of a problem by ignoring its existence may be English, but it has been useful.

How soon England will be adequately armed (if any nation ever regards its armament as adequate) is naturally a guarded secret; but even now, England is very far from being the rabbit of the Daily Herald. A public which had gradually become unused to spending money on armaments might not have tolerated the added expenditure unless the danger had been exaggerated. The difficulty of army recruiting is giving a good deal of worry.

Certain neutral observers tell you that no government on the Continent, except perhaps France, is as well prepared as it pretends to be; planes are manufactured at a great rate, but arming them is a slower process, to say nothing of training the men to fly them. So it looks as if the British will be ready enough before the Germans are really ready; though, of course, nobody was really ready, or would admit he was, in 1914.

In a year or so, England will probably be ready to back a more vigorous foreign policy; but its objectives will be more modest than in the old days before the efficacy of League sanctions had been put to the test.

To a large part of British opinion, both official and unofficial, that objective is a sort of Monroe Doctrine for Western Europe, which at first sight seems not only attractive but feasible. Hitler has so far been cold to British endeavors to replace the Locarno Treaty; but he offers to guarantee the territorial integrity of the Low Countries, he insists that there are "no humanly conceivable points of dispute" between Germany and France, and whatever he thinks about those lost colonies, he would hardly touch off a general war to get them back.

With England and France guaranteeing each other and Belgium against aggression, and England by logic of circumstances tacitly guaranteeing Holland, too, it might seem as if Western Europe could sit down safely behind its fences and peacefully cultivate its own garden.

But Western Europe is not all the world. Not to mention the British and Dutch colonies, there are also Russia and Czechoslovakia, both allied to France by defensive treaties, both in the way of Germany's expansion eastward if she chooses to be peaceable in the West. British conservatives would not like to defend Stalinist Russia; but would they be comfortable within two hours' flight of a Germany that had swallowed the resources of the Ukraine and extended her frontier to the Don?

Czechoslovakia is far away, an inland state which could get no help from the British navy; British reluctance to undertake its defense is intelligible. But would the British like to see German influence dominant in the Balkans and on the Bosporus, as it very soon would be if Czechoslovakia were conquered?

More dangerous yet is the different reaction of British opinion to Germany, a foreign Power whose unprovoked aggressions might be resisted, and to Fascism, a missionary religion whose spread in other countries a peaceful Britain might choose to regard as spontaneous until it was too late to stop it. Against an overt German war of conquest in Spain, any British Government might impose resistance; but Germany allies herself with Fascist insurgents, and if Fascism is stopped in Spain, it will not be Britain that will deserve the credit. If those tactics—borrowed from the Communists, who tried them unsuccessfully in Central Europe and China—succeed in Spain, they may presently be tried elsewhere.

The English would certainly behave as we do if they enjoyed our geographical luck, but if we lived where they live, we should almost certainly behave just as they are doing. Pious Americans who are concerned for the welfare of their country, not merely next year or in the post-Roosevelt administration, but in the not very remote future, when airplanes can cross the Atlantic as easily as they now cross the Channel, had better offer up a few prayers for the early completion and prosperous functioning of the British air force.

Possibly it will never have to be used; when England is rearmed, any nation in Europe will be able to commit murder, but only at the price of suicide. But there are one or two men in Europe today who, if they ever count the cost of what they want to do, seem willing to gamble on getting their way at a bargain price. There were such men in 1914.

The Untaxables

From the Pittsburgh Press.

TO HIS proposed constitutional amendment limiting the term of Federal Judges to nine years, Senator Norris has added a provision making the Judges' salaries subject to the Federal income tax.

This latter proposition is so incontrovertibly fair that we should like to see it separated from the main proposal, lest it be lost in a dispute over whether nine years is too short or too long a judicial term. Because of a queer Supreme Court decision, salaries of Federal Judges appointed prior to 1932 are not now subject to any tax, though all other Federal salaries are subject to a Federal tax.

And, if separated, we should like to see added to it several other provisions bearing on the same principle of equal taxation:

One, that all Federal salaries and other income derived directly or indirectly from the Government shall be subject to state taxation, the same as other income and other salaries are subject to state taxation.

Another, that all salaries paid by states and local subdivisions and all other income derived from those sources shall be subject to Federal taxation, the same as other income is subject to Federal taxation.

And still another, that Federal, state, county, municipal and other governmental securities and income therefrom shall be subject to the same Federal, state and local taxes that private securities are subject to.

There is, so far as we can see, no logical reason under the sun why public jobholders and public bondholders should be set up in a preferred class, and relieved of the responsibility of contributing to the support of our governmental units on the same scale that other citizens contribute. Nor why an oil company drilling on Federal land should thereby escape state taxation, nor why one drilling on state land should thereby escape Federal taxation. Nor why any Federal Judge should have his salary free from all taxation.

And if it is possible to write a constitutional amendment that can't be twisted into such absurd exemptions, then by all means let's write it.

WHAT IT MEANS.

SOCIAL LEADERS FLOCK TO COURT PLAN HEARINGS

Washington Women Show Off Easter Fashions in Senate Office Building Caucus Room.

MANY SPECTATORS CARRY LORGNETTES

Openly Express Opposition to Roosevelt Bill—Rebuked by Chairman for Handclapping.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 27. — A brilliant social gallery, such as turns out for a major Washington spectacle, a cocktail party or an art pre-view, has been attracted by the hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee on President Roosevelt's bill to enlarge the Supreme Court.

Although the committee is in recess over the Easter week-end to resume on Tuesday, the past week has given socially-minded Washington a parade of Easter fashions in an ideal setting. To the vast caucus room in the Senate office building, with its marble columns, great windows looking out on a central court and massive crystal chandeliers that hang from a high ceiling, have gone numerous social notables, dressed to the hilt.

Mrs. Bessie Merryman, aunt of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson; Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, the former Mrs. Charles H. Sabin now married to the former St. Louisan; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Jonathan Bryan of Richmond, Va.; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth are only a few of the socially elect who have been identified at the hearings. There were many representatives of the so-called social lobby, which is credited with an influence in Washington that is largely mythical.

Congratulations for Opponents.

Most of these fashionably dressed women make no secret of their opposition to the President's bill. They were responsible for the outburst of handclapping that drew a rebuke from Chairman Ashurst and Senator Logan. They are prone to go up to Senator Burke or Senator Connally, Democrats, who have taken the most aggressive part in cross-examination of administration witnesses, and congratulate them when the committee recesses.

These distinguished visitors are led by uniformed attendants to special reserved seats at the side of the room near the long table at which the committee sits. Many of them are equipped with lorgnettes which they train with special antagonism on administration witnesses. They are either very smartly dressed or they are of the sable-and-dog-collar type of dowager whose mode of dress is in reality a kind of uniform which varies scarcely at all with changing fashions.

Hughes' Letter Stopped Knitting.

Several of them knit, staying throughout a long session, their needles flying incessantly.

Close observers noted that the excitement of listening to Senator Wheeler read the letter of Chief Justice Hughes in opposition to the court change was too much for these knitters. They repeatedly dropped stitches and didn't even bother to go back and pick them up.

Many wives of Senators and Representatives also attend the judiciary committee hearings and often they have with them constituents who are taking in this congressional show along with the Washington monument and the cherry blossoms. There are visiting Senators, too, but they are given a special place, adjoining the committee table and they are provided, too, with the manuscript that the witness happens to be reading. The Senate itself, as these hearings continue, is practically deserted.

Conspicuous in this brilliantly dressed audience are certain professional spectators who never miss an important hearing. One of these professionals looks a little like Walt Whitman—the same benign look, the same flowing beard. He has scarcely missed an hour of the committee's deliberations since the hearings began. Another of these professionals might pass for a Senator, with long senatorial hair, but the effect is spoiled by an ancient woolen muffler which he wears around his neck.

Although this is a democracy and, presumably, a democratic spectacle these lesser fry must find their own seats. If they want a good place, they must go early and the professionals are customarily to be seen on the front row of the section given over to ordinary spectators.

Over this Washington show Chairman Ashurst presides with an urbanity that has withstood thus far all the storms of emotion centering around this, the bitterest controversy of a generation. Impeccably dressed in a black frock coat, he raises his mellifluous voice above all dissension, determined, as he announced at the beginning, to prevent this from becoming too patently a Roman holiday.

Progress of the Labor Movement Since the November Election

movement go deeper than any consideration of temporary strategy or expediency. Unless the signs are misleading, labor is preparing for continuous political action on a national scale. Many of the rank and file are not fully aware of this, but there is every reason to believe the leaders are.

In an interview appearing in the Post-Dispatch more than a year ago, Lewis outlined his plan to organize 25,000,000 workers, and declared that if collective bargaining failed to compel a distribution of the fruits of American industry, satisfactory to labor, the organized workers would resort to political action.

"We are faced," he said, "with an absolute issue of economic survival—a literal question of life or death . . . we propose to do what is necessary to meet it."

Rise of Industrial Unionism.

Labor's Non-Partisan League was launched last summer by Lewis, George Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen's Union, and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. Its avowed two-fold purpose was: "To assist in the re-election of President Roosevelt; and to prepare labor to participate effectively in any political realignment which may occur thereafter." Berry, the spokesman, added then, and has repeated since the election, that he believes such a realignment will occur before 1940.

A third distinguishing characteristic of the present labor movement is the amazing growth of industrial unionism, under the sponsorship of the Committee for Industrial Organization. In less than a year, as estimated by the committee's director, John Brophy, it has added more than 1,000,000 names to the rolls of union labor. The rate of growth is indicated by comparison of this figure with the American Federation of Labor's claim of a total membership of 3,500,000 a year ago.

It is further illustrated by statistics showing the increase in membership in some of the industrial unions represented on the CIO, to-wit:

United Automobile Workers' Union—Membership increased from 40,000 to more than 300,000.

Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Union—Increased from 8000 to 250,000.

United Rubber Workers' Union—Increased from 25,000 to 60,000.

Radio and Electrical Manufacturing Workers' Union — Increased from a handful to 75,000.

The next item of new business on the C I O calendar is the organization of 1,250,000 textile workers, under the direction of Hillman. It has already started. Next on the schedule is the organization of 200,000 production workers in oil fields, refineries and gas wells, with the organization of about 800,000 filling station workers under contemplation.

Growth Speedy, Spontaneous Because Long Overdue, Labor Leaders Explain

To list or evaluate the factors which have contributed to this remarkable record, is manifestly impossible. When asked to do so, the leaders invariably respond by asserting that the movement is natural, and was long overdue in this country. The speed and spontaneity of its rise, they add, is in proportion to the length of time it was repressed and retarded.

The spectacle of great wealth at one end of the economic scale, and poverty and mass unemployment at the other; wage cuts during the depression, and failure to make restorations commensurate with the revival of profits, bred profound resentment. Among organized workers, this resentment was aggravated by knowledge of the methods adopted by certain great corporations to prevent them from organizing. Disclosures before the LaFollette committee of espionage, discrimination and intimidation, undoubtedly contributed to this feeling.

Brophy, the frail, ascetic-looking director, whose gentle voice and manner cover the tenacity of a bulldog, explains it that way. He said:

"The movement has been swift and widespread because it had been held back so long, and by such unscrupulous methods. It arises from the terrible feeling of insecurity, plus an accumulation of grievances, aggravated by wage cuts, the inhumanity of the speed-up, and the practice of espionage, discrimination and intimidation.

"Workers expressed their resentment in the November election, and thereafter they continued to express it by joining unions and making demands on their employers. There was a tremendous upsurge in union membership after the election. Even the poor old A. F. of L. has benefited from the sweep.

"Swamped With Appeals."

"This office is swamped with appeals from workers who ask us to 'come over into Macedonia' and organize them. They come from every section, from Sitka, Alaska, to the Louisiana lumber camps, and voice sentiments of every class of workers, including white collar employes, technicians, teachers and agricultural workers."

He indicated a 12-inch stack of telegrams and letters on his desk, and added, "We could use hundreds of experienced field organizers merely in responding to these appeals.

"As for the sit-down," Brophy continued, "it is simply a practical tactic which the workers were compelled to adopt, in order to cope with a condition which employers had created. Through the use of espionage and intimidation, the employer had enjoyed the advantage of surprise and initiative. The sit-down deprived him of it, and enabled the workers to fight on more even terms.

"Employers, as a matter of fact, had been 'sitting down' from time immemorial. Every lockout was an employers' sit-down. As Judge Pecora said the other day before the Senate Judiciary Committee, the most destructive sit-down strikes during the depression took place in the loftiest circles of high finance. They are complaining now because their own weapon has been turned against them."

C I O Formed in December, 1935.

The C I O was formed in December, 1935. It was the answer made by Lewis, Hillman and other labor leaders to the continued failure of the American Federation of Labor to organize workers in the mass production industries. That failure, they contended, was the inevitable outcome of adhering to the craft union policy of organization. They maintained, and have since done much to prove, that, under the conditions created by mass production and the machine, organization must proceed on industrial lines to succeed.

When the executive council of the A. F. of L. ordered the C I O to disband, Lewis replied with his historic defiance: "I'll see them wearing asbestos vests in Hell first."

Originally the C I O was composed of the heads of 10 unions, most of them members of the A. F. of L. It has since been augmented by the addition of heads of new industrial unions, and the present committee has 15 members, representing a union membership of approximately 2,000,000. Its union membership is rapidly overtaking that of the A. F. of L.

C I O Campaign in Steel.

Confronted with a threat of expulsion from the federation, the C I O replied by announcing the opening of a drive to organize the steel industry, long recognized as the stronghold of anti-unionism. To Philip Murray, a native of Scotland and a vice-president of the miners' union, was entrusted the field command. Two hundred experienced organizers were dispatched to the front.

Asked why steel, of all industries, was chosen as the objective of the first thrust, Lewis made this characteristic answer:

"Because steel is the very citadel of all opposition to labor organization, to all true collective bargaining, in the United States. It is the Hindenburg line of exploitation, and behind it stands the enemy general headquarters. Steel not only fights labor on its own particular front, but directs the fight on a thousand other fronts. Once we have established collective bargaining in the steel industry, we can establish it anywhere. So long as we fail to establish it in steel, it is threatened everywhere."

But while the C I O was concentrating its fire on steel, action was developing on a score of smaller fronts. Several of the infant industrial unions, some already represented on the C I O, and some to join later, were launching organization drives, and calling strikes to compel recognition. Notable among them were the rubber workers and flat glass workers.

Encouraged by Wagner Act.

Another factor which served to encourage them was the Wagner Act, providing that labor could bargain collectively through representatives chosen by secret ballot, and, perhaps more important, the interpretation of the act by the Labor Relations Board to mean that representatives elected by majority vote were entitled to exclusive bargaining rights.

One of the principal defenses erected by the steel and automobile industries against invasion by "outside unions" was the company union, often alluded to as the "Employe Representation Plan." It proved to be a weapon which could be turned against its owner. One of the most effective organizing devices practiced by the C I O was the capture of company unions from within.

This happened notably in the case of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Co., largest unit of the United States Steel Corporation, and Chrysler Motor Corporation. Before those employers realized what was happening, or before they could prevent it, their company unions had gone over, bag and baggage, to the C I O. It was a formidable factor influencing their eventual decision to consent to collective bargaining.

However, the C I O drive on steel did not proceed according to schedule. Two interruptions occurred, although the result of each was to hasten a successful conclusion of the campaign in steel. The first was the presidential campaign. In Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois, Indiana and West Virginia the drive to organize steel workers was virtually suspended, while the organizers diverted their activities to the re-election of Roosevelt and other favored candidates. They operated largely under the supervision of Labor's Non-Partisan League.

Homer Martin and Auto Strike.

They returned to the job with renewed vigor after the election and then the second interruption occurred. It was the appearance here of a delegation from Michigan, led by youthful Homer Martin, former Baptist minister, entreating Lewis to lead an organization drive for the United Automobile Workers' Union. The pressing argument was that automobile production was approaching its annual peak, and that unless the drive was launched immediately, a precious year would be lost.

To accede meant a division of forces and a diffusion of effort which the C I O felt it could ill afford, but the argument was so compelling that Lewis yielded. He is a calculating and far-sighted strategist, and he has the gift of making decisions. Said he:

"Collective bargaining is now the law of the land, and I think it is high time General Motors engaged in it."

Again, he was electing to tackle the largest and toughest unit in an industry simply because it was the largest and toughest.

"Chrysler," he said, "can be taken whenever we are ready. After General Motors capitulates, the organization of Ford will be a mopping-up operation. We will break the center first, and take care of the flanks afterward."

Property Rights and Jobs.

Some students of the country's economic-labor problem have ventured to develop more fully Lewis' idea of the relativity of property rights and the working man's need for a job, which he presents in the interview accompanying this article. As is known, Russia is the only nation whose Constitution guarantees the right to work; but in this country there has been much speculation and discussion concerning a worker's moral right to his job, and the possibility of establishing such a right by law. The extraordinary spread of sit-downs has intensified the discussion.

A few days ago, in a local university, a member of a class in economics reminded the lecturer of an old common law principle, involving a mechanic's right to be secure in the possession of his tools. The inquring student asked whether, in the supplanting of individual tools by machines, the worker's right might not be transferred to the machine.

Still others have held that, since collective bargaining is now accepted as a moral right, there is a moral justification for the sit-down strike. The argument is that, because of conditions deliberately created by some employers, the sit-down becomes the only method through which workers can obtain the fruits of collective bargaining. The fruits, obviously, are improvements in wages and working conditions.

Collective Bargaining.

The acceptance of collective bargaining appears to mean, in its broad aspects, that industrial plants shall not operate until labor, speaking as a human institution, consents to the conditions under which they will be operated. Collective bargaining, of course, is only a method of achieving something, and it would seem to follow that the right to use the method is based on the right to enjoy its fruits.

It was Lewis' contention that when labor, seeking to exercise those rights, encounters recalcitrant employers who give lip service to collective bargaining in order to defeat its purpose, it is justified in resorting to the sit-down to enforce its rights.

Although labor, through the Non-Partisan League, had done its utmost to insure Roosevelt's re-election, the leaders always realized that it was largely a precautionary measure. It was labor's way of making its flanks secure in preparation for the coming battle in the economic field.

"As a matter of fact," Lewis told the Post-Dispatch, "it served a double purpose. Our principal task was to eliminate fear. . . . We knew if we could get the workers to vote as they felt, without fear of reprisals, they would not fear to join the union later."

To which Berry added: "I deliberately made a test, by sending our men into two Rockefeller plants where strong company unions existed. I wished to see how they would respond to union missionaries. Subsequent checks showed that 90 per cent of them came with us."

The election was not a week old when many of the larger industries, including steel and automobiles, declared a succession of dividends, extra dividends, stock dividends, bonuses and wage increases. Labor interpreted this as meaning one thing: namely, that these industries had concealed their profits during the campaign, and were now showering down to escape the tax on corporate surpluses.

Labor's View of the Gravy Rain.

Labor viewed the gravy rain as a confession by industry that profits had not been shared proportionately with the workers.

Steel's announcement of a general 10 per cent wage increase coincided with a meeting of the C I O, held in Pittsburgh to plan a new organizing drive in that industry; but if the increase was calculated to take the play away from the union, it failed.

Pronouncing it "welcome, but inadequate," Lewis declared: "This will do more to make the workers conscious of their power than anything that has happened in a long time."

In the case of Carnegie-Illinois, giant U. S. Steel subsidiary, the increase was ostensibly announced in response to demands from the company union. The management may not have known, but Lewis and Murray knew, that the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee had penetrated the company union at numerous points, capturing many of its key men. There is, indeed, some ground for believing that the company union's demands were inspired, or even formulated, by union organizers.

Scene of Action Shifts From Steel To Motors; General Drive on the G. M. C.

The major scene of action, however, was rapidly shifting from steel to motors. Plants supplying 90 per cent of the safety glass used in automobiles were already closed by strikes, and, on Dec. 28, the big Fisher Body plant in Cleveland was closed by a sit-down. Spurred by the evangelistic fervor of Homer Martin, its 35-year-old president, and profiting from the experience of Adolph Germer, veteran organizer, the United Automobile Workers' Union was gaining a foothold in the General Motors plants. It had been particularly successful in Fisher Plant No. 1 at Flint.

On Dec. 29, union workmen in that plant observed certain maneuvers which convinced them that the "key" machine of the plant—a huge die for cutting turret tops—was about to be moved. They construed it as an indication that the management was preparing to close the plant, or get itself in readiness for a strike there. Union shop stewards reported the situation to union officers.

"What do you purpose to do?" the union heads asked. "Sit down in the plant," was the reply. "It's the only way to keep them from moving that die." So they sat down.

General Fight With G. M. C.

Simultaneously, at Cleveland, Wyndham Mortimer, vice-president of the union, told the sitting strikers:

"This is not an isolated squabble, but a battle between General Motors and the union—and we will win."

General Motors plants began closing in numerous places, some by strikes, and others because strikes had stopped the supply of vital parts.

William Knudsen, vice-president of General Motors, replying to Martin's request for a general conference, declared: "Grievances of individuals or individual groups can only be settled by local plant managers." He added that the sit-downs "have made collective bargaining impossible."

That represented the corporation's position at the outset of the strike, and should be remembered in weighing the significance of later events.

Union's Eight Demands.

On Jan. 4 the union presented eight demands, the first being for a general conference "to discuss collective bargaining between General Motors and its employes." Next day Alfred P. Sloan, president of the corporation, addressed the employes in a public statement, declaring the company would not recognize any union as the sole bargaining agency for the employes; that work in the plants would continue to depend on individual efficiency and that "no labor dictator" would be permitted to dominate the plants. He counseled the strikers to think of their families.

In Washington, Lewis replied that Sloan's statement was accepted as a declaration of war. He said Sloan's effort to set himself up in the position of dispensing even-handed justice between his stockholders, on one hand, and the workers, on the other, was "monumental hypocrisy," and that his advice to the strikers' families was "a flagrant piece of impertinence."

In Flint, where Circuit Judge Black had ordered sit-downers to evacuate two Fisher plants, union officials revealed that the Judge owned 3665 shares of General Motors stock, and they asked the Legislature to impeach him.

Gov. Murphy's Intervention.

Gov. Murphy, who had taken office a few days earlier, intervened with a request that company heads and union officers meet with him. The management refused to confer unless the occupied plants were first vacated, and this the union declined to do.

John P. Frey, head of the Metal Trades department of the A. F. of L., urged General Motors not to recognize any union which interfered with the jurisdiction of the crafts union, and Harry W. Anderson, personnel director, assured him it would not.

On Jan. 15 the company agreed for the first time to open negotiations with the union, and not to resume operations in any of the closed plants for 15 days, or to remove any machinery. In return, the union agreed to evacuate the occupied plants. This was Friday. The following Monday, when all but two plants had been vacated, Martin declared "all negotiations are off," and accused the company of attempting to "double-cross the union.

The basis of the charge was that the company had consented to enter into "negotiations" with the Flint Alliance, a sort of vigilante organization, headed by a former General Motors paymaster, and avowedly opposed to the strike and the union. A tense impasse ensued, punctuated by a bloody riot in Flint. Enrollment in the union mounted rapidly, more General Motors plants, and the number of idle passed 100,000.

Michigan Governor's Intervention; Series Of Strategic Maneuvers; Sloan's Blunder

Gov. Murphy announced that strikers would receive relief if they needed it. Lewis and Martin conferred here, and announced that "The battle will be fought out on the issue of collective bargaining and union recognition." Martin returned to Michigan with the assurance that all the resources of the C I O were behind the Union Automobile Workers.

At this stage occurred a succession of strategic maneuvers which had a decisive effect on the tide of battle. The participants were Murphy, Sloan, Lewis, Brophy, Secretary of Labor Perkins and President Roosevelt. It began when Miss Perkins, who up to that time had taken little part in the conversation, attempted to arrange a conference in her office.

Lewis and Murphy were already in Washington, and Sloan appeared in response to her request, but she failed to get them together. Her explanation was that the presence of the sit-downers in the Flint plants constituted a barrier to negotiations.

Brophy commented bitterly on the administration's "neutrality." He said:

"To be 'neutral' in this fight is to be on the side of the corporations that refuse to bargain collectively. These same 'economic royalists' who are trying to drive the union out of industry were not neutral during the presidential campaign. They did everything they could to put the President out of the White House."

At a press conference late that day, Lewis declared the Flint plants would not be evacuated until negotiations were resumed. The strikers, he said, did not intend to be tricked again.

When asked by a reporter if it was time for President Roosevelt to intervene, he said:

"That's up to the President—but labor intervened for him."

He added the following pointed remarks:

"For six months last year, the economic royalists such as Sloan, the du Ponts and other members of the General Motors family, contributed their money to drive the President out of the White House. The administration asked labor to help repel this attack, and labor responded. Now these same economic royalists have their fangs in labor, and the people of this country expect the administration to do all it can in a legal way to help repel this same rapacious enemy.

"We have so advised the Government representatives. I expect this administration to side with the workers when the workers are right. We are fighting for the economic principles enunciated by President Roosevelt in his many addresses. We are fighting for the 'under-privileged' whom the President talked about in his inaugural address."

Emerging from Miss Perkins' office, Sloan read Lewis' statement, and announced that he was leaving immediately for New York. He said:

"It is plain from Mr. Lewis' statement that it will be impossible to get the men out of the closed plants—a condition precedent to reopening negotiations."

Lewis Quick to Save President's Face, But Sloan Held Out and Lost Sympathy

Lewis might have found himself in an awkward position but for Sloan's unwitting help. Lewis' statement was generally interpreted as a demand on the administration to repay labor for its contribution to the President's re-election. Anger and embarrassment were manifest at the White House, but Sloan, by walking out on Miss Perkins, had managed also to incur a share of the displeasure.

Accordingly, when President Roosevelt departed from his rule the following day by giving reporters a statement for direct quotation, it was recognized as a joint rebuke to Lewis and Sloan. He said:

"Of course, I think that, in the interests of industrial peace, there are moments when statements, conversations and headlines are not in order."

Recovering with the agility of a cat, Lewis immediately called another press conference and declared he had not demanded that the President intervene in the strike to pay a political debt to organized labor, but had merely expressed "ample confidence" in the President. Thus he acted to alleviate White House embarrassment.

It was different with Sloan. Invited back to Washington by Secretary Perkins, he declined, stating that negotiations would not be resumed until the Flint plants were vacated by strikers. Lewis and Martin had promptly accepted the invitation.

Miss Perkins angrily declared that Sloan's action "must make it clear why the workers no longer have any confidence in the General Motors Corporation."

On the day following, the President again allowed himself to be quoted, as follows:

"I told them—all the visitors here today—that I was not only disappointed in refusal of Mr. Sloan to come here, but that I regarded it as a very unfortunate decision on his part."

It was plain that any sympathy which General Motors might have expected from the administration was gone with the wind.

Parley and Settlement.

Still standing pat, the company obtained from Circuit Judge Gadola an injunction ordering the strikers to evacuate the Flint plants. That night Gov. Murphy informed Knudsen by telephone that it was "the wish of the President of the United States" that officers of the company confer with Lewis the next day in Murphy's office. Knudsen replied that the request, in that form, "leaves no alternative but compliance."

Eight days later the strike was settled on the following terms:

1. The corporation recognized the union as the collective bargaining agency for those employes belonging to the union, and agreed not to negotiate with any other employe representation group in the 20 strike-closed plants for six months without the Governor's sanction.

2. The corporation and the union agreed to commence collective bargaining negotiations five days later on the union's eight demands.

3. The union agreed to end the strike and evacuate the plants occupied by sit-down strikers.

4. The corporation agreed to resume operations as soon as possible.

5. All strikers would return to their jobs, and be subject to no discrimination.

6. The union agreed that, pending negotiations, there would be no strikes or interference with production.

7. During existence of the contemplated collective bargaining agreement, all opportunities to negotiate would be exhausted before additional strikes were attempted.

8. The corporation agreed to dismiss the injunction proceedings against the sit-downers.

The foregoing measures the gap which had been traversed since the management informed the union that any employes who had grievances would have to take them up with local plant managers, and that collective bargaining had "been made impossible."

On the other hand, the union had not succeeded in having itself accepted as the sole bargaining agency for all General Motors, and in some quarters this was interpreted as a "defeat" for the union. Such a view, Lewis contends, is equivalent to saying that the American Army was defeated in the Argonne because it did not reach Berlin.

The effectiveness of the sit-down as a practical tactic, demonstrated in the General Motors strike, has been responsible for its wide use elsewhere, and equally responsible for demands that it be outlawed.

Steel Comes to Terms.

The imminent prospect of its attempted use in the steel mills, known to be heavily armed, was causing deep foreboding when the country was electrified March 3 by the announcement that Carnegie-Illinois had recognized the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, headed by Murray, as the collective bargaining agent for all members of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers — the C I O union. It also announced the establishment of an eight-hour day and a 40-hour week, with a minimum daily wage of $5 and time and a half for overtime. Its example was promptly followed by other large steel companies.

Among the factors which contributed to the settlement, the impression left by the General Motors strike undoubtedly was important. There were others. One was the fact that the big steel companies found themselves ineligible to bid on huge navy contracts, involving the purchase of 25,000,000 pounds of steel to complete nine war vessels, because of the labor provisions of the Walsh-Healy Act. Still another was the fact that steel was entering the greatest period of production since 1929.

Perhaps the most persuasive factor, however, was the knowledge that the union had succeeded in organizing thousands of steel workers, whose leaders would not hesitate to resort to mass action to enforce their demands, when they believed the time was ripe. Apparently Lewis had succeeded in impressing this fact on Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, in private conversations which they had conducted for several weeks prior to the settlement.

Chrysler Strike a Surprise.

The Chrysler strike, resulting from the company's refusal to accept the union as the sole bargaining agency, caused some surprise, since the union had settled with General Motors for less, and had expressed comparative satisfaction with Chrysler's attitude.

The explanation was simple. The union leaders are realists, and they are determined to get all they can. They expect to get more from Chrysler because the union is stronger there.

Thus, it is to be seen, the developments which have occurred, and are still occurring, are only stages in a continuing movement. The movement, in its present form, is hardly more than in infant, although the steel and automobile industries doubtless regard it as a lusty one.

Among students of natural mass movements, John Stuart Mill was one to observe that "leaders" are those who perceive the nature of such movements in time to get at the head of them. It would appear that Lewis, Hillman, Murray, Martin and their associates recognised this one just in time.

NONPARTISANS OPPOSE BIG CAMPAIGN FUNDS

Citizens' Committee to List Own Expenditures Before City Election.

The best way to purify politics would be the publishing of a full list of campaign contributions before each election, O. H. Brooks Jr., campaign chairman for the independent municipal ticket sponsored by the Citizens' Nonpartisan Committee, declared in a statement yesterday.

He said the committee would set an example by publishing its own contributions and expenditures next Saturday. Paul O. Peters, executive director of the committee, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that, up to Thursday, the committee had received donations of $224 from members and friends, and spent $106.28, for printing, hall rental, clerical work, postage and other expenses. He did not know how much more might be spent.

Brooks declared the committee viewed with alarm the continued spending of large amounts in local elections, believing that this was not good for the public welfare. Oliver T. Remmers, Republican nominee for Mayor, has asserted that the Democratic campaign fund would exceed $200,000.

Peters announced that the Nonpartisan Voters' League, Inc., 936 Lemay Ferry road, Luxemburg, with 794 members in the city and 3380 in St. Louis County, had started a campaign in support of the Citizens' Nonpartisan Committee ticket.

Meetings of the Citizens' Committee, to be addressed by William A. Allen, the nominee for Mayor; Peters and A. L. Alewell, have been scheduled as follows: Monday, 8 p. m., Sokol Hall, 4618 Minnesota avenue; Tuesday, 8:15 p. m., Gambrinus Hall, 3631 Salena street; Wednesday, 8 p. m., Tower Grove Turner Hall, Grand boulevard and Juniata street.

HENRY PEGRAM, SCULPTOR, DIES IN LONDON AT 74

Made Famous Monument to Edith Cavell, Who Was Shot by Germans as Spy.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 27.—Henry Pegram, 74 years old, noted British sculptor, died today.

Pegram's sculpture made him an associate of the Royal Academy in 1904 and a full academician in 1922. He had studied in the academy's schools in 1881-87. One of his best known works was the monument at Norwich, England, to Nurse Edith Cavell, British heroine of the World War, who was shot by the Germans as a spy. His "Death and the Prisoner" won a medal at the Paris Exhibition in 1889.

He created a statue of Sir Thomas Browne at Norwich; one of Cecil Rhodes, the empire builder, at Capetown, South Africa; one of Sir John Campbell at Auckland, N. Z., and one of Sir Robert Hart at Shanghai, China. He did busts of such notables as Earl Jellico, Dean Inge, Lord Allenby and Lord Dawson.

Among his more recent pieces were "Victory," the Cunard war memorial at Liverpool; "Master Desolata;" "Hylas," and "Lux Mundi." Also on his list were many architectural reliefs and posthumous busts, and the great candelabra of St. Paul's Cathedral, London.

PORTRAITS OF 3 MISSOURIANS PROPOSED FOR STATE CAPITOL

Stark to Seek Appropriation for Memorials to Crowder, Coontz and Champ Clark.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 27.—Life-sized memorial paintings of three Missourians — Major-General Enoch H. Crowder, Admiral Robert Edward Coontz and Speaker Champ Clark—may be obtained for the State Capitol as the result of a movement started by the Missouri Society of Washington, D. C.

Gov. Lloyd C. Stark intends to ask legislative leaders for an appropriation for the paintings, he said yesterday.

The Missouri Society of Washington recently adopted a resolution suggesting the memorial to Gen. Crowder, "father of the Selective Service Act." In reply Gov. Stark told Dr. O. E. Reed, president of the society, he thought Admiral Coontz, formerly of Hannibal and commander of the Navy during a period of the World War, also should be honored, as well as the war-time Speaker of the House of Representatives. There is already a life-sized painting of Gen. John J. Pershing in the Capitol.

Two years ago a $1500 appropriation for paintings of Admiral Coontz, Gen. Crowder and Admiral Arthur Willard of Kirksville, Spanish-American war leader, was approved but reverted, unused, to the general revenue fund.

ARMY DAY PROGRAM APRIL 6

Major-General Ford to Be Principal Speaker at Dinner.

Army Day, April 6, will be observed in St. Louis with a program arranged by the Military Order of the World War. There will be a review at Jefferson Barracks at 3 p. m. and a dinner at the Coronado Hotel at 7:30 p. m.

Major-General Stanley H. Ford, commander of the Seventh Army Crops Area, will be the principal speaker at the dinner. Reservations may be made at the headquarters of the 102d Division in the new Federal Building.

Hitler Plans Nibelungen Road.

COLOGNE, March 27.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler is going to honor Richard Wagner's memory with a Nibelungen highway. The road, which Hitler has ordered constructed, connects Worms and Wuerzburg. It is part of a great network of motor roads, but will take the name Nibelungen road as it passes through the places mentioned in the Nibelungen Saga on which Wagner based his famous cycle of operas.

LECTURES TO SOCIAL WORKERS

The Rev. Truman B. Douglass to Speak at Opening of Series.

The Rev. Truman B. Douglass, pastor of Pilgrim Congregational Church, will be the speaker at the opening of a lecture series for volunteer social workers at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning at George Warren Brown Building, Washington University. His subject will be "Foundations of Community Building."

The lectures, to be held on Tuesday and Thursday mornings through April, were arranged by the Department for Volunteer Service of the Community Council.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

PREMIER BLUM'S LIFE STORY

LEON BLUM: From Poet to Premier. By Richard L. Stokes. (Coward-McCann, Inc., New York.)

WHEN Mr. Stokes arrived in Paris last summer to write a series of articles on French politics and finance, he found Leon Blum the man of the hour, but, surprisingly enough, little biographical data and no full-length study of the Premier available. He determined to remedy this lack, and, as this lively yet thoughtful book shows, labored prodigiously to gather from obscure corners the facts of Blum's life story.

The result is a stimulating account of this extraordinary man, the first Socialist and first Jew to become Premier of France, whose courage and intelligence came to his country's rescue in a time of dark despair, and who now holds in his hands Europe's hope of redemption through democracy.

A biography to be successful must embody a study of character as well as a record of events. Mr. Stokes develops both. It is not for the mere sake of alliteration that he subtitles his book "From Poet to Premier"; the phrase expresses the transition in Leon Blum's character that is molding the course of history today.

For Blum was once a poet of sorts, an artificer of "pleasing quatrains to the moon," a pale, precious young man who lived solely in the world of intellect. His education, which the writer recounts in some detail, had prepared him for the life of a scholar. A lawyer by profession, he wrote brilliantly on literature, esthetics, the drama. If Mr. Stokes seems to dwell at undue length on his early writings, it is to prepare the reader for the amazing yet wholly consistent change that shook the French exquisite out of his ivory tower and plunged him into the arena of world affairs.

The first shock was the Dreyfus affair, beginning in 1894, which roused Blum's social consciousness and brought him actively into the orbit of the Socialist movement. The second, the real turning point, was the assassination of his hero, Jean Jaures, the gallant Socialist leader, on July 31, 1914, the eve of the World War. "With him died Leon Blum the artist," the biographer says; "but Leon Blum the apostle was born beside his bearse."

The new Blum that emerged from the scholastic cocoon rounded out in public leadership the man's "triple genius"—as eminent jurisconsult, as master of prose style and profound critical ability, as intrepid statesman of world stature. After many political vicissitudes, he came at last to head the Popular Front. This mercurial coalition, including Radical Socialists (mild liberals, in our usage), Socialists and Communists, was welded together by Blum's personality and strategic ability. It triumphed in the elections last year, and he became Premier on June 4.

Blum's record in office has been criticised, but the list of his achievements, some of sweeping character, cannot be gainsaid. The very duration of his stay through a critical period in one of the world's most uncertain posts, with resort only to democratic methods, is a tribute to the confidence he commands. Mr. Stokes hazards a guess that his tenure may last as long as three years. Only a rare and many-sided leader could have weathered the crises, from within and without, that have beset Blum as Premier.

The story is not yet ended, of course, but it is a well-rounded and unified study, written in rich and eloquent style, that Mr. Stokes has presented. His interpretation of the leading character gives body and substance to the press dispatches on the drama being played in France today, where every act brings a new climax.

"We Were More Than We Thought"

INTERLINEAR TO CABEZA DE VACA. By Haniel Long. (Writers' Editions, Santa Fe, N. M.)

WRITERS' EDITIONS of Santa Fe has contributed no more significant a book than this little volume. Reading between the lines of the memorable letter of Cabeza de Vaca to his king, Haniel Long tells a story of tragedy and spiritual victory.

Cabeza de Vaca set out from Florida in 1528 with 580 men and reached the Pacific in 1536 with three. The world in which this young Spaniard had been reared, that of Christian and militaristic convention, was soon stripped from him. Yet, in an unknown wilderness among diseased and starving savages, despite inbred resistances and fears, he discovered at length within himself not only the unsuspected capacity to endure, but the seemingly miraculous power of spiritual sustenance and healing.

In recounting this phase of his development these words mark the transition: "The worst lay in parting little by little with the thoughts that clothe the soul of a European, and most of all with the idea that a man attains strength through dirk and dagger, and serving in your majesty's guard. We had to surrender such fantasies . . . but only when at last I relaxed could I see the possibilities of a life in which to be deprived of Europe was not to be deprived of too much." Finally he is constrained to realize that his true being is not connected with European civilization at all, but with something elemental and universal. "We were more than we thought we were," he says.

When at length he encounters brother-Spaniards engaged in a slave-catching expedition, the contrast is clarified completely. The armed men on horseback proclaimed to his Indians that they were the real Christians. "Our Indians," he relates, "considered this point of view. They answered that the real Christians apparently lied, that we could not possibly be Christians. For we . . . cured the sick, while they killed even the healthy; . . . we asked for nothing and gave away all we were given, while they never gave anybody anything and had no other aim than to steal."

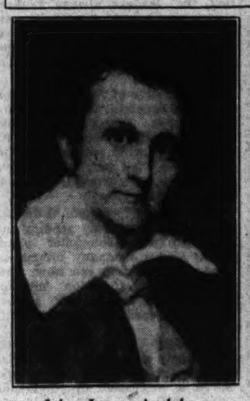
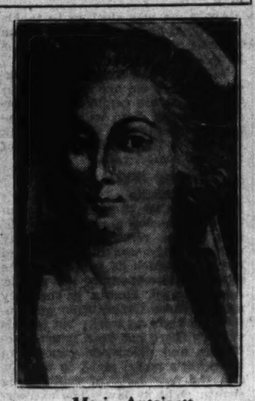
WERE THEY MOTHER AND SON?



John James Audubon



Marie Antoinette

The Audubon Mystery Revived

I WHO SHOULD COMMAND ALL. By Alice Jaynes Tyler. (The Framamat Pub. Co., New Haven, Conn.)

WAS John James Audubon in reality none other than Louis Charles, the Dauphin of France, who, but for the French Revolution, would have reigned as Louis XVII?

This apparently fantastic question is likely to be noted in any extended discussion of the great naturalist, although it is commonly believed that his father was Admiral Jean Audubon. Considerable data and much argument have been presented in support of the contention that Audubon was born in Saint Dominigue on April 26, 1785, the illegitimate son of the Admiral by a Creole woman, Mille Rabin, and that he was legally adopted by the father on March 7, 1794.

Now it was in January, 1794, that the Dauphin is said to have disappeared from the Tower of the Temple in Paris, where he was imprisoned after the return of the royal family from the famous flight!

But it is upon no such mere suggestion that Alice Jaynes Tyler, wife of Audubon's great grandson, bases her argument in support of her absolute conviction that the Dauphin became the naturalist. She contends and undertakes to show that Audubon's wife was aware of his identity, and that his granddaughters after his death were in possession of the secret. A chain of circumstantial evidence, involving the Admiral's whole life and the boyhood of his adopted son, is constructed with great ingenuity.

This sort of thing has been done before, albeit with less passionate conviction and meticulous skill. But never before has Audubon himself been placed on the witness stand to speak directly for himself; and that is what Mrs. Tyler has undertaken to do by reproducing portions of Audubon's letters to his wife.

Unfortunately the letters themselves are no longer in existence, but the excerpts here quoted are said to have been selected by a granddaughter, who made legal affidavit as to their genuineness.

In none of these extracts does the writer state openly that he is the Dauphin, but if they were written by Audubon to his wife, there need be no question as to meaning. They refer to "my high birth," "my resemblance to my father, not my adopted father, but my own father," to his fear of returning to France lest he be recognized, to the rights of his children, etc. Often when apparently about to state his meaning directly, he breaks the sentence, sometimes referring to an oath or sacred promise. In a particularly passionate fragment we arrive at this: "Dressed as a common man, I walk the streets! I bow! I ask permission to do this or that! I follow the publication of a work on natural history, I who should command all!"

A story is told of a man living in North Carolina and supposed by many to be Marshal Ney, who knew Audubon well and "always refused to sit down" in the latter's presence, saying, "He is higher than I am! He is higher than anybody!" (Incidentally, a recent book seriously discusses this Ney legend.)

That Audubon induced his wife to believe the Dauphin story seems hardly to be doubted. Was he, then, a fantastic prevaricator? If so, the intricate chain of circumstantial evidence here woven by Mrs. Tyler certainly entitles her to a high place among creators of mystery yarns.

Tells of R. L. S. And Many Others

THIS LIFE I'VE LOVED. By Isobel Field. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York.)

BELLE OSBOURNE (now Mrs. Field) is the sort of person to whom interesting things commonly happen. Her memories are rich and varied, many tinged with romance. They include an early childhood spent in the rough and picturesque mining town of Virginia City, a season studying art at Julian's atelier in Paris, a holiday at Grez where she first saw Robert Louis Stevenson who later became her step-father, marriage in San Francisco to the painter Joe Strong, Hawaii when the island still belonged to the Hawaiians, and "enchanted" Samoa where Stevenson was the center of an attractive household.

Numerous unusual people move through these pages. Not the least of them is Belle's young and dashing father, a free-thinker and somewhat of an adventurer, who mysteriously disappeared one night never to be heard of again. There is an amusing account of Oscar Wilde who exclaimed upon entering the Strongs' San Francisco studio, "This is where I belong. This is my atmosphere!" In Honolulu, the author was an intimate friend of the genial and kindly King Kalakaua. Her quick wits helped foil a plot against the monarch who therefore awarded her the Royal Order of Oceania, a signal honor for a woman.

Of course, the person in whom the world will be most interested is Robert Louis Stevenson. His stepdaughter became his amanuensis during the last years and naturally has many tales to tell of his wit and gaiety. Though Stevenson was a kindly person, he could deal brusquely with sentimentality and ostentation. A young hero worshipper who announced himself as a "disciple" brought to the "Master" a volume of Browning and asked for an explanation of a difficult passage. Disgusted with the adulation, the "Master" replied, "I'm damned if I know what it means. It reads like cat's meat to me."

But Stevenson never becomes the central figure. The book quite rightly belongs to Belle Osbourne. Upon finishing the account the reader feels himself well acquainted with this warm-hearted, vigorous woman who has always maintained a keen joy in the mere act of living.

TROTSKY BECOMES AMUSING

THE REVOLUTION BETRAYED. By Leon Trotsky. (Doubleday, Doran & Co., Garden City, N. Y.)

IT IS difficult at times in this, Leon Trotsky's latest attack in book form on Stalin and the Soviet Union, to determine if Trotsky expects the reader to take him seriously.

It would be unfair to the reader to deprive him of a few examples of the Trotskyist burlesque. On page 119, for instance, Trotsky essays to prove the Soviet revolution is a failure by way of the oleomargarine industry. Says Mr. Trotsky: ". . . Mikoyan (People's Commissar of Food Industries) informs us: 'The oleomargarine industry is new.' It is true that this industry did not exist under the old regime. We need not rush to the conclusion, however, that the situation has become worse than under the Tsar. The people saw no butter in those days, either. But the appearance of a substitute means at least that in the Soviet Union there are two classes of consumers: one prefers butter, the other gets along with margarine. . ."

Again (page 125) the author becomes annoyed because the Stakhanovists are given awards for superior work. Says Trotsky: ". . .They give them (Stakhanovists) free tickets to the moving pictures. In some places they even cut their hair and shave them free and out of turn. . ."

But that is not all. Turning over to the next page we find the revolution betrayed by the fact that ". . .in Kharkov 96,000 workers have their own gardens. . ."

The good fun doesn't end here, for within 10 pages we learn that Sidney and Beatrice Webb, that elderly Fabian couple who surprised practically everyone by writing an enthusiastic survey of the Soviet economy, "never once mentioned the Soviet bureaucracy as a social category. And no wonder, for they wrote, in the essence of the matter, under its dictation!"

In that last we believe that Trotsky, a humorist, overstepped himself. You can't be completely ridiculous and still be funny. But the reference to the Webbs may be taken as merely the temporary slackening of an overworked pamphleteer. On page 140 the author hits his stride again by comparing the "present leaders of the Soviet trade unions" to William Green—the William Green who is president of the American Federation of Labor. Trotsky feels that they are "not much different in their psychological type."

In the main, Trotsky's book is a reiteration of previous charges he has made against Stalin and the Soviets many times before. He continually reiterates his allegation of bureaucracy against the Communist party leadership, while at the same time he quotes from the Soviet press in an effort to prove by its frank statements that the proletarian state is a slipshod institution.

There occur, however, some interesting statements which parallel the testimony given at the January Moscow trial. On page 127 we find: "Can we, however, expect that the Soviet Union will come out of the coming great war without defeat? To this frankly posed question we will answer as frankly: If the war should remain only a war, the defeat of the Soviet Union will be inevitable . . ." It so happens that in the report of the trial, Prosecutor Vishinsky asked defendant Radek: "So you were interested in hastening war and were interested in the U S S R being defeated in this war? How was it stated in Trotsky's letter?" To which Radek is reported to have replied: "Defeat is inevitable, and it creates the situation for our advent to power; we are, therefore, interested in hastening this war. The conclusion is that we were interested in defeat." It should be remembered that this book was in the hands of the publishers before the Kamenev-Zinoviev trial.

All in all, "The Revolution Betrayed" should make comforting reading for those who seek failure in the Soviets' successes on the theory that if it can't happen there it won't happen here.

—Stephen Talbot.

Aldous Huxley's Latest Essays

THE OLIVE TREE. By Aldous Huxley. Harper & Brothers, New York.)

ESSAYS, like sermons, essentially exist for two reasons: because the writer considers his opinions of sufficient importance that others should be acquainted with them, and because many people, unable to form opinions, like to receive them in capsule form from their more original fellows. Some few essays, however, like those of Nietzsche, Schopenhauer, Emerson, Havelock Ellis, are written to stimulate, rather than to congeal, ideas.

The majority of the literary efforts of Aldous Huxley are in the latter class. A skeptic without the irritating dogmatism of most professed skeptics, he inveighs against fallacies and stupidities—as he conceives them—with what must surely be interpreted as controversial rather than didactic impulse, and sets the reader to speculating, to elaborating upon the ideas embodied. Even his fiction has that power.

Perhaps not all his essays justify their existence, but a volume of them is sure to include some that justify the volume's existence. "The Olive-Tree" does, though some past books—"Music at Night" for an instance—have been far better. The title essay, a lengthy eulogistic discourse on olive trees, is nothing remarkable. But there is a very brief theme, "Time and the Machine," and a longer one, "D. H. Lawrence," which are excellent. The first because it is intellectually titillating, the second because he says more about David Lawrence in an essay than too many others have said in volumes.

Those are not the only engaging essays in the book. He takes propaganda and human susceptibility apart in an unflattering manner. A neat analogy is made between savage and civilized fetishism; fatuous theses in universities are lampooned; the lengths to which ruler, rogue and philosopher go to justify actions varying from the norm is noted. A group of brilliant essays, not seriously harmed by Huxley's tendency to be too consciously the detached intellectual.

Fine German Novel

NIGHTS OF AN OLD CHILD. By Heinz Liepmann. Translated from the German by A. Lynton Hudson. (J. B. Lippincott Co., Philadelphia.)

THE publisher of this novel stresses the fact that it is almost wholly autobiographical, this in spite of the title-page, which clearly asserts that it is a "novel by Heinz Liepmann." Whether it is based on the author's life or not is a matter of little moment. The hero, Martin, is convincing in his own right as a fictional character. Orphaned during wartime privation in Germany, never knowing real childhood, growing up alone in the midst of the disorder that followed the war, and rising at last to a perception of some sort of meaning even in such a life as his, Martin is an interesting and sympathetic figure, entirely apart from his possible resemblance to Herr Liepmann himself.

"Nights of an Old Child" is a study of the maturing of a boy. The value of the book is not primarily in the picture it gives of conditions in Germany during and after the War. Its virtue is that it rises above those conditions. Reading it, one is not observing a spectacle of famine, physical and spiritual, in a defeated nation, but is, rather, permitted to meet and to share the experiences of a person whom one is the better for having known. The emphasis is on human character—which is enduring—and not upon social conditions which will in a few years interest only historians.

Martin is a living person, not a "type." His problems are our problems, and while his solutions are for himself alone, they point the way toward solutions for the rest of us. Not that we should—God forbid!—all write novels, as he ends by doing. That is only superficially Martin's solution. Beneath that symbol lies his final trust in ideals of beauty and truth, his belief in the ultimate dignity of human living.

Maugham's Latest Not His Best

MR. MAUGHAM'S "Of Human Bondage" has been regarded by many, and probably with reason, as one of the indubitable classics of our time. Those who hold this opinion must have been puzzled by much of his later work, and to some degree disappointed. They must have asked themselves why a man of such abundant talents should restrict himself, as in "Cosmopolitans" for example, to the most pedestrian kind of commercial writing.

In his new book, "Theatre," Mr. Maugham makes use of the magnificent technical equipment that long familiarity with many genres has given him. The brilliance of the dialogue, the malicious (but always timely) satire, and the subtlety of his analysis of character are things that devoted readers of Mr. Maugham will recognize immediately in this book, and with delight.

The story is that of Julia Gosselyn, a middle-aged actress whose talent comes close to genius, and whose life has been an unbroken chain of postures and phrases that she has used—or will use—in some play. Even those to whom she was closest, Sir Charles Tamerley, her somewhat ineffectual admirer, Michael, her husband, and David, her son, were no more than lay figures, whose sole function was to support her in the roles she played from moment to moment and day to day. She could achieve sincerity only when she was on the stage.

The central point of the novel, however, lies in her love affair with a public accountant, Tom Fennell, for which his boyishness and her boredom one afternoon were more responsible than any real attraction. In the description of the slow, inevitable growth of Julia's passion for Fennell, Mr. Maugham portrays the gradual disintegration of a character that one would have thought sealed away, like a fly in amber, from change. There is a certain pathos in the situation of Julia as she stands at last, shorn of her complacence and the mannerisms that had been for her an impregnable defense.

In its own right, "Theatre" is a novel of excellence. The most critical reader will find entertainment and pleasure in reading it, but his final judgment, based on his acquaintance with "Of Human Bondage," will probably be that Mr. Maugham has again provided a book whose content is trivial and second-hand, and therefore beneath his ability.

Young's Anthology Of Old South

A SOUTHERN TREASURY OF LIFE AND LITERATURE. By Stark Young. (Charles Scribner's Sons, New York.)

EVEN the most loyal son or daughter of the South must sometimes squirm in embarassment at the blatant self-complacency of his fellow Southerners and wonder at the indulgence and encouragement accorded them by the North, East and West. For, although the South is a beautiful and aristocratic creature, she is given in turn to proud sulking and proud strutting. In Stark Young's anthology she does both.

The first pages are dull with oratory, utterly deflated by print, and with detailed diaries of pioneers which add little to the well-known picture of early American life. But with the accounts of plantation life by Lestant Prudhomme, Susan Dabney Smedes and Sara Ann Pryor, the old South emerges from the moonlight and magnolias of fiction into a far more interesting reality, a reality concerned with planting and the surprising difficulty of keeping hundreds of slaves busy. The accounts vary with the localities of the writers' plantations, but all confirm the great Southern tradition of gentility, beauty and pride. The "way of life" of less glamorous Southerners—Georgia crackers, Texas cowhands and Tennessee mountaineers—is set forth in their ballads and in the modern short stories of Martha Berry, William Faulkner and Erskine Caldwell.

Quite naturally, the pages on the Negro, dealt with tenderly and comically by Joel Chandler Harris and Roark Bradford and dramatically by Julia Peterkin, DuBose Heyward and Paul Elliott Green, are of the best to be found and should be a bible for all Northerners who feel they must treat of Negro life.

The third quarter of the collection becomes more cerebral, consisting, as it does, of discussions by college professors. The gallant war poetry and reverent biographies of generals interspersed among these essays are in distinct contrast with the last selections from such modern writers as Elizabeth Madox Roberts, Ellen Glasgow, T. S. Stribling and William Faulkner who seem to have agreed to leave plantation life and the upper class Southerner alone and flash the light of their genius on a seamier side.

Truly great authors—Poe, Lizette Woodworth Reese, Conrad Aiken, Thomas Wolfe, to mention a few, are included in the anthology, but they seem in their lack of sectionalism alien to the purpose of the book. For, as Stark Young hastens to say in his preface, a literary valuation is not a true measure o the greatness of the South. What the South contributed to culture and what Young wishes to depict is its "discovery of a definite pattern of living."

A Local Writer's First Novel

LAND OF TOMORROW. By Shirley Seifert. (M. S. Mill Co., New York.)

THERE was "murder blood" on the oaken floor of the Ormondy mansion by the Kentucky River, a spot of stain that stayed through generations of Ormondys, keeping in memory the needless tragedy that put it there, a tale that grew into a legend still told by the old folks. Shirley Seifert of Kirkwood also tells it in "Land of Tomorrow."

It was Geoffrey Ormondy who put the blood there and stained the lives of the Ormondys of the tomorrows, for though it was a crazed man's act it carried a curse unto the third and fourth generations.

Ormondys came and went, fine ones with the fineness that was part of their heritage from the founder of the family, and some that were not so fine, with the faults that Geoffrey had bequeathed; but Ormondy House had a nobility of its own superior to the fineness or the faults of the Ormondys it sheltered. Through the post-pioneer days and on through the conflict between the States it stood on its middle ground, proud and prosperous.

There is a formality of narrative and stateliness of discourse which have their own value apart from the episodic development of the story. Miss Seifert has contributed short stories and serials to leading magazines. This is her first novel.

No Digressions? Nothing But!

GREAT TRADE ROUTE. By Ford Madox Ford. (Oxford University Press, New York.)

IF Gen. Sherman had been more careful of the property of Georgians; or if long-distance bus travel did not put one's limbs on pins and needles; or if so many kinds of people did not wish to stand so many other kinds of people against walls; or if Malory had not put so many intriguing phrases into the Morte d'Arthur; or if Edinburgh had a more tolerant cosmopolitanism; or if Philadelphia signboards were in better taste; or if Chinese ceremonial music were less complicated; or if so much soda pop were not consumed in Southern cities; or if Spanish art were more cheerful; or if certain proceedings in Flemington, N. J., had been less distressing; or if Sherman's soldiers had not burned Columbus—

Where were we, anyway? Oh, yes; if these and other seemingly unrelated circumstances had not impressed themselves on Mr. Ford, this 400-page book either would not have been written, or would have had to be about other matters equally unrelated, except in the mental sequences of the author.

"I am tired of pointing out that there are no digressions in this book," one reads on page 388. The reader, who also has a pretty fair chance to be tired by this time, is likely to reply: "Sir, I have found nothing in it but digressions."

—C. F. Hurd.

A Notable History Now Complete

A HISTORY OF THE UNITED STATES SINCE THE CIVIL WAR: Volume V: 1881-1901. By Ellis Paxson Oberholtzer. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

JUST a quarter century ago the late John Bach McMaster completed his trail-blazing "History of the People of the United States from the Revolution to the Civil War." Utilizing newspapers and magazines, which his predecessors steadfastly ignored, the industrious researcher had produced a detailed record of pre-rebellion times from contemporary sources which tended to open up new insights into our past. One of the students at the University of Pennsylvania during McMaster's professorship in the '90s was Ellis Paxson Oberholtzer, who in turn was to carry the story of American life from the point at which McMaster stopped to the beginning of the new century.

The 791-page volume at hand completes the work of Dr. Oberholtzer, who died last December just after finishing the fifth of the projected five installments. It spans the 13 years from 1888 to 1901 and so reports on one of the liveliest periods in American history. There are four high-pitched presidential elections: first Harrison beats Cleveland and four years later Cleveland turns around and beats Harrison; then McKinley outdistances "the Boy Orator from the Platte" in 1896 and again in 1900.

But politics is not the whole of the author's interest by any means. The bicycle craze of the '90s, the "good roads" movement begun by the 25,000 members of the League of American Wheelmen, the first national automobile show in 1900, and the first halting runs of "the horseless carriage"—these and many other matters of social concern are in his well-documented chronicle.

It is an unflattering description of the national character which Dr. Oberholtzer draws for the commencement of the new century. The philanthropic impulse, he tells us, was lost again. The American conscience was engaged with the right and wrong of taking over islands, shooting their inhabitants and imposing unwanted forms of government upon them. The writer finds this a subversion of the principles underlying the Republic which stirred some to an almost inexpressible protest. Idealism was not dead, but harkening to a louder call, "our humanitarian energies would be spent upon moral questions raised by a military project, which, though it had been begun to bring happiness to Cuba, might, many men opined and averred, be the negation of benefit to any one."

—Irving Dilliard.

PAY-OFF AT LADRON. By Bennett Foster. (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

THE LAW BRINGERS. By Bliss Lomax. (The Macauley Co., New York.)

Western stories; the former based on the historic feud at Ladron, the latter concerning cattle rustling in the Panhandle.

Orthodox Scholar On Constitution

THE MAKING OF THE CONSTITUTION. By Charles Warren. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

CHARLES WARREN, author of a history of the Supreme Court and other books on constitutional subjects, goes to the source materials on the American form of government in his newest work, "The Making of the Constitution," which, as do all of his others, combines a complete scholarship with orthodoxy.

There is nothing to indicate that he intended to answer New Deal pronunciamentos, yet, taken point by point, his book assumes the nature of a brief for the defense.

For example, he disposes of the controversy over the "commerce clause" to his own satisfaction in four documented and reasoned references. He shows the limited intention of the Founding Fathers. To them commerce was only what the colonies' experience with the mother country had taught them it was. Their deliberately narrow definition antedated the Articles of Confederation as the Articles of Confederation antedated the Constitution.

Again, the Warren thesis is that the much disputed "general welfare" clause was intended originally, as Justice Story held it was, to be a limitation on the taxing power of the Congress and not a separate grant of power. Warren quotes James Madison, who declared the limitation as a matter of course.

Thus, here and elsewhere, the argument falls flat that the framers of the Constitution intended to set up a national government but that the old men of the Supreme Court simply would not have it so. Warren's evidence shows that the framers did what they meant to do. They were reasonable men. They meant to and did create a Federal union, which is not the same as a national government. Any other reading of the record is perversion.

Oddly enough, the publisher has seen fit to quote President Roosevelt on the back dust cover: ". . . It is worth our while to read again the debates in the constitutional convention of one hundred and fifty years ago. . ."

—Harold Tecumseh Meek

Propaganda

THE ASCENT OF F6. A Tragedy in Two Acts. By W. H. Auden and Christopher Isherwood. (Random House, New York.)

A BRITISH example of the propagandist play, by the authors of "The Dog Beneath His Skin," a much-publicized item in the cable dispatches of last season, is to be found in "The Ascent of F6." It is sufficiently artistic and dramatic to be investigated by non-professional theatrical groups.

Part verse and part prose, it describes the rivalry between Britain and a mysterious power named "Ostnia," to reach the summit of a border line peak, called "F6," and from the prestige thereby gained to extend sway over the natives of "Sudoland."

The authors make the play a plea against the sacrifice of lives for territorial ambition.

—Colvin McPherson.

Says We Can't Keep Out of War

ZERO HOUR. Policies of the Powers. By Richard Freund. (Oxford University Press, New York.)

"WAR is near. With every new crisis in international relations the area of disturbance grows wider, distrust sinks deeper, confidence becomes more difficult to restore. The Italo-Abyssinian war, the reoccupation of the Rhineland, the Spanish civil war came near to causing a general conflagration. The next flash may be the signal. It is Zero Hour."

Thus Richard Freund introduces his careful analysis of the delicate balance of world power. The danger to peace is to be found in these "restless" countries. Germany, Italy, Japan are expanding Powers whose peoples are poor and whose rulers are absolute and ambitious.

For the preservation of peace the author looks to Great Britain with vital interests in every corner of the globe. Every threat to peace is a threat to the safety of the Empire. Since 1918 she has prevented war by a policy of compromise, of balancing one Power against another, but the tremendous increase in armament of the three restless nations must force an alteration of her attitude. In permitting Mussolini to take Abyssinia, she has blundered, for the position of Italy has been greatly strengthened, and Germany, too, has gained by a skillful playing of her hand. To put it briefly, the security of the world now depends upon the power and integrity of Britain.

Clear, brief, compact, logical, "Zero Hour" is an excellent summary of the policies that now dominate the nations and of the economic and military reasons for them. Though the author has chosen to describe his book as "a survey of world affairs as they present themselves to Great Britain," there is neither prejudice nor partiality in his presentation of facts. His chapter on the United States ("America in Dry Dock") discusses the isolation policy that guides it today and suggests that we will not be able to keep out of a world war.

"Zero Hour" is an invaluable outline for anyone interested in the world in which he lives—and in which presently he may die.

BONDS UNEVEN IN QUIET WEEK END

Institutional Buyers Re-enter Market During Week, Following Pause.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—U. S. Governments were unchanged to higher as a paucity of orders held most issues to narrow swings in the bond market today.

The Easter week-end began for many dealers and investors last Thursday afternoon with the result that today's interest and participation were at low ebb. That Federal bonds moved up a bit was due more to the lack of overhanging selling orders than to the presence of active inquiry, dealers said. They regarded the absence of offerings, however, as a sign of improved sentiment.

Gains in the Federal list ranged to 13-32 of a point, but the large majority were either unaltered or on minor fractions. Treasury 3s of 1948 and 2¾s of 1954 each gained 11-32 of a point, while the 2¾s of 1961 were up 13-32.

Little Change Noted.

Domestic corporate bonds closed all square on the day or showed negligible variations.

The Associated Press averages for the various classifications were virtually unaltered except for the 10 foreigns which dipped .1 of a point to 72.2.

Volume for all bonds totaled $5,127,000, face amount, compared with $11,096,000 the previous Saturday.

A disposition on the part of institutional buyers to re-enter the bond market was the principal alteration in investment sentiment last week.

The change of heart by banking and insurance companies, which had held aloof on the theory higher yields were in the offing, was noticed in the new money market as well as in several recovery movements by United States Government issues. Buying, however, was light and distinctly choosey.

Following heavy pressure Monday, when the Federal list reacted sharply in the afternoon to close with losses to nearly a point and one-half, Treasury and agency bonds found support and launched a recovery movement which lasted through Wednesday's close.

New Financing Light.

New financing was light, with the New York State flotation of $15,000,000 serial bonds Wednesday accounting for roughly half of the total. These obligations, however, were well received and syndicate managers said most of the issue had moved on to ultimate holders by the end of the ofering day. The bonds were sold as 3s and the interest cost to the State was nearly double that of last September's $55,000,000 marketing. The attempt of Alleghany County (Pennsylvania) commissioners to sell $5,000,000 of bonds, however, was twice frustrated by the lack of bids.

Stock Market Recovers Largely From Sharpest Recession Since Last August; U. S. Bonds Improve Pre-Holiday Lull Prevents Broad Recouping of Losses—Week-End Trading Is Slow.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The stock market underwent its sharpest recession since last August during the week, and while recovery forces intervened later, the pre-holiday lull prevented any broad recouping of losses.

Threats of a general strike in Detroit was dissipated by the Chrysler-U. A. W. A. truce, but not until shares had tumbled 1 to 6 points in an active session Monday.

In the bond market, United States Government obligations recovered somewhat from the slump of the preceding 10 days, but toward the end of the period lost some of their gains in the absence of any brisk support.

Corporate loans, which had slipped along with the Federal list, fared better. The recovery in high-grade issues held and some fair gains were scored.

Business news was for the most part cheerful. Steel operations continued at the highest rate since 1929, railroad freight carloadings, at 759,000, were at a peak for several months and electric power consumption continued at a satisfactory rate.

Sales during the week (five days) amounted to 6,826,140 shares, compared with 10,375,840 the previous week and 9,571,532 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 155,509,696 shares, compared with 177,115,085 a year ago and 49,673,432 two years ago.

Commodities Prices Mixed.

The week among the commodities was one of mixed trends. Wheat advanced sharply on heavy foreign buying, and while there was some profit selling, gains were general. Cotton lost some of its early advances on reports the acreage to be planted for the new crop would be considerably larger than last year.

Non-ferrous metals sagged on subsidence of foreign buying but toward the end of the period some futures pushed ahead. Rubber soared to new highs since 1929, spurred by reports of a strike situation among Malayan plantations.

Foreign exchange dealings were light, with fluctuations of European currencies against the dollar held to narrow ranges.

In the money market rates for bankers' acceptances and six months commercial paper moved upward in line with the increased yield on high grade bonds.

Slow Week-End Trade.

There were individual strong spots in today's stock market but the list as a whole idled in restricted territory.

Transfers of 531,590 were the smallest for any session since Sept. 12 last year. The Associated Press average of 60 issues edged up .3 of a point at 71.6.

News was fairly comforting from a market standpoint, but brokers found the few customers who appeared in the boardrooms inclined to do little or nothing while waiting for final accord in the Chrysler labor controversy. Secretary of Labor Perkins after the close said this was imminent.

The general disposition to go lightly was also attributed partly to the thought the Supreme Court Monday may hand down a ruling on the Wagner Labor Relations Act which might push the list one way or the other substantially.

Some of the steels, oils, rails, alcohols and specialties performed well on the upside.

The Homestake Mining "blue chip" jumped 37 points at the best on the proposal of a 5-for-1 split-up of this issue for the purpose of affording it a broader trading market. It closed up 33 points at 425.

Steels were still able to reflect the highest mill operating rate since 1929 and the heaviest demand in some instances since the World War.

Oils Given Lift.

A sharp upturn in 1936 net for Texas Corporation gave a handful of oils a lift. The utilities finished around their Thursday's closing levels, although earnings for these were interpreted as favorable. Several carriers were buoyed by expanding freight traffic, although Southern Pacific was backward as a strike vote was being taken by some of the roads' employe divisions. Alcohols took a turn for the better despite the relatively poor profits showing last year of U. S. Industrial.

Up fractions to a point or so were U. S. Steel at 118¼, Bethlehem 97, Santa Fe 81½, Baltimore & Ohio 38¼, Erie 22, Chesapeake & Ohio 59¼, Anaconda 64⅛, Kennecott 62, U. S. Industrial Alcohol 40¼, Schenley 49½, Macy 52⅜, American Tobacco "B" 84, Deere 124½, Goodrich 46½, Texas Corporation 59¾, Seaboard Oil 48, Republic Steel 45¼, Revere Copper 47 and American Rolling Mill 40⅝.

General Motors lost ⅛ at 63⅜ and Chrysler was up as much at 125½. Lower were Electric Power and Light at 23⅜, Douglas Aircraft 60⅝, United Aircraft 30⅞, du Pont 159¼, Dome Mines 46, Canada Dry 34, Union Carbide 104½ and Allis Chalmers 66¼.

U. S. Government securities improved but corporate bonds were a trifle uneven.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Most of the active European currencies maintained their relationships to the dollar within an extremely limited range during the week. Movement of funds appeared motivated almost entirely by commercial demand and there was little evidence of any operations by the various official controls.

Engagements of gold abroad, however, were on an accelerated scale, totaling $29,606,000 against $23,227,000 the preceding week. Of the total $27,128,000 was taken in England. The Federal Reserve Bank of New York reported that with this sum, engagements in London for America can account since last Sept. 25 aggregated $322,700,000.

Bankers were quick to point out, however, that a great proportion of this gold has passed through London merely as a forwarding point, and its movement had really originated in continental and other capitals.

Lessening of political tension in France had a beneficial effect on the franc and the discount on forward deliveries of the currency narrowed. The continued rise in rubber prices helped to steady the pound sterling despite heavy gold engagements.

The pound sterling was off slightly against the doling in routine foreign exchange trading Saturday.

The British unit declined 1-16 of a cent, as the Netherlands guilder improved by .01 of a cent. French and Swiss francs and Canadian dollars closed unchanged.

In unofficial dealings in London the dollar slipped ¼ of a cent ending at 4.88⅝ to the pound. It finished in the Paris market at the equivalent of 4.595 cents, unchanged as compared with the overnight New York rate.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Foreign exchange closing rates follow: Great Britain in dollars, others in cents. Great Britain, demand, 4.88 9-16; cables, 4.88 9-16; 60-day bills, 4.88 3-16. France, demand, 4.59½; cables, 4.59½. Italy, demand, 5.26¼; cables, 5.26¼.

n-Nominal.

PARIS, March 27.—In unofficial dealings, the United States dollar closed at 21.76¼ francs today (4.595 cents to the franc) compared with a similar New York closing rate yesterday.

LONDON, March 27.—The foreign exchange market was closed today, but in unofficial dealings the United States dollar declined 3-8 cent from Thursday, closing at 4.88⅝ to the pound. The final rate in New York Friday was also 4.88⅝.

French francs declined to 106.63 to the pound, compared with 106.35 Thursday.

LEAD, ZINC AND COPPER

Lead and zinc were nominally unchanged in St. Louis Saturday.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Metals nominally unchanged.

NEW YORK, March 27.—The St. Joseph Lead Co. reports that 75 tons of pig lead from Southeast Missouri mines were sold yesterday at $6.85 per 100 pounds St. Louis.

NEW YORK, March 27. — Lead and zinc futures closed quiet. No sales.

War Department Track Order.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The War Department awarded today a $115,069 contract for 72 light trucks to the Yellow Truck & Coach Manufacturing Co., a division of General Motors.

24TH YEARLY EXHIBIT AT ARTISTS' GUILD

Display of Original Works Opens Today and Lasts Through April 22.

Oil paintings and works of sculpture, many of them inspired by recent news events, will be displayed at the Artists' Guild, 812 Union boulevard, starting this afternoon and continuing through April 22. It is the twenty-fourth annual exhibition of original works done without the supervision of an instructor.

The display will be open daily from 1 to 5 p. m., except Tuesdays, and on Sundays between 3 and 5 p. m.

One of the 105 paintings portrays four well-dressed women walking on the picket line in front of the National Underwear Corporation, Boyle and Duncan avenues, where a strike was called on Feb. 3. Their fashionable coats contrast with the plain garments of the girl striker who walks with them carrying a large placard announcing the strikers "demand the right to organize and collective bargaining."

The painting, by Charles Quest, is called "Of Course They're Only Interested in the Poor Working Girl." Since the strike began many socially prominent women, divinity students and members of other unions have assisted in picketing.

Pictures of the Flood.

The recent Ohio Valley flood provided a subject for two artists, James B. Turnbull and Carolyn Horton Cowan. Turnbull's painting, called "Refugees," shows an utterly exhausted family of six persons sound cheap in a railroad waiting room, all their possessions in a small valise and cloth bag.

The mother is holding a baby at her breast. A small blond girl is sprawled awkwardly against her mother's shoulder, her mouth open. A boy and another small child are curled up asleep.

The show reveals some modern tendencies but none very extreme. An officer of the Guild described it as a "middle of the road" exhibition.

Four men, stripped to the waist, toiling over large vats in a St. Louis fur plant are portrayed in a painting by Fred Conway. It is called "Seal Blubbers" and shows the men scraping hides.

Drouth cattle, a buxom Negro girl listening to a phonograph record, a blind musician walking through a poor district, crowds at Miami Beach and aspects of country life are other subjects of paintings.

Artists Represented.

Besides those already mentioned, the following artists are represented: Helen Louise Beccard, Bernice Boeschenstein, Florence B. Brenner, Ann Marie Brown, Leola Bullivant, Alice Bunch, F. G. Carpenter, Ruth Emily Crone, Edith Hendy Cross, Eda Lincoln Cushing, Frieda Dickie, Carson Donnell, Edward M. Dunham, Mary S. Eames, Mary Dean Eaton, Mabel Meeker Edsall, Estelle Ehrmann, Augusta Finkelnburg, Evelyn Fitch, Alexander Kossakoff Galston, Charles F. Galt, E. V. Gauger, Jessie M. Gleyre, Gustav F. HOUSE COMMITTEE TO VISIT FLOOD AREA IN AUTO TOUR

About 12 Congressmen to Make Trip to Ohio Valley, Inspecting Dams and Sites.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—The House Flood Control Committee will leave Monday to inspect part of the area affected by Ohio River floods.

About 12 Congressmen intend to make the automobile tour, going first to Pittsburgh, inspecting parts of the Ohio and Muskingum valleys and returning Wednesday by way of the Tygart Dam in West Virginia.

Representative Gehrmann (Progressive), Wisconsin, said their main purpose will be to look over six dams under construction and sites for eight more which are intended to help control flood waters of the Ohio and some of its tributaries.

PICKERING LUMBER COMPANY REORGANIZATION APPROVED

U. S. District Judge Reeves Enters Order at Kansas City for Bondholders' Committee.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 27.—Reorganization plans of the Pickering Lumber Co. were finally approved by United States District Judge Albert L. Reeves here today.

The plan, worked out by majority members of a bondholders' committee, organized April 20, 1931, will be financed by a Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan not to exceed $2,500,000.

Co-operative Farming in Mexico

the area. As evidence of the hardships which this system worked on the native population they cite the long history of struggle in La Laguna.

Simultaneously with the beginning of work by the Agrarian Department in this region, the National Bank of Ejidal Credit, which was established for the purpose of financing ejidos or co-operative farms, opened a branch in Torreon, the center of La Laguna district. This bank, the focal point of the Mexican agrarian program, then began its task of organizing the peasants into ejidal. or co-operative, societies.

Co-operative Farming.

The ejidal system dates back to a time prior to the Spanish conquest of Mexico when the Indians of the country went out from their villages to collectively work the common land. The very word, ejido, used today to describe the co-operative farms in Mexico, stems from a latinised version of the Greek word for exodus. In this connection, Mexicans who are employed on the land reform program never tire of saying that despite certain obvious similarities to the Russian system, theirs is really one of native origin and is designed to meet the needs of the Mexican people.

Under the system as it operates now, the Ejidal Bank makes a population and land survey of a given district and sets up ejidal or co-operative societies to which it distributes the land free of charge. The peasants own the land collectively and so long as they work it there is no legal possibility of their losing title.

The Bank and the Peasants.

Having distributed the land, the bank then begins its manifold administrative tasks. Its engineers and agricultural experts advise the peasants on irrigation and soil cultivation problems, and decide the type of crop to be planted; the bank's financial experts make loans to the co-operative societies; its lawyers settle problems that arise under the agrarian code; its social experts and school teachers organize the village life and direct education; doctors on its staff take care of health problems.

Despite its power, however, every effort is made to avoid any dictatorship by the bank. Thus, all of the officials of the farming communities are elected by the peasants, and only the zone chiefs, who maintain contact between the bank and the various co-operative societies in each administrative zone, are appointed by the bank. In addition, all decisions which do not affect the bank's—and thence the Government's—investment in the project, are arrived at by the vote of the peasants themselves. There is every reason to believe that any danger of misuse of its power by the bank would be met by an aggressive attitude on the part of the peasants, similar to that which they have shown in the past.

Loans on Crops.

The Ejidal Bank makes three types of loans to the peasants. These loans are guaranteed by mortgages on the crops only. The peasants, in turn, may not sell or borrow on their land, farm animals or equipment.

The first of these loans is made in the form of an advance on the year's expected crop profit. This money is in lieu of wages and is paid to the ejidal workers weekly. Amounts that the peasants thus receive vary according to the expected profits and the length and nature of the work done by the individual. Taking the average of a 300-day working year, each peasant receives a minimum of 1.50 pesos for each working day of eight hours. (A peso is worth about 28c in United States currency but has much greater purchasing power in Mexico.) This advance on profits is to be paid back with interest at 8 per cent at the end of each year.

Other Types of Loans.

The second type of loan is made for the purchase of farm animals and new equipment, and for the construction of irrigation ditches, farm buildings, etc. The loan is made for a five-year period and is to be repaid in yearly amounts of one-fifth of the principal with 8 per cent interest.

The third type of loan will be made for long terms on projects that affect the life of the entire area rather than that of a single ejido or zone. Under this heading will presumably come cottonseed oil mills, electric plants, irrigation canals and similar construction planned by the bank. These loans are to be pro-rated among the peasants of the area and will carry 8 per cent interest.

If the interest rate, 8 per cent, seems high, it should be remembered that similar loans made by private banks in Mexico usually carry interest of 12 per cent.

More Water to Be Provided.

In addition to the aid which the peasants receive from the bank in the form of loans, they also get the benefit of other projects which are financed by various Government departments. One example is the large dam now being built by the Federal Government on the Nazas River about 100 miles from La Laguna region. This dam is expected to be completed in three years and will make additional water and power available to the area at low cost. A central agricultural college is also being built in the district and it will be administered by the bank, although financed by the Federal Department of Education.

23 Zones in District.

La Laguna has been divided into 23 administrative zones. Each zone has its chief, appointed by the bank, and he in turn has assistants who are elected by the peasants of the zone. On each co-operative farm there are a number of foremen who are elected by the members and whose terms of office last only from one to two weeks.

The number of co-operative farms in a zone varies according to population. The ejidos, or farms, also vary in size, but distribution of the land has been made on the basis of four hectares (roughly 10 acres), to each family head. There are more than 30,000 peasant families on the collectively owned lands and each family has an average of five members. For convenience the land is divided into lots, each composed of 100 hectares and having 25 families to work it. One or more lots make an ejido. Throughout the district the average size of such farms is two lots, or about 500 acres, although some are much larger. Seventeen thousand mules and 300 tractors are used to work the 300 ejidos in the area. The remainder of the 2,500,000 acres is either used for pasture land or is desert, needing water before being fit for agricultural purposes.

Dry Farming.

The same methods of dry farming which were used by the private landowners are in effect. The organization of the work is still much the same because it was always done on a large scale. What is different now, the bank officials point out, is that the peasants divide the profits among themselves. At the end of the present year, it is estimated by the bank, the average peasant on an ejido will have a net profit of 448 pesos, plus one-fifth of the value of his equipment and other benefits, including medical services.

The collective land is exclusive of that on which the peasants live. At present most of their villages are those which existed on the private estates. In setting up the ejidos, however, and dividing the land, the Ejidal Bank took into consideration the fact that not only would the old homes have to be reconstructed, but that in many cases entirely new village sites would be needed. These sites have already been set aside and the bank now contemplates a vast building program by which the old, insanitary and inconvenient homes will be replaced by modern ones for each family. This program it plans to begin immediately after the spring planting.

Plans for Future.

Next year the bank expects to build warehouses, in which consumers' goods not produced in the district can be stored for distribution to the peasants. In this way it is hoped to have a constant interchange of products taking place between various regions under the bank's administration in different parts of the country. The plan also calls for the erection of retail co-operative stores in each farming community.

When the estates were taken over and divided among the peasants the problem arose as to what was to be done with the livestock and equipment owned by the companies. No provision existed in the Mexican law for its expropriation, but the bank needed it for the ejidos and offered to buy it for cash. The British companies, after consulting their Government through Stanley Dutton Pegram, the British Vice-Consul in Torreon, agreed to sell. Such representatives of these companies as the writer talked to expressed themselves as well satisfied with the prices they received.

On the other hand, many Mexican and Spanish landowners decided to stand on a strict interpretation of the law. Some pulled the electric pumps from the artesian wells that dot the region, drove their mules off into the mountains and in other ways attempted to discourage the Government from carrying out its plans. These tactics failed when the bank announced a time limit for the purchase of animals and materials. Most of the animals and equipment then were returned and sold to the bank.

The word expropriation as used in Mexico to describe Government seizure of land means that, under the law, agrarian bonds will be given to the landowners in payment for their property. The fact that these bonds at present have a fluctuating market price far below their par value is a source of concern to former landholders of La Laguna. The British Government has so far taken no action, but it has reserved the right to make claim on behalf of its nationals in the region who have been affected by the land reform. Mexicans who were private landowners are in no position to dispute the action of their Government and the Spaniards have found their hands tied because of the war now raging in Spain.

The Ejidal Bank.

The Ejidal Bank, whose task it is to administer the affairs of 150,000 peasants in La Laguna region, was founded in January, 1936. Its capital of 120,000,000 pesos was subscribed in this way: 100,000,000 pesos by the Federal Government, 5,000,000 pesos by private interests, and 15,000,000 pesos by the various State governments in whose territories it operates. Its structure is that of a stock company and its plan is to sell shares to the same peasants it was founded to help, so that eventually they will become its owners.

Carlos M. Peralta, the president of the bank, has held many important posts in the Federal and State governments. He was appointed to his present position by Cardenas. Since last October, Peralta has spent most of his time in the Torreon office, from there directing the work of that branch, of the central office in Mexico, D. F., and of 29 other branches throughout the republic.

No Charge for Service.

For its many services to the peasants the bank charges no fee. Its expenses are met solely by the interest it receives on loans. For its first year's work in La Laguna the bank expects to make a profit of 1,400,000 pesos. This expected profit will be used to pay losses incurred by some of its other branches.

The democratic attitude existing between the bank officials and the peasants will perhaps best be illustrated by an incident that occurred while the writer was visiting La Laguna with Peralta.

We were walking through the ejido of Santa Theresa, site of the new agricultural college that is expected to open this year with 100 students from the region, when Peralta stopped to talk to some workers. They immediately began to complain to him that they had no water for their alfalfa crop.

"If you have no water why did you plant alfalfa?" the bank's president demanded.

The workers answered that after planting the crop the artesian wells they had depended on had been given to the agricultural college. Now, they said, the crop would die. They wanted the bank to advance them money for a new well.

Saving a Crop.

Peralta told them that it was very expensive to sink and electrically equip wells in that district.

"Three years from now," he said "the new dam will be finished. Then you'll have all the cheap water and power you need. You fellows have suffered for years. Be patient and suffer a little more."

"But what about our crop?" the workers asked.

"Your well was given to the college," Peralta said. "Now the college must arrange to give you enough water for your crop." And he turned to an assistant and ordered that the matter be attended to. At that, the workers laughed, slapped Peralta on the back and shook hands with him, satisfied that their problem would be solved.

Plans for Extension.

The work in La Laguna is not an isolated experiment of the Mexican Government. The Ejidal Bank is already carrying out similar projects in the states of Yucatan, Tabasco and Vera Cruz. Furthermore, President Cardenas told the writer that very shortly the Government would start such work in the State of Sonora, where there are numerous American interests.

"In Matamoros," he added, "which is very important because of its closeness to the border, national lands will be used in the same way. There the flood waters of the Rio Grande will be utilized for the growing cotton, and the unemployed peasants now in the cities and many Mexican nationals who are unemployed in the United States, will be given land."

Criticism Friendly and Otherwise.

What can this agrarian program now being given its test in La Laguna region be called?

The reactionaries call it Communism and speak harshly of it. Some of its admirers also call it Communism. The Communist party secretary in La Laguna, where his organization has between 500 and 600 members, said that it was a reformist program, progressive in nature but subject to all the dangers that a "still-capitalist society can inflict on it." Many liberals in Mexico told the writer that if the plan succeeds it will avert "both Communism and Fascism."

President Cardenas in speaking of the program calls it an attempt at social justice. Today, largely as the result of his efforts, tractors are snorting across the land of La Laguna, mules in spans of four are pulling harrows, and on every farm gangs of peasants are cleaning and repairing irrigation ditches. The country is full of activity, there is a sense of excitement in the air. And this year, for the first time in the modern history of La Laguna, the men who actually work the land also own it.

15 NEW WPA PROJECTS FOR CITY AND COUNTY

Part of 37 Being Created to Provide Work for 2400 on Census Indexing.

Fifteen of 37 new W P A projects to be created to provide work for 2400 white-collar workers employed in indexing the 1900 census for use in administering the Social Security Act, which will be completed next Wednesday, were announced yesterday by Lloyd Greathouse, W P A director for St. Louis and St. Louis County.

Some of the census workers already have been put to work on existing W P A activities and efforts are being made to provide employment for all by the time the census index is completed.

The largest of the new jobs will be an index of vital statistics records for the Missouri State Board of Health. The work of listing 3,000,000 names is expected to provide employment for 578 persons. The security wage rate of from $55 to $94 a month, which was paid for the census work, will be continued.

The 14 other new undertakings are sponsored by St. Louis, St. Louis County or suburban towns, which will provide supplies, employment costs being paid from Federal funds. About 40 persons will be employed in indexing St. Louis vital statistics. Ten will be assigned to checking stores and 1400 taverns in St. Louis County to determine if they have proper licenses.

A traffic survey in St. Louis, to provide data for safety programs, will employ 138, and an enumeration of advertising signs along highways in St. Louis County will require the services of 10 workers.

Other projects announced and the number of employes to be assigned each, were: Indexing, 115,000 cases in St. Louis Probate Court files, 23; survey of house numbers in Kirkwood, 34; indexing city clerk's records, University City, 13; indexing records of persons naturalized here since 1902, eight; survey in University City to determine how much property zoned for commercial use is used for business purposes, eight; indexing Maplewood police records, eight; indexing records of Board of Children's Guardians, eight; copying new record of county patients at institutions for St. Louis County Auditor, three, and preparing cost records in St. Louis Circuit Courts, five.

MAESTRE DIRECTS LINDBERGH ANNIVERSARY DINNER PLANS

C. of C. Board Chairman Put in Charge of Banquet May 28 Inaugurating Air Race.

Sidney Maestre, board chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, has been named head of a committee to make plans for a dinner May 28 in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's flight from New York to Paris.

The dinner, to be given under auspices of the Chamber of Commerce air board, will inaugurate the first international aerobatic contest and St. Louis air race, to be held at Lambert-St. Louis Field May 28 to 31.

Invitations for the dinner, honoring the original backers of the Lindbergh flight, have been sent to prominent figures in aviation. Fred D. Fagg, newly appointed director of the Bureau of Air Commerce, is expected to attend.

ANTON LANG JR. TO SPEAK HERE

Son of Oberammergau Christus to Tell of Bavarian Alps.

Anton Lang Jr., son of the man who portrayed Christ in the passion plays at Oberammergau, will speak on "Treasure Hunting in the Bavarian Alps" before the Washington University Association Wednesday evening at 8:15 o'clock at Soldan High School, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue.

Lang is a member of the faculty of Georgetown University. His lecture will be illustrated.

$3,425,205 Spent Up to March 8, Of $16,100,000 of City Bonds of '34

However, $8,822,888 of Total Has Been Appropriated for Work Begun—Status of Various Projects.

Out of the $16,100,000 bond issue for a variety of public improvements voted May 15, 1934, the city had spent only $3,425,205 up to March 8, it was shown yesterday in an inspection of records by a Post-Dispatch reporter.

However, ordinances have been passed appropriating $8,822,888 of the fund, leaving $5,397,683 available for expenditures as work progresses.

So far, the city has sold $10,100,000 of the bonds authorized, receiving a premium aggregating $26,367. Interest on the bonds outstanding costs the taxpayers $296,250 a year.

Sales of bonds were: Feb. 1, 1935, $3,500,000 bearing interest at 3 per cent, with a premium of $6475; Oct. 1, 1935, $3,500,000, interest 3¼ per cent, premium $11,165; May 1, 1936, $3,100,000, interest 2½ per cent, premium $8727. No additional sale has been proposed yet.

One principal object of the bond issue was to provide work, relieving unemployment, in connection with the P W A program.

Only one of the bond items has been used up—$900,000 for the completion of the interior of the Convention Hall, 27 committee rooms and other facilities at Municipal Auditorium. A nominal balance of $1662 remains.

Sewer Construction.

For another item—$1,500,000 for sewer construction—committments have been made to expend the whole fund and, in fact, there has been an overdraft of $2754 in appropriations, but expenditures have amounted to only $776,621. Of the appropriations, $1,029,000 has been devoted to the big Southern Arsenal Relief Sewer, $291,654 to additional work on the River des Peres Drainage Works, $124,800 to the Thirteenth Street Sewer, running largely under Twelfth boulevard downtown, and the balance to two lesser undertakings.

No bonds have been sold under one item—$1,000,000 for grade crossing elimination. President Baxter L. Brown of the Board of Public Service said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that this fund was held in reserve because the city still had $531,000 in a 1923 grade crossing bond item. He said the 1934 fund would be used for paying consequential damages to property adjoining sites of improvements, and pointed out that the railroads had been unwilling to consider any undertakings except those for which the Federal Government has been paying in full.

Work on Hospitals.

Largest of all the items was $7,000,000 for an extensive program of enlargement and improvement of virtually all the city eleemosynary institutions. Under this, $2,950,000 in bonds has been sold, $2,590,918 of the proceeds appropriated and only $433,545 expended so far.

These appropriations were: Site for Malcolm A. Bliss Psycopathic Hospital, adjoining City Hospital on the north, $127,668; construction of this institution, $1,000,000; new service building and power plant at City Hospital, $616,750; portion of the cost of the new Homer G. Phillips Hospital, for Negroes, $240,000; improvements at Koch Hospital, for the tubercular, $291,500; improvements at City Sanitarium, for the insane, $315,000.

Work is under way at Bliss, City and Koch hospitals and the sanitarium. Phillips Hospital was dedicated recently but has not yet been opened.

President Brown said that Bliss Hospital was the most desired of all the improvements, as it would replace the unsatisfactory observation ward at City Hospital. The Hospital Commissioner asked to have this job pushed ahead of others, he said. The foundations are going up and plans for the superstructure are being completed. Brown said it would take considerable time to develop plans for additional hospital work.

Status of Other Items.

The status of the other seven items of the 1934 bond issue follows:

Completion of interior and of stone steps of Civil Courts Building, $600,000—$475,000 in bonds sold and same amount appropriated; $163,588 spent, but pending contracts will virtually use up the appropriation. Three hitherto unfinished floors are being completed, two court rooms and a central jury assignment room installed and new quarters provided for Probate Court. The stone steps, the absence of which after erection of the main structure figured in past political campaigns, were built some time ago, together with accompanying terraces.

Memorial Plaza and Soldiers' Memorial Building, $1,900,000 — $1,075,000 in bonds sold and the same sum appropriated; $339,684 paid out, but the $1,000,000 building is well along. No plan has been made for embellishment of the remaining six city blocks of the plaza but President Brown said a fountain had been suggested as a principal feature, to be considered after the building was finished. There was talk of erecting a Hall of Records on the plaza also, but the Law Department held this would be illegal, Brown recalled. A proposal to transfer $500,000 of the plaza bonds to sewer work was defeated by the voters last August.

Aloe Plaza, $100,000—Bonds all sold and $47,500 appropriated, to pay the city's share of the cost of the Carl Millies fountain, with a bill pending in an aldermanic committee to appropriate the balance for incidental construction in connection with the fountain. Mrs. Louis P. Aloe, for whose late husband this plaza opposite Union Station was named, will pay $12,500 of the fountain cost.

Armory Under Construction.

New armory for 138th Infantry, National Guard, $1,000,000—Bonds all issued and proceeds appropriated; $157,448 spent. The armory is under construction, on the south side of Market street, between Prospect and Spring avenues.

New police stations, $700,000—Bonds all issued and the money appropriated; $394,582 spent. Two stations have been built and opened, at Deer street and Easton avenue, and at Hampton boulevard and Watson avenue. Two others are under construction, at Twelfth and Lynch streets and on Lucas avenue, west of Garrison avenue. Plans are being drawn for the fifth, at Nineteenth and Penrose streets.

Establishing, opening and widening streets, $1,000,000—Bonds all sold; $131,716 appropriated; $116,834 spent. This has been regarded by the city administration as a revolving fund; to facilitate various street improvements. The Comptroller's office has considered it as a fund for direct payment of the city's share of costs of right-of-way. The only expenditure so far has been for right-of-way for the express highway.

Negro community centers, $400,000—bonds all sold and proceeds appropriated; $127,561 spent. Appropriations were: Vashon Community Center, $105,000; Vashon Playground, on which this center was built, $233,050; Gamble Park, $61,950. The city bought the Vashon and Gamble sites. The Vashon building has been virtually completed but not opened. Buildings are to be erected at Gamble Park and on Tandy Playground. As in other items, this fund was augmented by P W A grants.

The city so far has received $2,325,227 in grants from the Public Works Administration, much of this being applicable to work under the 1934 bond issue, but some of it going with municipal revenue or 1923 bond funds.

Meeting Carrying Charges.

A Citizens' Committee on City Finance, headed by W. L. Hemingway, banker, appointed several months after passage of the 1934 bond issue, because of the complicated financial problem of paying interest and principal on bonds without materially increasing the general tax rate, recommended Nov. 14, 1934, that not more than $3,000,000 of the total issue be sold before November, 1936. This advice was disregarded.

Comptroller Louis Nolte, who opposed the bond issue, which was sponsored by Mayor Dickmann, issued repeated warnings that adequate provision would have to be made to pay the carrying charges. His attitude at first forced a delay in selling bonds, until taxes were provided. There was a long legislative controversy over raising of new taxes for this purpose.

In the 1933 municipal election, when Dickmann became Mayor, a proposition to cancel $1,500,000 in Municipal Bridge approach bonds and issue an equal amount for the Negro hospital was defeated by 3265 votes out of a total of 206,501 cast. The 11 items of the 1934 issue won in a special election by an average of about 112,000 "yes" votes to 28,000 "no."

Other Bond Elections.

There have been four other bond elections during the Dickmann administration, with the following results:

Nov. 21, 1933, the Negro hospital-bridge approach proposition, resubmitted, passed with 102,208 "yes" votes and 9482 "no" at a special election. The money has been spent on Phillips Hospital.

April 2, 1935, a $3,600,000 relief bond issue won in the aldermanic election, 114,322 to 20,689. This fund has been exhausted.

In the special election of Sept. 10, 1935, in which the Post-Dispatch later exposed wholesale fraud, the river-front memorial bond issue of $7,500,000 passed, 123,133 to 50,574, with a margin of only 7328 above the required two-thirds majority, and an $800,000 item for new rail approaches of Municipal Bridge passed, 123,652 to 48,392. The memorial has been tied up by litigation but the bridge work has been undertakeh.

In the primary last August, four bond propositions, involving a net increase of $850,000 in indebtedness, were narrowly defeated, with affirmative votes running 100,000 to 110,000 each and negative votes running 71,000 to 81,000.

ARABS INJURED IN MAKING BOMBS FOR USE IN PALESTINE

Ammunition Left By British in World War Gathered By Them.

JERUSALEM, Palestine, March 27.—Nearly every week an Arab terrorist is injured in his efforts to make bombs to use against soldiers, police, Jews or other Arabs.

The industry utilizes ammunition left when the Turks were driven from Palestine by Lord Allenby's army in 1918. Artillery shells have been gathered since the World War by Arabs, who use them in making bombs and mines.

Officers investigating explosions in private homes near the Wailing Wall recently found bombs in the headquarters of the Jerusalem National Committee. The committee denied knowledge of the bombs.

Unwritten Checks Curb Parliament

lies and a certain amount of valuable truth on important questions is frequently extracted from them. Sometimes, too, the refusal to answer fully and frankly, or a declination to say anything at all, serves a useful purpose in enlightening the public and the opposition as to the Government's policy on the issue involved.

The opposition party in the House also serves as more of a check on the British Government than does the minority party in Congress upon the administration. To begin with, the opposition has an official status under the British constitution. Its leaders are the men who would be called upon by the King to form a Government should the one in power be defeated. This tends to force the Government to be as explicit as possible in defending its legislative program against the attack of the opposition. It also makes the opposition more cautious than it might otherwise be in attacking the Government's program and in offering uncritical amendments to Government bills, since such commitments might well be used against it in the subsequent general election campaign.

Force of Public Opinion.

But, in the last analysis, the greatest and final check upon any British Government is the force of public opinion. This is brought to bear in the usual manner, through the newspapers, political speeches, public meetings, etc. A definite periodic check-up on the state of opinion is available to the Government, however, through parliamentary by-elections. When a member of the House dies a parliamentary election is held in the constituency he represented and the results of such elections enable the Government to gauge the drift of public opinion since the previous general election. When, as frequently happens, the Government loses a seat in a constituency which it normally holds, it is a pretty certain sign that it has lost in popularity since the general election. A series of such by-elections would plainly indicate to the Government that it was losing the support of the electorate.

The reality of the influence of public opinion upon British governments has been demonstrated on several important occasions since the war. When the late Bonar Law formed a Conservative government upon the defeat of Lloyd George's post-armistice coalition Government, he gave a pledge not to introduce a policy of protective tariffs. Upon his death, the present Prime Minister, Stanley Baldwin, succeeded to the leadership of the Conservative party and to the office of Prime Minister.

He was pestered by the right wing of his party to introduce protective tariff legislation, though the liberal element of his following advised against it, and the Liberals and Laborites shouted their shrill opposition.

Finally he yielded to his die-hard supporters. But, in view of Bonar Law's pledge, he called a general election at the end of 1923 to obtain public support for such a policy. Though his party was returned with the largest number of members in the House, the Laborites and Liberals together made up a majority, with Labor having the second largest representation. Baldwin resigned. The King sent for Ramsay MacDonald, who formed a government, with the support of the Liberals, the first Labor government in the history of Great Britain.

Hoare-Laval Proposal.

Another striking, and fairly recent, manifestation of the power of British public opinion on the Government was toward the close of the Italo-Abyssinian war, when the famous (or infamous) Hoare-Laval proposal for the partitioning of Ethiopia in agreement with Italy was disclosed through the usual news leak in Paris. The policy involved was diametrically opposed to all that the British Government had professed from the beginning of that conflict and a violation of the utterances of its spokesmen during the general election campaign a few months previously.

There was an immediate outcry not only from Labor and Liberal opposition leaders and newspapers but from many of his own party supporters as well. Baldwin did not try to defend himself beyond saying that, were his lips unsealed, he could explain everything. But Sir Samuel Hoare, then Foreign Minister, and since restored to favor as First Lord of the Admiralty, had to resign, and the British Government withdrew from the agreement.

Thus, without the restrictive powers of a Supreme Court or the limitations imposed by a written constitution, the British Government is restrained by the fear of the voting power of the electorate, the mobilizing ability of public opinion and whatever degree of obligation of fair play, decency and responsibility to the people it may possess.

$8000 SOUGHT FOR CLINIC

Money to Be Used for Birth Control Work.

The Maternal Health Association of Missouri, which maintains birth control clinics for married women of small income, will start a campaign tomorrow to raise $8000 for the support of the Kirkwood-Webster and St. Louis clinics.

Dr. Paul J. Zentay was recently elected president of the association. Other officers are Mrs. Walter Fischel, secretary; Mrs. James C. Seddon Jr., assistant secretary; Mr. Philo S. Stevenson, treasurer, and Mrs. Henry Hitchcock, assistant treasurer. Vice-presidents are Dr. Park J. White, Mrs. Edwin Lee, Mrs. Sam B. Grant and Dr. Grandison D. Royston.

The MODERN INDUSTRIAL SCENE

Four Paintings From the Labor Front by Maynard Dixon, American Artist.

"Keep Moving."

ON THIS page the Post-Dispatch reproduces in color four paintings in which a recognized master of the romantic West turns to the modern scene—which, actually, was borne in upon him by frontal attack in the San Francisco general strike of 1934, for Maynard Dixon is the artist, and San Francisco is his home.

The strike paintings which these exemplify are in detailed contrast to the work for which he has been best known. It is hardly necessary to point out the brooding light of these and their profoundly sober key. His best-known Western work is distinguished rather by the brilliance essential to its sun-shot subject matter, by an almost Indian zest and daring in the handling of color and, in its earlier phases, by a complexity of pattern which may have come to him from Indian sources. But he has moved steadily toward the simplification of externals demonstrated here, and since 1921 he has sought the romance of the West only in its realities.

Born in Fresno, California, in 1875, he absorbed early the sense of immensities in the San Joaquin plains, the high-colored tales of the plainsmen, the loneliness of the lost, low towns. They have remained the basis of most of his work. At 16 he sent his sketch-book to Remington, and received a note of encouragement and advice that set him on his road. He has done newspaper work, magazine and book illustration, and a great deal of commercial art, which he abandoned in 1921, but, except for five years in New York, has stayed at home in the West. Of some local interest to St. Louisans, his recent murals include an overmantel painting in the home of Dr. William Dock, now of San Francisco.

The SINISTER TATTOO MURDERS of KANSAS CITY

How Men Were Literally Marked for Death and Why the Hoboes' Philanthropist, Beneficiary of His Victim's Life Insurance Policy, Has Just Been Convicted of Second Degree Murder.

Charles D. Ernest, convicted of murder in the tattoo insurance cases, who, the police say, manipulated his grisly plans under the name of Kelly.

KANSAS CITY, Missouri.

ALONG the shabby North Side streets shabby men, lack luster and unshaven, slither along the curbs. Now and again one stoops to snag a butt or sidling insinuatingly up to a passing pedestrian, mooches a dime. Pillowed on a rolled up jacket, here and there one takes his ease, turning a leathery and grizzled visage to the failing sun. Where they gather in little sedentary knots to kill the day with slow inconclusive gossip, they're still ringing variations on the tale of Crying Hank Burke, battered to death for his insurance.

Not that Crying Hank's kind of demise is anything so appalling to a gandy. The gandy, or floater, is up against a life that is tough, hard-boiled and uncertain. When he tries to forget this in "derail"—which is nothing more than rubbing alcohol—or in "smoke"—which is alcohol and water—he usually gets picked up, pumped out and knocked around a little for good measure. What causes the gandies to continue talking about Crying Hank and the insurance murder is the fact that Hank was tattooed. His right arm was marked with his name and the cryptic figure:

2819 E 9 K C

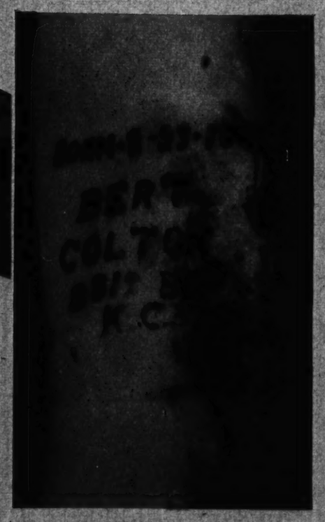
He wasn't the only gandy who bore that mark. A great many others were likewise branded. Nobody knows exactly how many. At least no one has said. But today everybody feels pretty sure that those seemingly incomprehensible symbols spell death. It's an eerie thing having men walking around in the streets marked for death. Even if it now appears that some of the intended victims have gotten off. For the man suspected of being their potentional assassin has come to grief.

Of interest to this part of the population was the account of Crying Hank's funeral. He was buried from the Tigerman undertaking parlors. Lying on his bier he wore a $55 suit and a $5 shirt. The cost of the flowers alone was probably more money than Crying Hank had seen in a year. The whole show cost $745. And the bill went to a man known as Charles Kelly.

As Kelly he was familiar to most of the floaters. He appeared often in their dives and hang-outs. He seemed to have money, though he wore old clothes and consorted with the down-and-out. On more than one occasion he had staked a comrade to a flop or a derail. Some of them were perhaps a little leary of Kelly. They say so now, at any rate. On the whole, though, he was looked on as a benefactor. He talked about money to the floaters. That is a favorite topic. And he seemed to know where to get money, though he wasn't a red hot. Not that any self-respecting gandy would ever ask about such things. Where a man gets his wherewithal is nobody's concern but his own in these circles. It would be highly tactless to bring up such a subject openly. And floaters know that only a fool ever lets it be known that he has money on him. Kelly, who was supposed to be a brother of Cyclone Kelly, a well-known member of the brotherhood, was generally conceded to be harmless and a decidedly good sort of fool.

But after Crying Hank's death floaters became suspicious. Crying Hank wasn't the first of their number to die—mysteriously and inexplicably. It is now more than a year ago since Cyclone Kelly died apparently of medicated derail, though nobody would swear to it. After Crying Hank's death the grapevine began to hum with stories of special investigators — not city cops, but some kind of insurance agents —checking up on the man known as Charles Kelly. When this proved to be true and the insurance company detectives were actually seen talking to some of the men who had known Hank, three of the boys who had known Charles Kelly said they were ready to come out and tell what they knew. The insurance detectives made out quite a case. And when they got through, they turned it over to the Kansas City police. Here is what the police found out.

Bert Colton, one of the tattooed men of the north side of Kansas City who escaped death.



Photograph showing tattoo marks on Colton's arm which, he says, were partly eradicated by acid.

WHILE they were investigating, checking up on the insurance company agents' findings, a grizzly man wearing a mustache and exhibiting the papery pallor and leather neck of a typical down-and-outer came into headquarters, pulled up his sleeve and bared a badly swollen and discolored arm. He said his name was Bert Colton. He wanted to talk about Charles Kelly.

He had known the man they called Kelly for eight years, he said; never heard him called anything but Kelly, though that might not be his real name. One day he met him at the corner of Missouri avenue and Main street. Kelly challenged him to drink a half pint of derail. If he could down that mush, Kelly said he'd buy him three bottles. "I drank the half pint to show him I was a man," said Colton, "but I didn't take the other three bottles."

Presently, he said, Kelly brought up the subject of life insurance, said he'd like to take out a policy on Colton so there would be money to give him a decent burial when he died. After a little discussion Colton agreed that he would like a nice funeral and wouldn't object to the policy. So Kelly took him to a tattoo artist. His arm was marked with the symbols—2819 E 9 K C. From there the two went to an insurance office. The insurance agent showed Colton a paper. He couldn't read it, but he signed. Then Kelly had him sign another paper, not explaining what it was. Colton trusted him, thought Kelly was just doing him a kindness. He was grateful. He was also pretty tight.

"About six weeks ago," Colton continued, "I was taken to the office of an insurance man to make a statement, an' after that I met Kelly again an' he asked me if I wanted to get that tattoo mark off my arm an' I told him I did." They bought a bottle with some acid in it and they went to an old deserted school house on the North Side—a place well known to the gandy fellowship.

"Well, Bert," said Kelly, "I paid for it. You pour it on." "I tried," Colton told the police, "but the acid hurt so bad I cried 'Lord have mercy! It's burning my arm off!'" So Kelly poured the acid on. The pain was fierce. Kelly saw his arm yellow and felt it sear. He didn't sleep that night. When he showed it to a friend the next day, the friend took him to City Hall to see a doctor and have it treated. The fatal brand didn't vanish.

The police didn't have any trouble doping out the meaning of that brand. It was a street address: 2819 East Ninth street, Kansas City. When they looked it up, this proved to be the home and business address of Charles D. Ernest, an attorney and a cleaner and weaver of rugs. Ernest had been suing the insurance company which held Crying Hank's policy. He claimed to be the beneficiary of the policy and asked the Circuit Court to award him $3100 in addition to interest and special expense. He was secretly taken into custody.

Detectives then checked up at the undertaking establishment and found that they had charged Ernest $745 for the funeral. They showed investigators the itemized statement. Item, one business suit, $55. Item, underwear, $2.50. Item, one shirt, $5. Item, flowers, $50. Item, plastic surgery, $25. Item, personal service, $50. The last item may have referred to the collection of Crying Hank's remains at the Morgue, whither he was brought from the black and stinking alley in which he had been found beaten to death, his head bashed in. Crying Hank had been buried in a manner that would indicate to anyone interested that he was a well-to-do respectable business man.

One of the first people the police looked up was the tattoo artist who had branded Bert Colton. He proved to be a certain James Malcom and was not unwilling to tell what he knew. He had been acquainted with Charles Kelly for about four years, he said. Kelly had brought about a dozen men to him subsequently, he said. In each case he had been ordered to write the man's name on his arm and underneath, the cryptic 2819 E 9 K C. He got 25 or 50 cents for each job, he said.

WHEN Cyclone Kelly's body was exhumed and the mysterious symbol was found on his arm, still plain and well preserved, it looked like a clear case against Kelly's alleged brother, the man who had been seen so frequently in his company. His remains were chemically examined to determine the cause of death. Kelly, it will be remembered, was a former prize fighter. In the coroner's report he was declared to have died from drinking poisonous alcohol.

The Kansas City police sent out a report asking other stations to report any discoveries of transients tattooed with the letters and figures found on Kelly's and Crying Hank Burke's arm. Almost immediately a man blessed with the picturesque sobriquet Twenty-Pound Dog was picked up in Oregon. His real name is Billy Welch.

Another floater, a lunger, Altus J. Dilley by name, was found in Albuquerque, New Mexico. He exhibited his mark and described Kelly fondly. Kelly had been kind to him in Kansas City, he said. He would buy him meals and cigarettes and even clothes. But Dilley, more cagey than his name intimates, was wary of his benefactor. In the spring of 1934 he agreed to sign over his veteran's bonus to Kelly and did so. But when he got a tip that Kelly was "insuring sick men" like himself and having them tattooed, he had the bonus papers transferred to his sister's name.

"Kelly was always telling me what he would do for me when he got a lot of money," Dilley continued. "When I heard he was insuring all the bunch, I got suspicious. He suggested I get his address tattooed on my arm, so in case I died the authorities would know who to contact."

Since the address on the arms of all these men, the quick and the dead, was Charles Ernest's and since all the men who were called in to tell about "Kelly" identified Ernest as the man they had known by that name, the suspect was held without bond.

It turned out that Charles Ernest, a graduate of Kansas City Law School who practiced rug cleaning because the law business wasn't any too good (he had gotten his degree late in life), was strangely addicted to buying life insurance. He purchased policies as freely as other men shop for neckties. He had taken out eight small policies on the life of his wife. In addition

The HARROWING Case of FRANCE'S LIVING UNKNOWN SOLDIER

His Memory Was Destroyed in the War and Thousands Have Declared That He Was Their Own Particular Missing Brother, Husband or Son.

The son of Mme. Mazat as he appeared in 1914 before he disappeared in the war, and whose picture had a close resemblance to "Mangin," the living unknown soldier.

"There was an outburst from the seekers. 'That is he! That is he!' most of them shouted excitedly."

The unknown living soldier of France as he appears today.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS, France.

THE symbol of the Unknown Soldier, so arresting at the end of the war, has never become exactly trite even to the most crusty non-combatants. The spectacle of those boyish guardsmen stalking up and down before a marble tomb remains sharply pointed with true sentiment even when one more than half suspects it to be a tiresome vigil for those who keep it. Especially affecting for those who lost a son or husband, the symbol becomes almost excrutiatingly significant to those who once went through the agony of tearing open an official telegram burning with the cryptic torture words: Reported missing. For many of these the years held no endearments that could salve the ulcerous doubt. Their lost soldier might be "the" unknown. He might—who could ever know for sure—be yet alive.

But if to contemplate the taciturn face of a tomb be torment for such mourners, how much more terrible the spectacle of a living unknown soldier—a man half recognized, whose lost memory might be restored, if they themselves could only be certain to penetrate the camera oscura of 19 years.

France has such an unknown soldier. He is a man who seems to be in his middle forties. Physically he is in good health. Mentally he is still subject to moments when the hideous fear that killed his memory revives on slight provocation. To cross-examine him on the details of the past he is still fleeing is pure torture. Obviously his subconscious mind is still wrapped up in a blanket of inner terrors it refuses to throw off. His name is Mangin — for purposes of identification—and he lives at the sanitarium in Rodez, a town of 11,000 in the Southern Department of Aveyron. Mangin has become the patron saint of a pathetic cult of hopeless hope. Thousands of old men and women have looked at him and sworn he was their son. War widows have declared him surely their lost husband. Mangin looks at them all, and sighs. He simply can't remember.

His story, or that part of it that can be reconstructed, begins on the drizzly night of February 1, 1918. Prisoners of war were being exchanged by way of neutral countries and that night a train load of wounded hostages pulled into the Brotteaux station at Lyons from Switzerland. It was a painful scene. Moaning wrecks of men who had marched away keen and vigorous were carried from the cars to a long line of waiting ambulances. It must have taken some time to unload them all, and when the stretcher bearers were finished a testy officer, sick of such scenes, made a weary check-up to be certain the wounded had all been embarked, before allowing the train to proceed. As he finished his inspection he stepped down and came upon the figure of a veteran huddled against a pillar of the platform. The man seemed palsied and there was a slight unnatural glint in his eye. He was running a high fever.

He had obviously come from a prison camp. He was wearing Belgian breeches and a French tunic from which the buttons and epaulets had been torn. This ragged uniform was held together by safety pins. A scraggly beard covered his wan emaciated face. He looked like a dog that has been whipped through the streets. He looked like a man who has seen hell.

In cold, matter-of-fact tones the officer questioned him: "Who are you?"

"Je ne sais pas," the man muttered.

"What do you mean 'you don't know?'" barked the officer. "Where do you come from? What is your company?" The man's unchanging answer was that exasperating muttered "Je ne sais pas." The officer finally grabbed the unkempt creature by an arm and took him to the adjutant, where the procedure was repeated all over again. Finally, the prisoner burst into tears, weeping helplessly and without shame, like a woman. The adjutant's exasperation turned to disgust.

Naturally suspicious, he said caustically: "You must have some reason for trying to make yourself look like an idiot, and it's my guess that you are a deserter. I'll have you brought before a court-martial and then we'll find out who you are." The condemnatory remarks only brought another outburst of tears and the forlorn looking spectre from the battlefield finally murmured "I'm hungry." Even this adjutant was touched by such abject, child-like despair. He handed the man he suspected of cowardice a napkin filled with bread and cheese and a bottle of wine.

After being vainly cross-examined by a number of officers the unknown soldier was sent to the mental hospital at Bron. The fever clung to his emaciated body for 15 days. During this time he was examined thoroughly, but no physical injury showed up. His temperature gradually returned to normal. But the man's mind remained blank. Knowing all the intricate ways of shell shock and hysteria, the chief neurologists treated the unknown soldier kindly. When it was thought the man's health had returned, they interviewed again—very friendly. "Come, tell me who you are," he was urged. "Have no fear. I am your friend."

There was sadness in the voice of the unknown soldier as he replied: "I don't know who I am. I don't know how I got into the station." Indistinguishable words and phrases dropped occasionally from his lips. More than any other, he repeated what sounded like "Mangin." The doctors gradually gave up trying to elicit information from the unknown soldier as it only entailed useless suffering, but they deduced that probably his real name was Mangin or that perhaps he came from a village the name of which was similar. At the end of two months, the hospital staff were convinced he was not faking, that he was a real sufferer from amnesia, that curious disorder in the brain that wipes out the memory of one's past life completely.

Mangin definitely became the responsibility of the Government. A new "birth certificate" had to be made out for him, and he was put down as "Mangin, Born February 1, 1918." He had to be treated like a person reborn. His former self was just as dead as if it had been interred. His actual age, like everything else about him, is unknown.

As time went on the mystery of Mangin's identity began to interest more and more people. The unknown soldier was classified as a veteran honorably discharged after the Armistice and he received an appointment to the veteran's association. But, suffering from an incurable malady, he could not be turned adrift unless some one could positively identify him and promise to care for him.

In 1920 he was transferred to the asylum of Rodez where he has remained until the present time. In the village of La Page, near the asylum in Rodes, there lived a family named Mazenc whose son had disappeared in Flanders. The mother and daughter visited the unknown soldier and became hysterical. The mother said if he were not her son he must be his double. Mangin regarded them without emotion. Their pleadings and recollections could not bring back one faint flash from the life that was dead in him.

The officials pointed out to Madame Mazenc that the unknown soldier could not be her son because the description of this son in the military records denoted that the color of his eyes and hair was different from the man she claimed. Perhaps it was a case of self-hynosis on the mother's part; she died broken-hearted shortly thereafter. Her lonesome daughter made a habit of bringing Mangin delicacies every Sunday and has done so for the past 17 years. Nothing can convince her that he is not her brother.

At the end of 1931 the unknown soldier was clearly becoming a problem to the Government in more ways than one. He became the center of an inter-departmental controversy. The Ministry of War decided it was about time Mangin was transferred to the Ministry of Pensions, but the latter demurred on the grounds they could not give a pension to someone who could not be identified by his family. Eventually, after several heated debates, the Ministry of Pensions gave in and took Mangin under its care, but at the same time it decided to open a wide inquiry to try and establish the man's identity. Posters showing his picture were plastered on billboards in all the cities, towns and villages of France and printed in the newspapers.

This appeal stirred up a commotion that made the Ministry of Pensions wish they had remained silent. Altogether, there are approximately 400,000 families in France who have lost a son, husband or brother whose fate will always be a mystery. Few of these families ever went into mourning. They preferred to cling to the hope that he might still be alive.

Thousands of these people could see in the photograph of Mangin, a resemblance to their loved one. If there was some difference in the features, they confidently attributed it to change—the ravages of war and the passing of years.

The week following the circulation of Mangin's picture and story, a total of 5000 letters was received in Rodes. The senders all vowed he was the relative whom they never heard of again. In order to eliminate the obviously deluded claimants, the director of the asylum sent them all a questionnaire. Those who were not exactly sure of the shade of the man's eyes, his height and the color of his hair were promptly eliminated. About 300 of the 5000 hit near the mark in their descriptions. All but 50 of these were eliminated and the 50 were advised to present themselves at the Rodes Asylum at a designated time. Seldom such a strange assortment of people brought together on such a mission. They came from all parts of France, from the cities and towns and from the farm lands. They were peasants, workers and bourgeoisie.

The living unknown soldier now faced an ordeal comparable in emotional strain to anything he had endured on the battlefield. Nervously, he entered the room, facing the barrage of searching eyes that harrassed him. There was an outburst from the seekers. "That is he! That is he!" most of them shouted excitedly. Mangin turned livid and, quivering with fright, leaned against the wall for support. An orderly led him gently out of the room while other attendants strove to calm the turbulent visitors.

Realizing that he had been very tactless, the director told the "relatives" that he would have Mangin interview them family by family so that there would be no further disorder. Mangin was thereupon embraced and beseeched by a seemingly endless stream of would-be kinsmen. He listened, dazed, to such entreaties as "Don't you recognise us? Don't you remember us?" Pictures of infants were shown him and boyhood trophies and souvenirs further confounded him. In fact, if Mangin really had any trace of memory left, he was gravely in danger of losing it. The mothers told him boyhood incidents by the score. The widows turned his face crimson with accounts of past romantic episodes and kissed him fervidly. He regarded all of them with an expression of aloof puzzlement.

As time went on Mangin resigned himself to being perpetually embraced and fussed over. The fervor of the majority of the claimants began to die down as the weeks went by, but others clung tenaciously to the hope that some day the living unknown soldier—their son, their husband—would regain his memory.

TODAY Mangin is enshrined in the hearts of thousands of French families, a sort of demi-god. Those who have abandoned hope that he will ever recognise them still adore him as their own. It is doubtful if any other nation has ever witnessed such a demonstration of faith in a tangible ideal.

Most of the commotion has now subsided, but the authorities quietly continue trying to establish Mangin's true identity. A philanthropist has posted a reward that is a small fortune, to be given to Mangin if he ever can convince himself that he has found his bona fide lost loved ones. It is presumed that he undoubtedly had some.

Among the most convincing claimants is 60-year-old Madame Mazat. A widow, she had an only son. In 1914, he cultivated their little farm in the Province of Gironde. The war took her son away and he never returned. Madame Mazat continued to cultivate the little farm thereafter in broken-hearted solitude, hoping against hope that he would come back. When she saw Mangin for the first time she remained pathetically calm. The bereaved mother embraced him sweetly without saying a word and then the director showed her the thick file of letters from other families. "Yes! Yes!" she said, "I see," and then quietly went back to her farm.

The director was astonished when she returned to the asylum weeks later to tell him she had sold her farm and had taken quarters in Rodes—"just to be near my boy." Living meagerly off the proceeds from the sale of her farm, she visits Mangin regularly and gives him little presents and choice dishes that she has prepared herself. She will continue to believe he is her son to the very end.

The last big uproar over Mangin took place in 1934. Twenty-two of the 50 families who had visited the asylum to interview Mangin banded together and attacked the administration of the asylum demanding that it definitely identify Mangin as belonging to one of them.

This mass protest led to the elimination of all but three of the claim-

PUTTING ALL the FINGERS to WORK

A New Invention to Make Face Beautification More Efficient but Which the Inventor Believes Will Revolutionize Manual Work of All Kinds.

Crocheting.

Using one of the fingers for sketching.

Mrs. Lillian Greneker exhibiting her invention called "fingertips," thimble-like devices on which are imbedded all kinds of small utility tools.

By ROBERT SELL.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

IT ALL started the day Mrs. Lillian Greneker went to the beauty parlor. She asked the operator to hurry, but the girl constantly dropped her files and brushes and an hour later, brooding over a late lunch, the pretty blonde wife of one of the town's better known publicists was struck by the germ of an intriguing idea. The result of months of experimentation and study have just been made public under the name of "Fingertips," a highly ingenious set of devices for saving time.

The beauty shop operator, no matter how flustered, would not be able to drop her instruments with "Fingertips" for, as the name implies, Mrs. Greneker has developed thimble-shaped caps designed to fasten various articles to the 10 fingers. Right now there are two dozen varieties available including rouge, powder puff, lipstick, etching needle, etc., and many more are in prospect. The possibilities, exults Mrs. Greneker, are limitless.

But this may be too sublime a faith in the adaptability of modern man (and woman), for the expert use of "Fingertips" requires the training of fingers grown awkward from long disuse as separate entities. Still Mrs. Greneker, looking into a roseate future, foresees the day when every finger will fairly quiver with eagerness to do its own task and even the most average will attain the digital dexterity of an accomplished violinist or pianist.

Until that day she has confined her "Fingertips" to less intricate tasks. This always skeptical correspondent slipped a brush over his forefinger and industriously scrubbed away at an imaginary spot with a surprising amount of efficiency. Mrs. Greneker admitted that this was somewhat above the average. It usually takes about 10 minutes, she said, to become adjusted to the "Fingertips."

But from then on time marches on with the user in stride.

Husband Claude Greneker who tells the world about the doings of the theatrical brothers Shubert, apparently was a little loathe to exploit his own wife which probably explains transcontinental reports that "Fingertips" will enable the user to do half a dozen tasks at the same time in the fashion of Julius Caesar. No such thing. None but the most extraordinary will be able to perform more than one operation at one time; the benefit is in having all the tools ready for immediate use—at one's fingertips, so to speak.

Mrs. Greneker is an accomplished architect. She and her husband occupy a once orderly apartment 12 stories above Central Park. When this correspondent called the place was in disarray, Mrs. Greneker was in a state of nervous exhaustion and "Fingertips" in various stages of design littered every flat surface. The inventor said she had just signed commercial contracts.

A blue-eyed charming woman, Mrs. Greneker demonstrated herself how milady of the future—she hopes—will make up. On the fingers of one hand she put a small rouge puff, an eyebrow pencil and a lipstick. In the other hand she held a mirror. The hand with the "Fingertips" went up to her face and each finger, in turn, did its job. She called attention to the fact she had saved time by not once removing her hand from her face during the entire cosmetic operation.

"It requires no training at all," she said. "Six-year-old children in school immediately know what to do with the tips. I had the idea they were wonderful for etching because it requires such a delicate touch. I took them to an etcher, a well-known man, and suggested it to him. He immediately said 'why not' and put one on. Then he put another one on. In a few minutes he was using them."

Then she produced a bottle of fingernail polish. She called attention to the stopper which was hollowed out to fit a fingertip. She inserted her forefinger, drew out the stopper, and showed how she would apply the polish to her nails.

The "Fingertips" are made of aluminum, plastics and wood. Mrs. Greneker said she had found wood the best except for mechanical tools, which require greater strength. The finger caps come in 10 sizes and of the 20-odd types about half are brushes and the others largely for cosmetics. Within the thimble-like cap is a ridge to be gripped by the finger nails. Most of the larger tools are made to fit the thumb, most powerful of the fingers. Gadgets requiring delicate touch are constructed to fit the small finger.

"It is easy to understand the talents of our fingers by the gestures we make," said the inventor. "For instance snapping the fingers, pointing, feeling something, lifting the small finger at tea. Dr. S. P. Goodhart, the alienist, told me the finger movements of the fingers are very important to the brain.

"We have five axes of muscular control in our hands and our fingers are so clever, why not give them a chance? We are short-circuiting the line by using our hands for every task. With a pencil we contract all the muscles in the hand and arm. Now when I point, notice the finger is extended while the other four are contracted. When we use one finger we concentrate all our energies on it.

"Since the days of the cave man holding things with our hands so much gave us the impression of grab, grab, grab."

She pondered a moment.

"Yes," she said, "we are actually going to straighten our fingers and we will become ambidextrous, too. We can learn to write in the sand with the left hand, but pick up a stick and it is different."

THE magnum opus of the present line of "Fingertips" is a device which has the telephone company interested. It has a pencil extending straight out from the tip and at right angles to the pencil is an eraser attachment which also can be used for dialing. Mrs. Greneker wrote a few lines with the finger pointing, then clenched the finger, erased a couple of words and dialed a number on the phone.

The second most elaborate gadget is a three-bladed affair for manicurists. This has a peach wood stick, a cuticle shaper and a nail cleaner. Another interesting attachment is a screw driver which fits over the first finger and has a revolving wheel turned by the thumb and middle finger.

Opinions were divided when Mrs. Greneker first revealed her devices to a select audience in the Radio City Music Hall. The belief was expressed that they were of limited utility, although an interesting departure from custom.

"Most people," said one critic, "won't take the trouble to learn how."

But Mrs. Greneker insists anyone can use the current devices without any training and she is firmly convinced they have a future in the American scene.

She diplomatically avoided the unromantic aspects of her invention. After all what is a gallant to do when he bends to kiss a lady's fingertips and finds himself confronted by a hammer, a crocheting needle and a paint brush. Even love might not survive such a shock.

Hollywood's Newest French Accent

PARIS, France.

THE latest of French stars to receive the call of Hollywood, Danielle Darrieux, was "discovered" at the age of 2. But her discoverers were not the professional movie scouts roaming the realms of stage and screen for promising novices. Instead, they were little old Parisian ladies who aired their rheumatism in the park of the Tuileries, and mustached old gentlemen feeding habitually the pigeons in the nearby lake.

Such was the audience which first admired the unusually graceful little girl. Her great blue eyes and curly blond hair only enhanced the charm with which she would execute little dances or take her part in children's games.

Danielle was born on May 1, 1917 in Bordeaux. Papa Darrieux is an occulist by profession, and by descent scion of an old Gironde family. His wife, Danielle, hails from sunny Algiers and has quite a following as teacher of music.

Soon after the Armistice, the family moved to Paris. Despite her success with the indulgent audiences in the Tuileries, little Danielle hardly considered a movie career.

After graduating from junior high, she decided on a commercial course. And to play up to the artistic streak in her, a heritage from the elder Danielle, the girl of 12 took up the cello.

She did well in music, but not so well in figuring out percentages and balancing the books of imaginary firms. The atmosphere of business training left her cold. To compensate for the boring school courses, she flung herself into her musical studies with such ardor that at 14, she was the conservatory's outstanding cellist.

But aside from her beloved instrument, Danielle had become a movie fan and did not fail to miss the outstanding screen hits. And these visits to the Paris cinemas gave her ideas. . . .

One day, she had picked up an evening paper and scanned the want ads (it was a habit of hers), with no serious intentions of seeking a job. Suddenly her eye was caught by an insertion. Delac and Vandal, famous Paris picture producers, item for girl extras, age 15 to 16, for their new production "Le Bal."

Danielle mused. She was 14, of course, but no one would ask for her passport. But then, there would be hundreds, maybe thousands of girls from all over Paris. And in the general scramble, she might not even get to see the employment manager.

Again, she looked at the ad: Vandal . . . Marcel Vandal. Of course, she now recalled, it must be the man whom her Mama had mentioned as an old friend of her family. Perhaps a little influence would help.

The elder Danielle didn't say no; Marcel Vandal ought to be able to spare a few minutes for a personal interview. And so Madame Darrieux went to see the producer.

Ah, the latter exclaimed, what he was looking for, should have a face like an angel's, perhaps like La Garbo's, the Great Garbo.

Madame Darrieux informed him that in all likelihood, his dreams had come true: And Danielle was presented.

She got the job. That is, for the sake of general experience, she started first as one of those chorus girls for whom Vandal had advertised. But after several days, she was playing comic roles. Vandal was convinced that the farcical line was her strongest.

But destiny has plotted differently. In the first place, her work in the film studios had brought her in contact with interesting people, leaders of French literature, music and arts. One of them was Henri Decoin, the prominent playwright. After a brief courtship, they were married. Danielle was then 17.

Shortly afterwards, her main chance arrived. She had been sent by her studio to Berlin. There, Jan Kiepura, world-famous Polish tenor was being starred in "J'aime toutes le Femmes" (I Love All Women) which was being produced by a leading German firm. Danielle had a small role in the picture, did her work and packed up to return home.

Danielle, Pensive.

Danielle, Exultant.

BUT just before she departed, things happened on the "lot." Kiepura, all set to start on his next production, the French version of the "Green Domino," was deprived of his leading lady by illness. The producers were frantic and burned up long distance wires to get a substitute. At that moment, Henri Decoin who had accompanied Danielle to Berlin and who knew his way about the executive offices, suggested that Danielle be tried out. She got the job. And she made a palpable hit on public and critics.

The premiere was hardly over when Danielle was already cast to play opposite Charles Boyer in "Mayerling," the great historical drama depicting the tragedy of Archduke Rudolf and Baroness Maria Vetsera.

Her popularity since "Mayerling" has reached dizzying proportions. But by now, Danielle has learned what part a diva must play in public. No longer could she, as in the early stages of her rise to fame, evade gathering admirers by snatching off her hat and sprinting along the Champs Elysees. To prepare herself properly for her next picture, "Le Mauvais Garcon" where she was to play the woman lawyer, she must know something about the law. As the easiest way, she registered at the University of Paris as a guest student. A few minutes prior to her first lecture, she entered the huge auditorium and calmly took her seat in one of the uppermost rows. But the students had already recognized her. "La Nouvelle. Qui est la Nouvelle?" one murmured to the other. And then they had made her out: "Danielle Darrieux," and the whole admiring crowd of students swarmed off their seats and pressed around the famous movie star demanding a song.

And now comes the call of Hollywood. American film executives have seen "Mayerling" and have signed her up. In a few weeks, the French Greta Garbo will make her first trip to America, not for work, but merely for a discussion of future plans and to get acquainted with the country.

Victor Aloysius Meyers.

Jazz Band Leader into Lieutenant-Governor

SEATTLE, Washington.

THE case of Victor Aloysius Meyers is an ironical comment on American politics. When five years ago, as a jazz band leader running for a joke and publicity, he clowned his way into office as Lieutenant-Governor of the State of Washington, it was passed off as an accident. But last fall he made serious people sit up and think. Using the same tactics—"campaigning from a piano stool"—he not only was re-elected, but led the victorious Democratic ticket, getting several thousand more votes than President Roosevelt.

Of course, shrewd politicians, such as Huey Long, often have resorted to circus tactics to attract attention, but Vic Meyers knew virtually nothing about politics and government when he first ran for office, and professed to care less.

He had led and played the drums for an obscure orchestra around the dance hall circuit for years, with one more prosperous interlude when the band made phonograph records and broadcast over a nation-wide hookup for the American Broadcasting Company. But the broadcasting company went into receivership, and he found himself and his band back in a dance hall. He developed money trouble and was in court repeatedly answering to suits.

As the dancers shuffled by under the colored spots, Vic had discovered he could get laughs by drawling wisecracks. It attracted attention, and one night somebody told him, "You ought to go into politics. With that gift of gab, you'd be a cinch."

That was an idea, and he sounded out a Seattle newspaper on its attitude toward his running for Mayor. That was in the spring of 1932, when a bitter mayoralty campaign centered on a financial crisis in the street car system. The newspaper, seeking to lighten the mud slinging campaign, promised him good publicity, so he filed.

It was a publicity inspiration. Between dance numbers by his orchestra, he made burlesque speeches filled with remarks like this: "A woman asked me today how I stand on the garbage collection question. I told her, 'To the windward, madam, to the windward.'" Prohibition was still in force then, and he paraded with his band through the streets on top a brewery wagon, tooting, "How Dry I Am," and advocated two water systems, one with carbonated water "for those who need a quick one."

His stand on the street car controversy was to advocate hostesses for street cars; he got Laura La Plante, movie actress, to pose as his campaign manager, and placed her on street cars to demonstrate the "hostess" system. At a political dinner where all candidates were invited to speak, he appeared dressed as Ghandi, leading a goat, and sat cross-legged on the floor, munching a carrot.

It was good for laughs and attracted people to the dance hall, but most of the voters took it merely as a gag. When the returns came in, Meyers found he had gotten only 4800 votes to 45,000 for the winner, and was a poor sixth in a field of nine.

The wine of free publicity had gone to his head, and that fall he decided to run for office again on the Democratic ticket. He asked the filing officer, "What have you got for $20?"

"The Lieutenant-Governor's job," was the reply.

"I'll take it," Meyers said. "What does he do?"

Everyone took it as another joke, not as funny as the first time because it wasn't new. He got little publicity. He had no money. But he decided to go through with it. Alone in his own automobile, he stumped up and down the State. He blamed his bad showing in the mayoralty race on the one serious speech he had made then, and didn't repeat the mistake. His "speeches" consisted of demonstrations of his "patented" way of diaper folding, with humor to match. Then he would sit down at the piano and pound out a tune, or go into the homes of voters and play a guitar or whatever instrument the family happened to own. He wore a silk hat, baggy evening clothes, and a pen-wiper mustache over his own clipped mustache. The farmers liked his show, and he concentrated on the rural districts.

At first he appeared to have been snowed under by the city vote, but when the returns from out in the country were all in a week later, astounded politicians found he had gotten the nomination by a small margin. His Republican opponent was a war veteran. The Democratic ticket went over in the Roosevelt landslide.

The real surprise came the first day the orchestra leader went into office and presided over the State Senate. The galleries were prepared for some fun, as he led his own band at the inaugural ball. Meyers had joked about parliamentary law, saying American law was good enough for him. But at nights, before the inauguration, he had pored over Roberts Rules of Order and statute books and got a lot of information from veteran members of the Legislature.

HE TOOK his job seriously and conducted the sessions with dignity and firmness. Irked at the tediousness of the usual procedure, he speeded up the sessions, cutting off long debates on irrelevant matters. He studied politics, economics. He now leans to the left in the predominantly conservative Senate, has developed a bitter opposition to Governor Martin.

But when it came to the task of being renominated and re-elected last fall, Meyers didn't trust routine serious campaigning methods, and returned to his old ways. Not a single speech did he make during the campaign. Hiring a singer for a campaign manager, he sat at the piano and played while the manager sang.

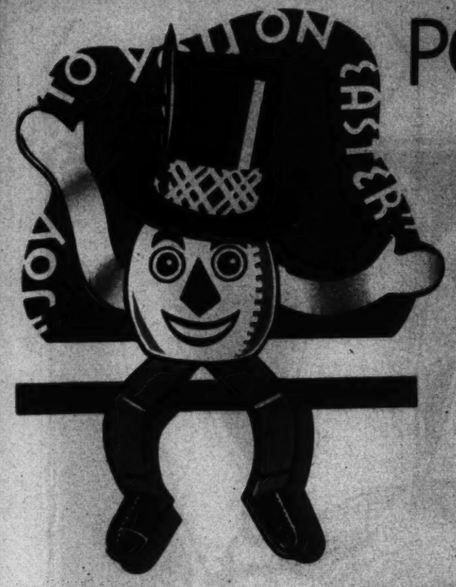
"The people laughed, but they voted for me," he explained later. "People like music better than they like speeches. Most of the speeches don't mean anything. It is making friends with the voters that counts. In the last campaign we saw an awful lot of people. I guess they liked us."

He summed it up with one of his wisecracks: "They laughed when I sat down to the piano, but who's laughing now?"

POST-DISPATCH PASTE-UPS

HUMPTY DUMPTY

By WALTER DAHLGREN



"Hi Ho and Joy to You on Easter!" shouts Humpty Dumpty as he gaily perches on his famous wall. He means it, too—you can see that by looking into those big, honest eyes of his.

DIRECTIONS ● Mount the large piece on thin cardboard—mount remaining pieces, except the features (eyes, eyebrows, nose and mouth) upon heavy Manila paper. Cut out the parts and fold on dotted lines. Paste up the large part first. Paste (stars indicate paste) "A to A" and "B to B" after pasting "C and D" to underside of wall top. Paste the legs to the two starred areas on wall top. This completes the wall and background.

Now for "good ol'" Humpty Dumpty—take one of your Easter eggs (some light color such as pink, light yellow or orange) for his body. Keeping the pointed end of the egg up, paste on the features as shown in the diagram in upper left. Paste an arm on each side as shown (put paste on shoulders.) That's it! To make the hat paste the starred strip to opposite end; fold down top and paste tab to inside of crown. Slip the brim over crown and paste the two tabs to underside of brim. Just sit Humpty in the hole in wall top—put his hat on his head and your Easter Egg Humpty Dumpty is complete.

THE CHARACTERS

DAVY JONES—A jolly old sailor living on sunken old ships on the bottom of the ocean.
JACK TAR—One of the merry members of Davy Jones' crew.
HIPPERTY HOP—A bewildered little frog.
WILLIE WEB-FOOT—A homesick duck.

"Hear ye, my merry men," shouts Davy Jones, striking his sword over the heads of the kneeling Hipperty Hop and Willie Web-Foot. "I, by the seal of my good blade, do hereby make these two strangers members of our jolly crew. For, look, and be merry. There aren't any boring or drooling fellows here, one loses in the water and breathe it like a fish, one never seems to get thirsty. But when it comes to making merry, these old-time sailors do it in such a noisy and furious fashion. They seem their cutlasses wildly over their heads and toss hands, dancing madly through the rigging of the old ships, up and down the top of their lungs all the while. Willie and Hipperty them out of the corners of their eyes. How they wish that they were back in dear old Hickory Hollow! But wishing doesn't do any good. And we see them still kneeling in the midst of this wild scene as WILLIE WEB-FOOT—(Whispering.) Gosh! I hope they don't expect us to dance with them. I know good and well that I couldn't do it.

HIPPERTY HOP—Neither could I. And I hope they don't ask us to sing with them. They might not like our voices.

WILLIE WEB-FOOT—And I don't like the look of their swords. But we belong to their crew now and I wonder what's going to happen next? (Willie doesn't have to wait very long before he finds out. For a moment later a group of the merrymakers sweep down and take Willie and Hipperty away and dress them up like pirates. Then they bring the two new salts before Davy Jones.)

he had taken out a $10,000 accident insurance policy on her, so that the total, written by five companies, amounted to $14,600.

Aside from that he had taken out 12 policies in four companies on his own life, two on his 21-year-old son, Solomon, and two on his other son, Morris. The last two pairs were worth $2646. Homer Croslin, an old friend of Ernest's was amazed to learn that six policies totaling $5400 had been taken out on his life. Even the insurance company detectives hadn't discovered this. Croslin said that only one of the policies had been taken out with his permission and that was 11 years ago. When his friend persuaded him to take out the policy and sign a $7000 note so that it could be turned over to Ernest on assignment, he had done so as a piece of friendship.

Apparently Ernest had known all the ins and outs of insurance. In the cases of hoboes whom he believed to be on their last legs, he had taken out industrial policies for modest amounts—something between $500 and $750—no medical examinations being required for these.

Another interesting angle has developed from investigation of the death of a little waitress named Myrtle Tatman. Myrtle died three months after Ernest had taken out three policies on her life. She had never signed the assignments making Ernest the beneficiary, but the Doehler Funeral Home reports that Ernest paid for her burial with a $168 insurance policy, and Ernest is said to have held her notes for $2842.82. A North Side hotel clerk reports that Ernest asked him to pay premiums on the Tatman policies. He declined, and Ernest ridiculed him, saying he could have made a "nice profit."

Myrtle Tatman is the third deceased person whom Ernest is known to have insured.

At his hearing he was faced with a number of witnesses whose stories seemed to mesh. Three men who said they knew Ernest as Charles Kelly appeared to testify. They gave their names as Jack White, Ralph Rogers and W. G. Lundblade. Each said he had heard Ernest say he was Cyclone Kelly's brother and all reported having seen Crying Hank Burke's death. According to one account "Kelly" is supposed to have paid $861 for the killing. This figure is highly improbable. White, Rogers and Lundblade declare that they watched "Kelly" beat up Crying Hank in an alley, then drive away in a truck. Crying Hank died a minute later.

HAYDON RHEUARK, a barber, quoted Ernest as telling of holding policies on the lives of Cyclone Kelly and Crying Hank Burke and said he had remarked, if either should die "it would put me on my feet."

Arraigned on charges of first degree murder in the death of Crying Hank, Ernest refused to plead guilty, but dropped a suit he had instituted against the Prudential Life Insurance Company, which had written a policy on the life of Myrtle Tatman. Two more charges were filed: Assault with intent to maim Bert Colton and assault with intent to kill James O'Farrol, a floater.

What was the reason that this man was able to persuade his gandy friends to let him take out insurance policies on their lives? One would suppose that they might suspect a malevolent purpose behind his apparent charity. The only reasonable answer is that these poor devils couldn't face a death as friendless as their lives had been. They signed the insurance papers and notes believing they would assure themselves of "decent burial." And this much can be said for their benefactor, at least he lived up to that promise in two cases.

And what of Charles Ernest? Ernest, who lived in a little three-story house (3819 East 9 K C), is well-favored, graying and 45. The house is untidy, the grass uncut, the sign "Rug Cleaners-Weavers" is weather-beaten to the point of illegibility. But they still put out neat rows of prosperous potted ferns each spring.

One guesses that Ernest has been ambitious. . . . There is a metallic hardness in the man. Arraigned on a first degree murder charge he was heard to remark brasenly that he knew how to "beat the rap." He played deaf when pointed questions were put to him.

The trial was concluded the other day in Judge Brown Harris' court. After hearing the State's request for the death penalty, backed up by testimony the substance of which is contained in the above narrative, Judge Harris permitted the jury to consider a second degree murder charge. They found him guilty on the latter, and Ernest was sentenced to serve 25 years, an intermediate punishment. Immediately he stood up and asked to be given "truth serum." He still denied all charges.

His attorneys have a year to die for an appeal in the Missouri Supreme Court. Meanwhile there are three additional charges pending in Ernest's indictment.

In a case like this, where the key witnesses are transients, the actual value of the additional indictment is questionable. Ernest will be eligible for parole immediately, and automatically paroled in less than 15 years, or at the age of 59.

ants. The first and apparently the likeliest is the Monjoin family, whose name is pronounced almost exactly like Mangin. The doctors were struck by this similarity. Even more convincing was the record on Octave Monjoin, the son of this family. Octave Monjoin was wounded and taken prisoner in 1914. He was one of the prisoners scheduled for exchange by way of Switzerland. But on January 31, 1918, the day before Mangin's appearance in Lyons, Octave Monjoin disappeared from the railroad station in Lausanne. That sounds like clinching proof. Even more so is the fact that shrapnel wounds found on Mangin's body could well be those reported in medical records of Monjoin's case. And finally, because all this seemed to fit together like fragments from the same broken tea cup, they took Mangin to the Monjoins' village and without prompting he walked right up to the house where the family lived. That was enough to convince anybody — much more so a family which has long believed the unknown soldier to be its own.

But even this evidence has not been sufficient to shake the faith of two widowed gold star mothers, Madame Masat and Madame Lemay. The former, who broke with her old associations and disrupted her life to be near the veteran she believes to be her boy, will hear of no other claims. And the Widow Lemay, whom Mangin embraced the first time he saw her (though his affection blew away and resolved itself into vacant stares an hour later) takes that as a sure sign that her son still lives in the person of this amnesiac who no longer knows her.

AND so Mangin retains his pseudonym and his mystery. He is still at the hospital in Rodes and it looks as if he will spend his remaining years there, not caring to face the world that gave him such a brutal battering again. Perhaps the neurologists at Rodes have taken a physicianly interest in the case of two old women who regard him as their son, and the younger one who is sure he is her brother. The Monjoins, it seems, have decided it is all for the best. They no longer want to press their claims.

Vitamin Shortage Widespread in Many Diets

You Seldom Know Whether Your Meals Provide Enough Vitamins—Until Injured Health Shows It. But You Can Get A SPECIAL EXTRA SUPPLY of these 4 Vitamins EVERY DAY by Adding Just ONE FOOD to Your Regular Diet

Diet Lacks Vitamin D

CROOKED bones like this can follow a shortage of Vitamin D—the BONE VITAMIN. An abundance of Vitamin D is not only important for mothers during pregnancy and while nursing—but also during the growth of the child itself—to help lay the foundation for strong, straight bones and well-formed teeth. Fleischmann's Yeast furnishes a rich supply of Vitamin D.

THIN, nervous children who are under par physically are often not getting enough Vitamin G in their meals. A generous supply of this important GROWTH VITAMIN is needed to aid in proper development and lay the foundations for a strong, healthy body. Fleischmann's Yeast is a rich, natural food source of Vitamin G. Children from 2 to 12 years can be given 1 to 2 cakes daily.

LESTER STOEFEN
Giant 6-foot California Tennis Star, has the fine physique, abundant energy and stamina that show he is well supplied with these 4 vitamins, A, B, D and G.

DISTENDED bowels (see picture above), a weak stomach and intestines and many obscure nervous troubles can result from an undersupply of Vitamin B—the NERVE VITAMIN.

NORMAL, healthy bowels (see above) and intestines, a good digestion and strong nerves require plenty of Vitamin B. Eat Fleischmann's fresh Yeast regularly to increase your supply each day. It is one of the richest natural food sources of this NERVE VITAMIN.

EVEN though you eat 3 big meals a day, vital parts of your body may be partly starved for lack of enough of one or more of 4 health-building vitamins—A, B, D and G.

An undersupply of these needed vitamins may pull down your health.

FLEISCHMANN'S fresh YEAST added to your diet each day assures you a regular, EXTRA supply—in addition to what your ordinary meals provide.

It is the only natural food that furnishes such a rich supply of all 4 of these important vitamins at once.

Start adding to your vitamin supply with Fleischmann's Yeast today. Just eat 3 cakes daily—a cake about ½ hour before each meal. Eat it plain, or dissolved in a little water. Begin now! Order two or three days' supply at a time from your grocer. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast keeps perfectly in the icebox.

Shortage of Vitamin A

YOU ARE MORE LIKELY TO CATCH COLD EASILY if you don't get enough Vitamin A. A shortage of this important vitamin can also lead to a weakened condition of nose and throat membranes, and lowered general resistance. Eat Fleischmann's Yeast to make sure of getting an extra supply of Vitamin A in addition to what your meals provide.

'LOTUS EATING' at a DOLLAR a DAY

Desmond Holdridge and Mrs. Holdridge.

How Two New Yorkers, Weary of Civilization and Sparse Incomes, Tried a New Life in the Caribbean.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

BACK in 1933, there was a young man and a young woman who were very tired of practically everything in Greater New York except each other. They were tired of the depression and its problems. They were tired of socio-economic controversy. "We both thought," the man recalls, "that these places where myriads of people lived together in a life not seen before—stigmatizing as Fascists all those who said some of the old things were good, and damning as Communists all those who said some of the old things were bad—were perilous places, because an ugly and unnecessary sacrifice to human stupidity was impending." Chiefly they were tired of waiting to get married. "In New York," says the man, "we were able—just—to get enough money to buy more clothes than were functionally necessary, and we did not suffer from malnutrition. But, not possibly did we seem to be able to afford to marry and live together."

So they decided to get away from it all. Nothing so drastic as a potion of poison or a chicken farm in Connecticut appealed to them. They merely wanted to find a combination of beauty, an interesting way of life and more freedom, within the out-of-joint economic system, than they then had. Presently this desire became definite in a vision of blue sea, white beach and palms stretching toward the sky. A tropical island, they finally agreed, was the place for them.

Taking stock of their resources,

The Parima at anchor in Great Harbor, Culebra.

they estimated they could get together enough money to see them through possibly three years if they were careful about expenses. The man got on a freighter and went south to investigate an island that a chance acquaintance had told him a good deal about—an island "forgotten by everyone else and . . . therefore cheap." What he found pleased him, and he cabled the girl to join him. She quit her job, took ship for the Caribbean, and between 3 and 4 o'clock one morning Desmond Holdridge and Elizabeth Hamlin, having just arrived by native sloop at the Island of St. John, got Commissioner Edison out of bed to marry them. The marriage cost 40 cents. After a wedding breakfast of beer and cookies the young man and young woman from New York were ready to begin their experiment in lotus eating at a dollar a day apiece. They called it their "jail break."

Of the happy two years that followed, Holdridge has told engagingly in "Escape to the Tropics," published recently by Harcourt, Brace and Company. The book also contains his personal account of the search he made for the lost aviator, Paul Redfern, before the "escapers" ended their stay in the tropics.

St. John is one of the Virgin Islands which the United States bought from Denmark in 1917. It has a Negro population of about 700, and the arrival of the Holdridges raised the number of white persons on the island to seven. The land was rugged, there was not much cultivation, the people were poor. Boating seemed to be the principal occupation. The newlyweds found they had slipped back into the eighteenth century.

They were better fitted to enjoy life in such surroundings than most New Yorkers. Holdridge since boyhood had been an explorer, seaman and writer; he was accustomed to strange places, dealing with strange and primitive people. His young wife had traveled a good deal, was strong and healthy—as well as pretty—, was courageous and comradely. They rented a small bungalow on a hill at Trunk Bay from an artist who lived on the neighboring island of St. Thomas. Agnes, a stout Negro—"one of the finest, sweetest women I have ever met"—cooked and washed for them and generally took them under her wing. They called their house the Shoebox. Each morning they had a swim in the sea before breakfast. They rode about the island on ponies, hunted lobsters, worked on a rowboat, read a lot of books they had always meant to read, but never had got around to before. Holdridge did some writing; after abandoning a novel, he turned out some magazine articles that sold. Frequently they went to St. Thomas. Most of their supplies came from there, although they got fresh vegetables, fresh meat and fish on St. John.

Their first morning view from the gallery of the bungalow convinced the couple that they had "found something." Says Holdridge: "Rugged green and yellow isles dotted a vast expanse of sea, green on the coral reefs, blue in the sun, and purple in the cloud shadows. Four white-winged sloops were racing up for the entrance to Sir Francis Drake Channel. . . . Palm-studded beaches punctuated the rocky coast line, the luminous water lapped at the foot of the trees and, overhead, high white clouds rolled and billowed in the breath of the cool trade wind whose soft soughing was to become the background against which our life was lived. The sea danced under it and the white manes of the waves, breaking on the reefs off shore, were thrown high toward a kindly sun that lacked the fierceness of the equator and the chill distance of the northern winter. Now and then, fish broke water and it required no great amount of imagination to see, in one of the humble sloops, the ship of El Draque, himself, stout and furious, sailing down the channel to attack San Juan. He did, too, and on that morning, and all the mornings thereafter, it seemed a thing that had happened only yesterday."

On those mornings the temperature was about 75 degrees. It got up to 80 by noon and stayed there a few hours, then slowly fell.

Expenses were light. An itemized list of food supplies for a month totals $29.74. Additional outlays for such things as tobacco, transportation—by sloop and pony—and rum ran the expenditures up to between $60 and $70 for the two of them. Agnes' salary was $8 a month. Rum cost $3.50 a demijohn and cigarettes, 65 cents a carton.

Because of the unreliability and cost of transportation on the native sloops the Holdridges finally bought a boat, a 22-foot sloop which they repaired, re-rigged and renamed the Parima. In it they cruised about those Southern waters, meeting all kinds of people, visiting here and there, and having a tremendous lot of fun.

One day they saw in a newspaper a new report that Redfern, who disappeared in 1927 when on a flight from Brunswick, Georgia, to Rio de Janeiro, was still alive—living in a remote Indian village in Dutch Guiana. After much checking of data and calculating of expenses, Holdridge, experienced in coping with South American jungles, decided to see what he could find out about Redfern's fate. Leaving his wife in Georgetown, he set out by boat, accompanied by a small group of Djuka Negro paddlers, for the wild Indian country of British Guiana. When he turned back weeks later, it was because he was convinced, from evidence he had gathered, that conclusive proof should be sought at a place which he could not reach on his route as he lacked provisions for so long a trip. To reach that place, one should start from the Amazon River in Brazil, instead of from the Guiana coast. From what he learned himself and what he was told by members of other searching expeditions, Holdridge concluded that an airplane fell in the savannahs of Northern Brazil sometime prior to 1931, that the wreck of the plane is within 30 miles of the confluence of the Trombetas and Pandama rivers, that the pilot was alive as late as 1931, and that he is now dead or mentally unbalanced or a prisoner. The manner of Indians whom he questioned about Redfern made him think the flyer was dead.

The Holdridges returned to St. John (the expedition was made early last year), but didn't stay long. Plans were on foot to bring tourists there, and Bet Holdridge said, "It simply isn't home any more." Her husband agreed. So they went back to New York—but convinced that they probably would be "island-minded" the rest of their lives. There seems to be a hint of another "jail break" for them in the sentence: "St. John will be different, but there are still other islands that doze in the eighteenth century."

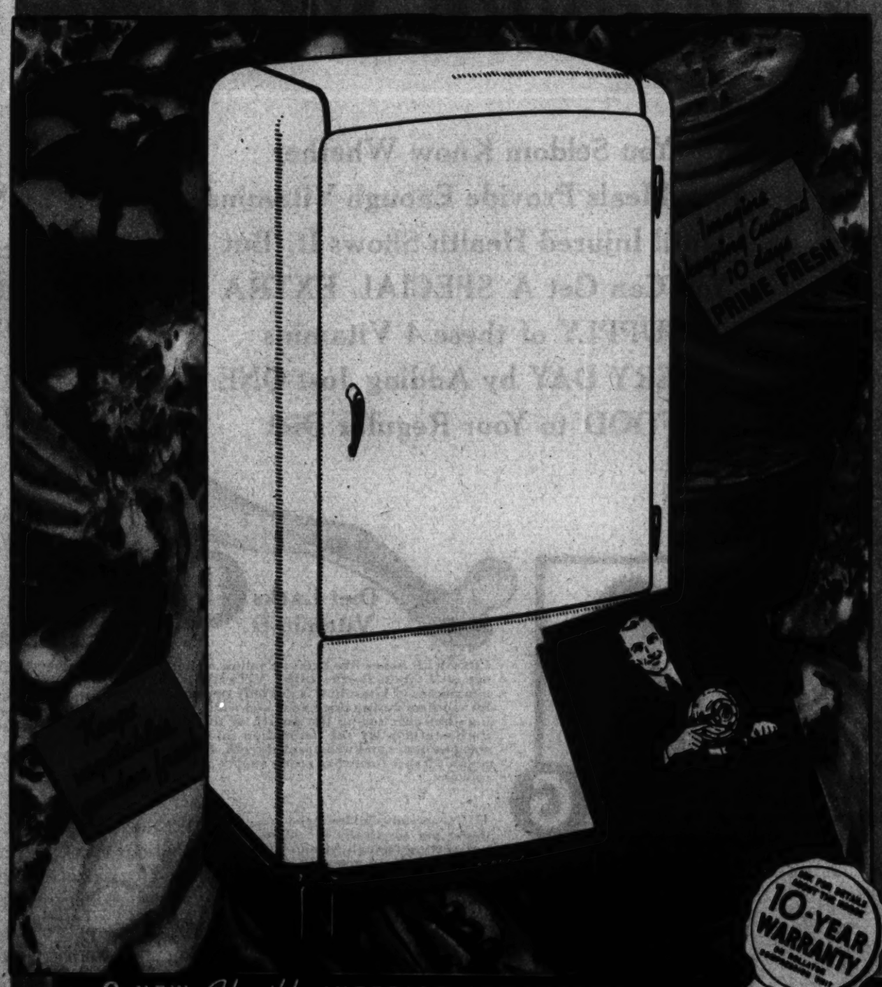
keeps foods Prime Fresh 2 to 5 times longer!



Now for the First Time . . . . All 3 Requirements for Ideal Food Preservation Combined in This One Great Refrigerator

1 LOWER TEMPERATURES Below 40° Instead of Below 50°

2 HIGHER HUMIDITY A Fresh, Moist Interior Atmosphere

3 NO INCREASE IN CURRENT COST Low-Temp Advantages Cost No More than Ordinary Refrigeration

● Now Norge opens a new era—sets new standards—in food preservation and enjoyment with an entirely new kind of refrigerator—the Norge Low-Temp.

This remarkable refrigerator, by combining lower temperatures with higher humidity, actually preserves market-fresh taste longer than many refrigerators preserve foods against downright spoilage. It overcomes the intermingling of odors. When you open the door of the Norge Low-Temp a fresh, clean, sweet odor tells you instantly that the foods in its spacious interior are PRIME FRESH—even after days of storage. In addition to better food preservation, you get much faster freezing of both ice cubes and desserts—and a hitherto unknown smoothness in homemade ice creams.

See the Norge Low-Temp today at your nearest dealer. Ask for the Low-Temp Proof Book that shows the remarkable records set in actual competitive tests. If records of actual performance count with you, the Norge Low-Temp will be your next refrigerator.

MARCH 28, 1937

FIRST FAMILY—Finland's recently elected President, Kaisa Kallio, a farmer and leader in farm politics, poses at home with his family. Mrs. Kallio is holding their granddaughter.

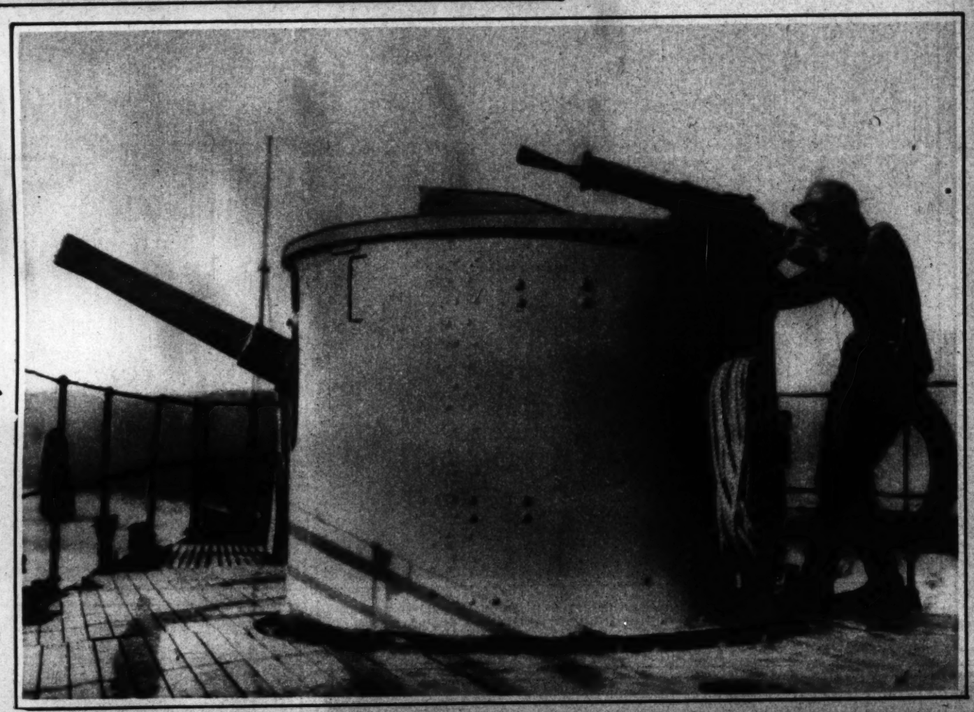
ACTUALISM—John Steuart Curry, commissioned to paint murals for the Department of Justice in Washington, says that the "trend toward actuality" in painting should be "typified in modern murals." He has included a portrait of Mrs. Curry in his canvas "The Bringing of Justice to the West." The painter is a Kansan.
—Associated Press Wirephoto.



PATROLLING THE "SEA COAST OF BOHEMIA"—Although Austria no longer has a sea coast, she is developing a navy on the Danube, just to keep step with her neighbors. Mounted on this little river destroyer's gun turret is the latest thing in chemically cooled machine guns.

THE HAZARDS OF SKIING—Action portrait of an Alpine sportsman by the well-known photographer, Dr. Paul Wolff.

DOG'S DAY—Moscow has taken to the American hot dog with zest. In the Soviets they call 'em "hot sausage," according to Julien Bryan, who made this photograph.

Bluebills pitch down on roaring wings.

WILD BIRDS in ACTION

—Photographs by Lorene Squire.

Night heron, sometimes called the squawk, cruises overhead.

Surprised, the night heron turns and wheels away from the camera.

Like giant butterflies, the willets, among the largest of snipe, fly past in perfect unison. Their shyness, keen sight and swift flight make them a difficult subject.

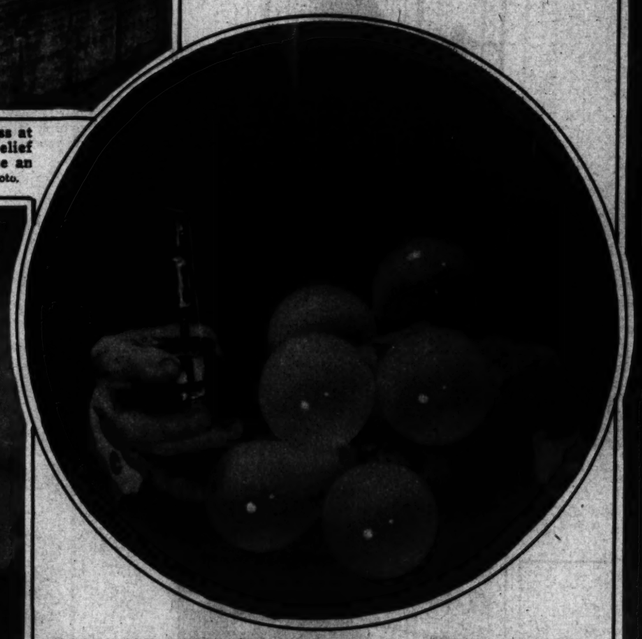
Hutchins's goose, smaller counterpart of the Canada goose, rising from a prairie slough.

A snow goose makes a perfect landing.

Showing its long graceful lines, the pintail, sometimes referred to as the greyhound of the wild duck family, is caught in flight.

IN A QUANDRY—Three of the 19 pups deposited with the Red Cross at Memphis by flood-beset masters haven't been called for. Flood relief officials say they'll have to give them away unless their owners make an appearance. —Associated Press photo.

FOR SPAIN'S DEFENSE—Recruits just graduated from Barcelona schools parade for cheering fellow townsmen before setting out for the front.



MORE LIGHT, LESS "JUICE"—The newly developed "peanut bulb," a mercury arc light of diminutive proportions, is said by the manufacturer in whose laboratories it was perfected to be three times as powerful as "ordinary" incandescent vacuum lamps.

SURREALISM INVADES INTERIOR DECORATION—A wall paper design in the manner of surrealist painting has just been issued by a New York firm. The pattern is a bouquet of teacups, thimbles, bent guitars and sconces all mixed up with flowers, engulfing eyes, hands, clocks and an ice cream cone. —Associated Press photo.

A LUMBER TOWN SETS A STYLE—Easter bonnets cut out of strips of veneer are declared fashionable at Haquian, Wash.

FOR SKYSCRAPER INMATES—On exhibit at the International Flower Show in New York is a window ledge beehive suggested as a panacea for nature-hungry apartment dwellers who like honey for breakfast. —Associated Press photo.

NEIGHBORHOOD ALARM CLOCK—At 6 each morning for the past 13 years Charlie Hughes has shinnied up a 20-foot pole in his back yard to rouse his neighborhood in Baxter, Tenn., with a strident reveille. He thinks bugling has developed his chest.

ONE SIDE OF A CONFERENCE TABLE—The CIO's Textile Workers Organizing Committee meets in New York. Members, from left, (all officers of powerful unions) are Charles Weinstein of Amalgamated Clothing Workers, Thomas Burns of United Rubber Workers, Francis J. When Hollywood Stunt Men Put to Sea

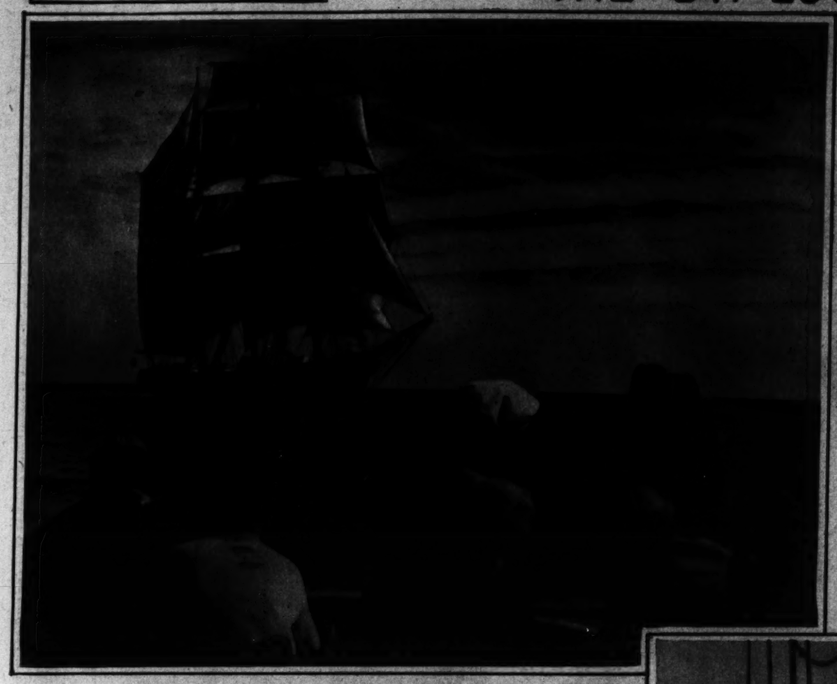
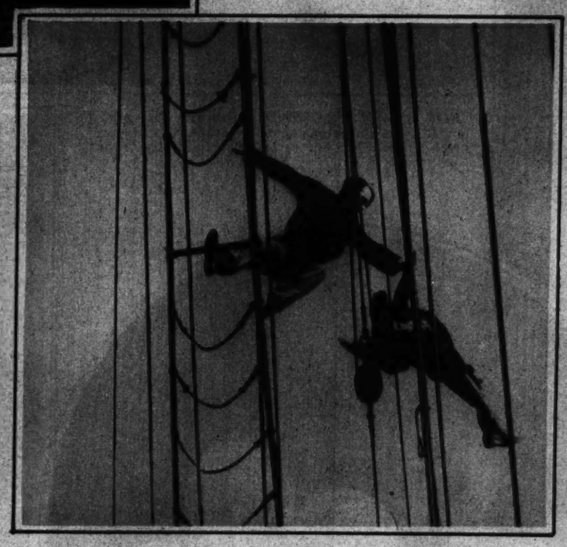
Actors and Camera Crew in the Shooting of Rough-and-Tumble Action During the Filming of a Sea Story

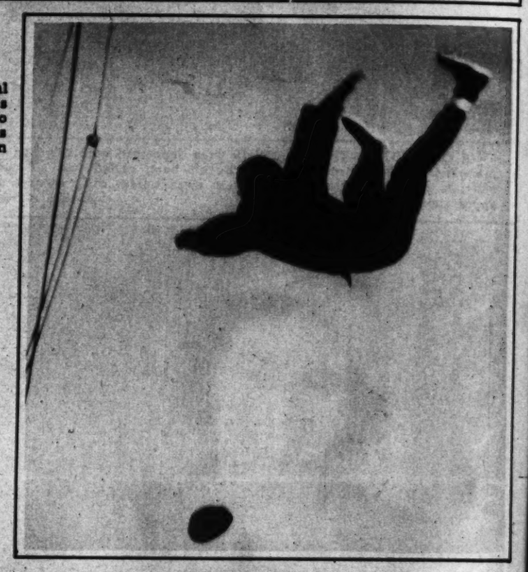


1—Stunt men and camera crew approach the bark Albatross in the channel separating the California coast from Catalina Island.



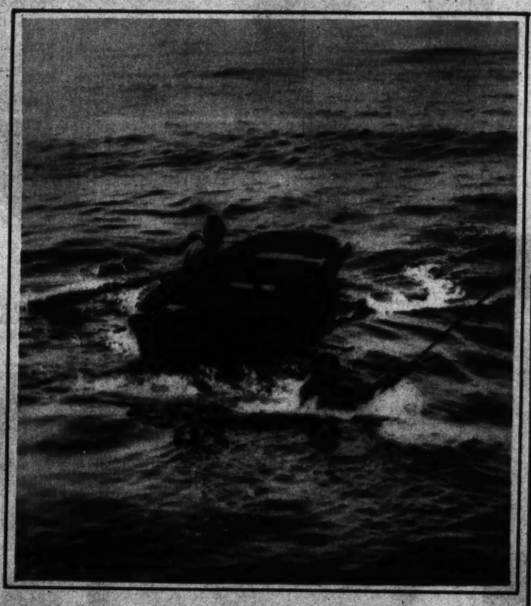
4—ACTION! And Bobby Rose, pushing Harvey Parry into space, nearly falls from the shrouds.

2—A technical director is hauled aloft to observe cameras working from an overhead angle.



5—Parry is half way down in his 50-foot fall.

3—Near the water line, on a platform, another camera is ready to follow the stunt man's fall into the ocean.



7—A line is thrown to Parry when he comes to the surface—he holds on until a rowboat picks him up.

6—Just about to hit, and he has to keep in mind that the secret of taking a fall with minimum injury is to keep body relaxed until impact.

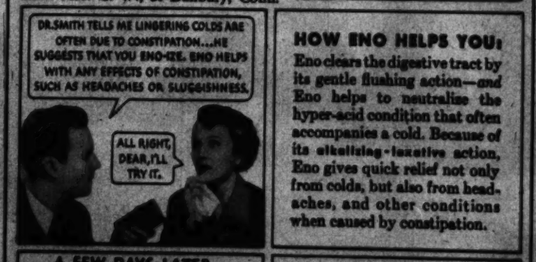
CREOLIN banishes Bathroom Odors

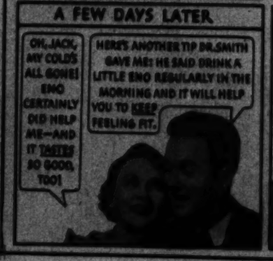
WON'T I EVER GET RID OF THIS COLD?

A TRUE EXPERIENCE based on a letter from Mrs. C. W., of Danbury, Conn.

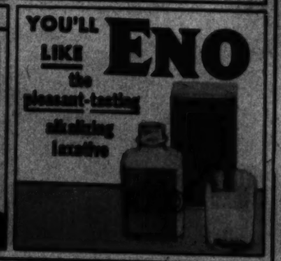


HOW ENO HELPS YOU: Eno clears the digestive tract by its gentle flushing action—and Eno helps to neutralize the hyper-acid condition that often accompanies a cold. Because of its alkalizing-laxative action, Eno gives quick relief not only from colds, but also from headaches, and other conditions when caused by constipation.

A FEW DAYS LATER



YOU'LL LIKE ENO the pleasant-tasting alkalizing laxative



GET BACK IN THE Health Parade

ALL AROUND you, you see people who are healthy—happy. And you wonder why you should be the unlucky one afflicted with habitual constipation.

Perhaps the answer is—lack of exercise! You don't have the time for outdoor sport. Or perhaps your diet is lacking in needed bulk. So the intestinal muscles become weak . . . flabby.

Let Saráka help you overcome habitual constipation. Unlike ordinary laxatives, Saráka* does not make weak intestinal muscles still weaker. Instead it exercises those muscles . . . encourages them to become strong workers for your better health. Most users are reminded of healthy childhood when chronic constipation was something never thought of.

The principal ingredient in Saráka is bassorit—the sap of an East Indian tree in the form of tiny granules. Inside the intestines, the granules absorb water. Gradually they e-x-p-a-n-d into soft, smooth BULK. Which is just what the intestinal muscles need. Automatically they respond to this increase in bulk. They expand—contract—exercise. And exercise makes them stronger.

*Bulk Plus Motility

Saráka also contains a specially prepared cortex frangula—which mildly stimulates the intestinal muscles to healthful activity. So you have Bulk Plus Motility, a combination which is not found in ordinary laxatives.

Ask your doctor about Saráka. We are confident that he will tell you it is so safe that it may be taken every day if necessary. You will find Saráka at your druggist's. Or mail coupon for trial-size tin. It's free.

You will find Saráka pleasant to take—and pleasant after taking. Its action is thorough but not violent. Most people say they have no feeling of having taken a laxative. Ask your druggist for the money-saving "Hospital Size" of Saráka.

"LAUNDERED...BUT THE STAINS REMAINED UNTIL I DISCOVERED OXOL"

DON'T BE FOOLED!

Soap and water alone can never do all these four things until you add Oxol:

1. REMOVE STUBBORN STAINS
2. BLEACH LIKE THE SUN
3. DEODORIZE
4. DISINFECT

YOU CAN'T WASH a stubborn stain out with soap and water. But you can rinse it out . . . easily, gently—if you add a little Oxol!

OXOL CUTS WORK, bleaches like the sun, keeps all your white cottons and linens new-looking! Careful housewives use it to disinfect the dishcloths, rinse the dish towels free from stain and keep them sunny-white, sanitary, safe!

GUARDS HEALTH the whole house over! Add Oxol when you wash dishes, refrigerators, drain-boards, garbage cans, to make them hygienically clean. Use it to take off stains on tile and porcelain. Leave Oxol in the drain pipes, in the toilet, to deodorize and disinfect.

READ THE LABEL—see how many ways Oxol saves time, saves trouble. Ask your grocer for OXOL—the bleach that contains no acids—to take out stains, give you a whiter wash, deodorize . . . and DISINFECT!

STREET SCENE: A policeman waves a white-gloved hand, and the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR again is first to go forward. For miles it has held to its rhythmic pace . . . quietly making the lights . . . threading agilely, courteously, through blockades of cars and trucks. It knows all about traffic, as it knows the open road . . . and will keep its owner's appointments!

The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is city car and suburban car, man's car and woman's car, sprinter and "distance man" all in one. The V-12 engine powers the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR as fast as you need to go, or eases it along at 3 miles an hour when traffic slows up. The car starts in a flash as lights flash, steers with a finger's touch, stops gently in a crisis. And, for all its 122-inch wheelbase, it slips into tightest parking places.

How much gasoline does the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR use? On long runs, 14 to 18 miles per gallon. In the city, the same! This is an astonishing record for a twelve-cylinder car—but less so when you recall: (1) that Lincoln builds the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR engine—and the car; (2) that the one-piece, all-steel body and frame is light in weight; (3) that streamlining, which sets the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR apart as the modern car, contributes also to economy. . . . Many who have driven more expensive cars find greater safety, greater comfort, greater saving in this inexpensive car. Why not arrange for a demonstration?

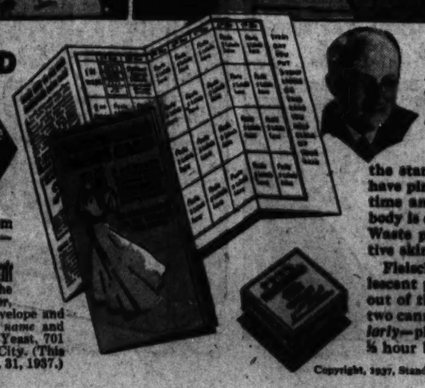
Girls! Boys! You can quickly acquire rhythm ease—learn the newest steps with the EXCITING new dance book written by the world-famous dancing instructor, ARTHUR MURRAY!

This book is NOT FOR SALE. The only way to get a copy is by saving the labels from the Fleischmann Yeast Cakes you eat each day! Just paste these on the FREE Fleischmann Dance Card you get from your grocer. Send it in—and the book is yours.

If there are no Dance Cards at your grocer's, you can still get the book by pasting the 81 labels on a piece of paper, or putting them in an envelope and sending them with your name and address to Fleischmann's Yeast, 701 Washington St., New York City. (This offer holds good until Aug. 31, 1937.)



Dr. R. E. Lee, well-known physician, says: "Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast every day if you want to help clear up Adolescent Pimples."

● In the years between 13 and 25—after the start of adolescence—many girls and boys have pimples. Important glands develop at this time and final growth takes place. The whole body is disturbed. The skin gets extra sensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin—and then pimples break through!

Fleischmann's Yeast helps to get rid of adolescent pimples by clearing these skin irritants out of the blood. Eat 3 cakes every day—one or two cannot do the work. Keep on eating it regularly—plain, or in a little water—one cake about ½ hour before each meal. Start today!
